POETRY.

HOME.

I cannot forget thee, for every bright scene
Reminds me of joys and hopes that have been;
Not a breeze murmurs soft, not a bird in the grove
Warbles fondly and gaily his wide note of love,
Not a beam lights my path as I joyously roam,
That does not remind me of home—dearest home.

That home! twas so beauteous, so pure and so blest,
And the spirit that ruled it was dearest and best!
There are trees that we planted, that grew with our love,
There are spots which we haunted in each shady grove.
New friends may surround me, new pleasures may come.
But the heart that loves fondly can have but one home.

Ah, now all is joyless and desolate there,
The heart-stone is cold, and the rose-tree is bare
The jasmine has perished, she trained o'er the door,
And the mock-bird she cherished, sings sweetly no more,
And strange are the hearts and the footsteps that roam,
O'er the Eden deserted that once was my Home.

AN ENIGMA.

My complexion's dull and dark,
Yet I had a lovely sire,
I am wingless: yet the lark
Through the skies ascends not higher,
Griefless tears I cause the fair;
And, at my birth, dissolve in air.

ANSWER.

Upon my word 'tis quite a joke,
That six such lines should end in—smoke.

MISCELLANEOUS.

Mixing of Flour and Sugar, Milk and Butter.—The following is taken from the Southern Planter, and the writer says, involves much science in connection with the explanation.

Mr. Editor: A gentleman came to my house to spend a night with me. I put a spoonful of wheat flour and a spoonful of inferior brown sugar in my marble mortar and stirred them well together, and next morning desired his opinion what it was: he examined it and pronounced it sugar of a superior quality. When informed that it was half flour he could scarcely believe it, but wanted to know if a better judge would be deceived in the same way; another spoonful of each was prepared in the same way, and carried twenty odd miles to a man whom he knew to be a very good judge; he also pronounced it very superior sugar. Such is the fact, that one spoonful of flour and one of sugar, thus prepared will taste and look exactly like sugar; and that if the sugar was rather dark colored, it will improve the looks; not only so, it will sweeten as much coffee as two spoonfuls of sugar, in fact it will be two spoonsfuls of sugar.

If a pint of fresh rich milk is made blood-warm and a pint of butter be put in it, and then be stirred well till cold, a quart of butter will be made, that will look as well, and butter as many biscuits as a quart of butter. This butter thus prepared has one defect; it will not keep, but it has also one quality that should balance this defect and when our butter is quite salt by preparing it in this way, it is one half less salt, and much more palatable.

When butter is to be made; if a little old butter be put in the cream, the butter will come from much less churning. When soap is to be made, if a little old soap be put in the ley and grease, the soap will be made by considerable less boiling.

The conversion of molasses and water is made quick into beer by adding a little old beer to it. A little yeast being added to flour makes it all ferment, and if a little of this fermented mass be added to more flour, it makes it ferment also, and then a little yeast by proper management would in time convert all the flour of the earth into its own nature.

Advantages of reading Newspapers with Attention.—We were informed a few days ago, by an industrious farmer of the district, that in consequence of an account he had seen some time since, in our paper, extracted from some other, of a process by which the smut in wheat might be prevented, he had tried the experiment and fully succeeded. Last year his wheat, as was the case with many crops, was greatly diseased, and the smut was so abundant as to be offensive in riding around the field. On the evening previous to sowing, he washed it well, and mixed with every bushel, three pints of lime and a pint of salt, stirring it together, till the grain was coated with the mixture. He says, that his wheat which is now ready for harvesting, has no appearance whatever, of the disease, although the seed was taken from the infected field of last year. The account from which he was induced to make the trial, directed either a mixture of the salt and lime, as he used it, or a washing in the solution of salt, after the first washing, and then a rolling in the lime, on a tight floor, or a cloth spread for the purpose.—The process is by no means difficult, and this trial, added to former evidence, proves that it is well worthy, at least, of further attention.—[Pendleton Mess.]

WHAT IS PURE RELIGION?

It is not making a palpable stand on certain points of church order. It is not the wearing of a certain costume. It is not the assuming of a certain name. But it is the harder task of communing with the heart with deep and secret thought: It is getting down into the chambers of the soul, into which nothing can penetrate save a man's own spirit, and the Author of that spirit: It is the unction of the Holy Ghost, which exerts a salutary and holy discipline over the whole mind, conforming it to Christ's, so that whatever emanates from it accords with the word of God.

