My Daughter.

A precious gift there came to me,
A tiny, fragile thing—
With piping note of melody,
Like bird unfledged of wing.

I folded it within my breast,
And blessing asked of Him—
Nor lands, nor gold, nor jewels rare,
But purity within.

The years fled by of weary pace,
Too full of anxious care;
No flowers blossomed on my path,
Nor hope, nor joy was there.

The earth within her mantle white,
Lay wrapped in frost and haze—
I woke—the tiny bird had flown,
A maiden met my gaze.

A maiden fair of merry face,
And laugh of joyous glee—
A heart whose every pulse beat pure,
A step both proud and free.

My prayer had been a prophecy,
No treasures hath she own;
I ask again—O, God, not those,
But jewels for the crown.

A Sterling Old Poem.

Who shall judge a man from his manner,
Who shall know him by his dress?
Paupers may be fit for Princes,
Princes fit for nothing else.
Crumpled shirt and dirty jacket
May beclothe the golden ore
Of the deepest thoughts and feelings—
Satin vest can do no more.

There are streams of crystal nectar
Ever flowing out of stone;
There are purple beds and golden,
Hidden, crushed and overthrown:
God, who counts by souls, not dresses;
Loves and prospers you and me,
While He values thrones the highest
But as pebbles in the sea.

Man, upraised above his fellows,
Oft forgets his fellows then:
Masters—rulers—lords, remember
That your meanest kinds are men!
Men of labor, men of feeling,
Men of thoughts, and men of fame,
Claiming equal rights to sunshine
In a man's ennobling name.

There are foam-embroidered oceans,
There are little weed clad rills;
There are feeble inch-high saplings,
There are cedars on the hills.
God, who counts by souls, not stations,
Loves and prospers you and me;
For to Him all vain distinctions
Are as pebbles in the sea.

Toiling hands alone are builders
Of the nation's wealth and fame;
Titled laziness is pensioned,
Fed and fattened on the same;
By the sweat of others' foreheads,
Living only to rejoice,
While the poor man's outraged freedom
Vainly lifts its feeble voice.

Truth and justice are eternal,
Born with loveliness and light;
Secret wrongs shall never prosper
While there is a sunny light;
God, whose world-wide voice is singing
Boundless love to you and me
Links oppression with its titles,
But as pebbles in the sea.

GRANDMOTHER'S STORY.

"Tell us a story, grandmother!" The speaker was one of my four rosy cheeked cousins, we crowded around the fire-place one Thanksgiving day.

"What kind of a story shall it be, my dear?" said grandma, as she smoothed the glossy heads at her knee.

"Oh, any kind, it don't matter what; we're so tired of playing," said Joe, speaking for us all.

"Then I will tell you a story of my young days," said grandma softly, and confident that it would be interesting, we nestled up in the corner. I often think of that story now, for grandma is in heaven with the angels, but the memory of her kind acts and words will always have a fresh place in my mind.

"Well, dearies," she began, "when I was a small child, at the time my story commences, mother and I lived in the garret of a great weather beaten house in Boston. It was a very disagreeable place to live in, for nothing could be seen but dirty stone walls and the roofs of houses. The rooms were dark and frightful passages led to other tenements equally dismal. The eaves of adjoining buildings met with ours and left dark, dirty alleys between. The buildings were five stories high. Yes, dears, it was a hard struggle for bread, and during those trying days of poverty, the money mother earned by sewing hardly paid for the bread we ate, after paying the rent; but God was merciful to us, and in such a way as I shall tell. It was very hard to get sewing to do just then, for there were great many dressmakers, besides, she was a stranger in the city whom fortune had cast on rather a hard road. One day chance put her in a way to do some sewing for a rich lady who lived in the aristocratic part of the town. The material, gray silk, was to be made into a street sacque which should be very heavily embroidered.

"This cost mother many days of hard labor, and when she done she very carefully folded it up and bade me go straight to the house of the lady and deliver the parcel. So, bundled in my little shawl and hood, I hugged the bundle in my arms and took my way through the snowy streets.

