Anyone who says Meredith's flag football Superbowl isn't serious business, didn't watch the Super Bowl on Wednesday, Sept. 27! The bowl, sponsored by Meredith Recreational Assocation, set second Barefoor against second Heilman in some first-rate flag football. As Bob Holliday and his crew from WRAL looked on, the teams played hard and were cheered on from the sidelines. With a final score of 32 to 18, the seniors of second Barefoot prevailed. Congratulations to both teams for making it to the Meredith Superbowl!!

Mayan Photographs on Display

Inside CCL

Pop Quiz. It's multiple choice. Identify the following: Uxmal.

a. a bad turn at Scrabble
b. a prescription drug for ulcers
c. the site of an ancient Mayan temple in Mexico

If your answer was "c," you are to be congratulated. Very few of us know much about the ancient empires of Central America.

An entertaining was to learn a bit more about Mayan civilization is now on display in the library. Twenty-two photographs taken in Mexico, Belize, Honduras and Guatemala are hanging in a new gallery space located on the main floor. They document many of the most important "Temples of Doom" of the Mayan period.

The photographer of these impressive ruins is none other than Sarah McCulloh Lemmon, Professor Emerita of History at Meredith. Miss Lemmon's study of pre-Columbian art history has taken her on several recent trips to Central and South America. The photographs currently on display were taken in 1988.

Take a break and let your mind wander to a distant, mysterious past. The exhibit runs through Nov. 10.