The essence of true religion then, consists in the grace of God in the soul, which begets that character of emotion, thorough, substantial, profound, efficacious abiding emotion, which it requires: An emotion which can be accurate and not rigid, fervent and not frantic, rational and not phlegmatic. Pure religion is not to fall into some violent excitement and extreme on the one hand, or to settle into a dull, formal and presumptions state on the other. But to have the mind in a consistent and scriptural balance between the two. It makes a man thoughtful and solemn indeed, but not gloomy or insensible. It makes him chaste in his words, and perhaps sometimes taciturn, but never morose or sullen. It makes him pause and deliberate, but never tardy or wilful. It makes him cautious and sedate, but never repulsive or absent. Finally, it enables its possessor to keep a full and intense fixture of purpose on heaven, and the last great day of retribution. So that he walks softly before God; has his conversation in heaven, from whence he looks for the Lord Jesus: bows submissively to every indication of Divine Providence; serves with honor and faithfulness "his day and generation;" waits patiently "his appointed time" upon earth: though he often mourns, but in all things commits himself to the Lord "who is the strength of his heart, and his portion forever."

Warrantee Deeds for sale at this Office.

TO THE PUBLIC.

DOCT. J. M. HAPPOLDT

HAS established an EYE INFIRMARY and a SURGICAL WARD at his residence, for the accommodation of all persons who may commit themselves to his care. Believing that an Establishment of this kind has long since been called for, from the nature of Surgical Operations, the subsequent attention requisite in order to render them successful and the appeals to mitigate the pangs of suffering humanity; and aware of the impracticability of imparting that necessary aid, (and in most cases daily attention) imperiously demanded by those who are the subjects of surgical diseases or accidental injury, where the patients are not immediately under the eye of the Surgeon, he has been at no little expense in making preparations for the reception of those who may commit their cases to his direction. It is needless to dwell on the importance of an Establishment of this kind to the subjects of Surgery and the advantages which such may derive from it. Suffice it to say, that the daily attention of the practitioner is not only necessary, but of incalculable benefit to the patient as regards his ease and comfort, as well as the final result of the operation or case under treatment. Daily experience proves the lamentable fact that many suffer for the want of that attention which their situation demands, but which is denied them, by the disadvantageous circumstances under which a country Practitioner labors and which (unavoidably, however disagreeble) prevent him from imparting. This aid, so loudly called for, can be expected only from an Institution, where it is the province of a practitioner to give daily attendance. From the consideration that a located Surgical Department would be desirable, Dr. Heppoldt is induced to offer his services to the public and solicits such cases as may require close or daily treatment (wherever practicable) to be brought to his establishment, where every attention will be rendered that will in anywise tend to the comfort or benefit of the patient. His FEES will be reasonable, and much less than for the same services rendered at the dwelling of the patient.

From the advantages of Surgical Information derived from a course of studies at the Medical College of South-Carolina and at the University of Pennsylvania, together with the experience of twelve years' practice, and the general success hitherto attendant on his operations, he hopes to merit a liberal patronage.

The counsel and assistance of a professional gentleman, of high and respectable qualifications, will be obtained in cases which may require them, without any additional charge.

Dr. H. may be found at his Establishment, 8 miles below Charlotte, on the Providence road, where he may be consulted. While he proposes to devote much of his time to Surgery, the other branches of his profession shall receive due attention.

Providence Settlement, Mecklenburg c'ty. N. C. May 14, 1834. 89 3m

N. B. One or two Students, of good attainments and moral character, will be received, who can enjoy the advantages of dissection, with operations on the dead subject and post mortem examination and a well selected Library.

Carriage Making Business

IN CHARLOTTE.

NATHAN BROWN returns his sincere thanks to his friends and the public at large, for the liberal encouragement he has received in his line of business, and begs leave to inform them that he still continues to carry it on at his New Establishment, one door northwest of the Jail. He has on hand and will continue to make to order, on short notice, or sell, on accommodating terms such vehicles as are usually manufactured in this part of the country, all of which will be disposed of at reasonable prices, for cash or good notes on demand. He is now procuring a supply of the best timber the country affords and his materials are selected with care, and as he has good workmen in his employ, his work will be executed with neatness, durability and despatch.

Orders from a distance for work of any description in his line, will be promptly attended to and thankfully received.

REPAIRS done on the shortest notice and on the most reasonable terms.