"It was a crisp cold morning and puffs of steam rose from all the breweries and factories, as if the buildings were ready to burst with the vapor. When I arrived at the lady's house, and saw the name 'Roberts' on the silver door plate in great letters; saw the parlors with their golden chandeliers and velvet carpets through the windows, and the great table with its snowy cake and purple wine, waiting for the members of the household to partake of its goodly viands I felt myself too savy—not good enough to place my ill clad feet on the matting made for the rich. Just at that moment the tinkling of music in the room above ceased and a lady, with a soft worsted shawl thrown over her shoulders, looked out of a window. The sweet smile on her face changed to one of scorn as she said, 'It aint them—only that beggar woman's child with my dress.' I was so faint with cold and hunger and so startled at her rough tones that I could have sank through the floor had it not been for a servant who harshly relieved me of my burden with the remark to clear the path for my betters."

"What did you do then?" said Joe.

"I don't know what made me do it, but I sat right down on those marble steps and cried with all my might and main.

"Presently the door opened and a little boy about my age tripped out of the hall. His name was Henry Roberts, and he was very kind to me, I thought, for he lifted me out of the snow and asked what the matter was.

"I replied that I had no breakfast and was nearly starved.

"The kind-hearted little fellow then stuffed my pockets full of holiday goodies placed me on his sled, drew me out of the gate and and then bade me good-bye. Before I was out of sight of the house like Henry's purse passed by me. He was very finely dressed, while in his hand he twirled a gold-headed cane. I looked at him again and again for he kept ahead of me all the way up the street. I was looking at him as he turned the corner, and my thoughts had just returned to mother. I was wishing I might greet her with a merry Thanksgiving dinner, when I saw a pocket book fall from him. I made haste and picked it up, half resolved to keep it, and thus enable my dream of good things to be realized; but children, you know Granny Roberts wouldn't steal, and so you can easily think of the good spirit which whispered in my heart, 'Do unto others as ye would they should do unto you.'

"I returned it to the rightful owner."

"What did he say," cried Joe breathlessly.

"God bless you, my child, that's what he said," answered grandmother, with a mysterious light shining out of her sunken eyes. "Yes, children, God did bless me, too. He sent an angel of mercy to us in a human messenger at His. The gentleman having several hundred dollars in his purse was glad enough to receive it safe and sound. He asked me my name and whereabouts, and on hearing of our distress and actual want, he brought a good supply of eatables (among which was a turkey,) and went with me to see my mother. He secured a little house in a pleasant part of the city for us, and mother got all of the family sewing to do."

"And what became of that little boy?" said Nellie, nestling up to to grandma, who seemed nearer to her than ever.

"Why, he lived and got married," said Tippy, who had heard the story before; "and he married grandma, and he is our dear Grandpa Roberts, right over there in the corner," jumping up and giving him a kiss; "and Grandma Roberts laughed and tossed us on his knee. He is alive yet, the dear old soul, hearty and hale as ever. He often tells us of the days when he was young and loved grandma."

Humor in the Family.

Good humor is rightly reckoned a most valuable aid to happy home life. An equally good and useful faculty is a sense of humor, or the capacity to have a little fun along with the humdrum cares and work of life. We all know how it brightens up things generally to have a lively, witty companion who sees the ridiculous points of things and can turn an annoyance into an occasion of laughter. It is a great deal better to laugh over some domestic mishaps than to cry and scold over them. Many homes and lives are dull because they are allowed to become too deeply impressed with a sense of the cares and responsibilities of life to recognize its bright, and especially its mirthful side. Into such a household, good but dull, the advent of a witty, humorous friend is like sunshine on a cloudy day. While it is always oppressive to hear persons constantly striving to say witty or funny things, it is comfortable to see what a brightener a little fun is—to make an effort to have some at home. It is well to turn off an impertinent question sometimes, and to regard it from a humorous point of view instead of becoming irritated about it. "Wife, what is the reason I can never find a clean shirt?" exclaimed a good but rather impatient husband, after rummaging through all the wrong drawers. His wife looked at him steadily for a moment, half inclined to be provoked then with a comical look she said: "I never guess conundrums; I give it up." Then he laughed; and they both laughed, and she went and got his shirt and he felt ashamed of himself, and kissed her, and then she felt happy; so, what might have been an occasion for hard words and unkind feelings became just the contrary, all through the little vein of humor that cropped out to the surface. Some children have a peculiar faculty for giving a humorous turn to things when they are reproved. It does just as well oftentimes to laugh things off as to scold them off. Laughter is better than tears. Let us have a little more of it at home.

The little girl looks forward to the time when she can "do up" her hair like a lady as a period of true happiness.

A woman may be the friend of the man she has not loved, but she will always be the enemy of the man she has loved.

WORM SPECIFIC

OR

VERMIFUGE.

SYMPTOMS OF WORMS.

THE countenance is pale and leaden-colored, with occasional flushes, or a circumscribed spot on one or both cheeks; the eyes become dull; the pupils dilate; an azure semicircle runs along the lower eye-lid; the nose is irritated, swells, and sometimes bleeds; a swelling of the upper lip; occasional headache, with humming or throbbing of the ears; an unusual secretion of saliva; slimy or furred tongue; breath very foul, particularly in the morning; appetite variable, sometimes voracious, with a gnawing sensation of the stomach, at others, entirely gone; fleeting pains in the stomach; occasional nausea and vomiting; violent pains throughout the abdomen; bowels irregular, at times costive; stools slimy; not unfrequently tinged with blood; belly swollen and hard; urine turbid; respiration occasionally difficult, and accompanied by hiccough; cough sometimes dry and convulsive; uneasy and disturbed sleep, with grinding of the teeth; temper variable, but generally irritable, &c.

Whenever the above symptoms are found to exist,

DR. C. McLANE'S VERMIFUGE

will certainly effect a cure.

IT DOES NOT CONTAIN MERCURY

in any form; it is an innocent preparation, not capable of doing the slightest injury to the most tender infant.

The genuine Dr. McLane's Vermifuge bears the signatures of C. McLane and Fleming Bros. on the wrapper.

DR. C. McLANE'S

LIVER PILLS

are not recommended as a remedy "for all the ills that flesh is heir to," but in affections of the liver, and in all Bilious Complaints, Dyspepsia and Sick Headache, or diseases of that character, they stand without a rival.

LIVER PILLS,

FOR THE CURE OF

Hepatitis, or Liver Complaint,

DYSPEPSIA AND SICK HEADACHE.

Symptoms of a Diseased Liver.

PAIN in the right side, under the edge of the ribs, increases on pressure; sometimes the pain is in the left side; the patient is rarely able to lie on the left side; sometimes the pain is felt under the shoulder blade, and it frequently extends to the top of the shoulder, and is sometimes mistaken for rheumatism in the arm. The stomach is affected with loss of appetite and sickness; the bowels in general are costive, sometimes alternative with lax; the head is troubled with pain, accompanied with a dull, heavy sensation in the back part. There is generally a considerable loss of memory, accompanied with a painful sensation of having left undone something which ought to have been done. A slight, dry cough is sometimes an attendant. The patient complains of weariness and debility; he is easily startled, his feet are cold or burning, and he complains of a prickly sensation of the skin; his spirits are low; and although he is satisfied that exercise would be beneficial to him, yet he can scarcely summon up fortitude enough to try it. In fact, he distrusts every remedy. Several of the above symptoms attend the disease, but cases have occurred where few of them existed, yet examination of the body, after death, has shown the LIVER to have been extensively deranged.

AGUE AND FEVER.

Dr. C. McLane's Liver Pills, in cases of Ague and Fever, when taken with Quinine, are productive of the most happy results. No better cathartic can be used, preparatory to, or after taking Quinine. We would advise all who are afflicted with this disease to give them a FAIR TRIAL.

For all bilious derangements, and as a simple purgative, they are unequaled.

The Invention of the Age.

It does not destroy the draft. It does not interfere with cleaning the tubes. It will not choke up, and requires no cleaning.

It requires no direct dampers to be opened when raising steam (dampers being objectionable, as they may be left open and allow sparks to escape.)

It requires no water to extinguish sparks, which, by condensation, destroys the draft. Besides, when water is used, if neglected, the efficiency is destroyed by evaporation of the water, and the boiler is kept in a filthy condition.

It is simple and durable and can be relied upon. It can be attached to any boiler. No planter should be without one of them. Insurance companies will insure gins and barns where the Talbott Engines and Spark Arresters are used at same rate as charged for water or horse power.
