Reorganizes Farm To Use Modern Machinery

One tractor, two mules and thee men now do the same work formerly accomplished by eight mules with eight men on a Camden county farm belonging to G. G. Markham of Elizabeth City.

"Mr. Markham has a 400-acre farm typical of those usually found in the northwestern section of the State," says A. T. Holman, agricultural engineer at State College. "A few years ago he grew cotton and corn with some livestock as did the other men about him. Within the last few years, however, the farm has been completely changed. Large areas of cleared and cut-over lands have been developed into pasture, which Mr. Markham says gives the biggest return of any part of the farm. The pasture land is ditched, fenced and kept free of coarse growth. The planting system has been changed from cotton to hay, soybeans, corn, and sunflowers.

Mr. Markham says that six mules have been replaced by one general purpose tractor. Now this one tractor, two mules and three men do the same work formerly done by eight men and eight mules. The tractor pulls a spring tooth harrow, disc harrow, planter, cultivator, mower and reaper.

While the new plan has been followed long enough to determine its advantages over the old, Mr. Markham says it cannot be expressed in dollars and cents. He has spent no money for new equipment in other words, not yet, at least. Now he finds he can grow hay, oats, corn, and sunflowers to be easily marketed. Many of the products are turned into cash through the livestock route. Cattle and sheep cost very little to feed as they are carried on pasture throughout the summer and use much of the roughage and other by-products in winter. The soil is growing more fertile instead of poorer and Mr. Markham appears to be satisfied with his reorganization, says Mr. Holman.

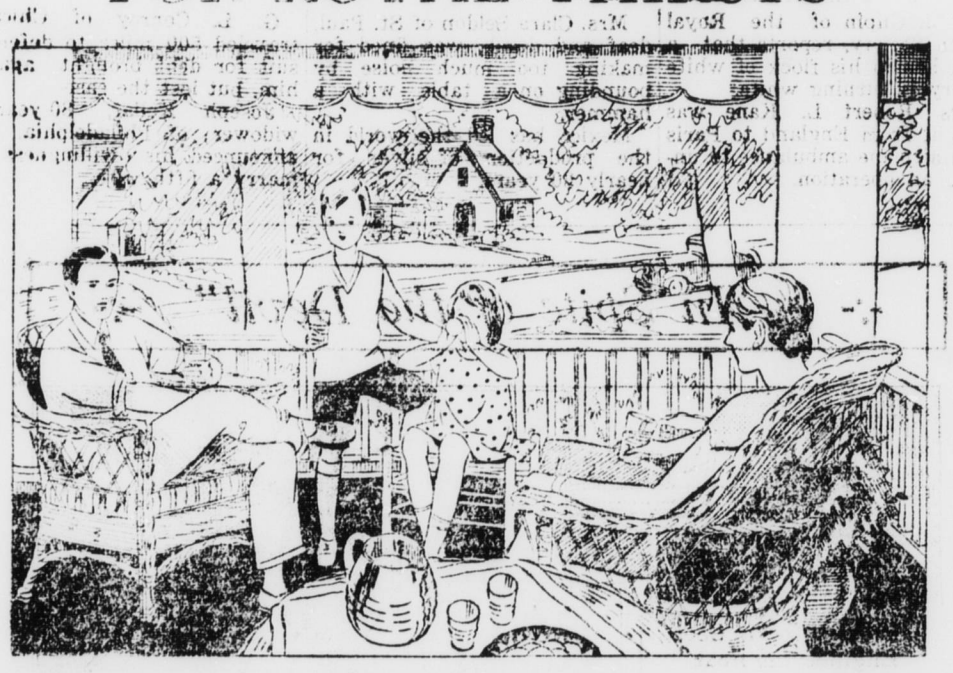
FOR ROYAL THIRSTS



SUMMERTIME is the season when our thirsts assume royal proportions, and a succession of drinks goes far to make a successful day. Luckily, quenching this thirst is good for us. The liquid which we imbibe helps cool us off, and, if it has fruit juices in it, they add vitamins and minerals to our system, and the sugar which it contains will give energy.

For Children and Adults

For the children—and for grown-ups, too—it is often desirable to combine milk with fruit juices. For this purpose evaporated milk is especially desirable as it will not curdle in the combination.

Carbonated water or ginger ale, if of high grade and carefully made, may be drunk by children and adults alike, and adds a pleasant flip to the beverages. During the summer all syrup from canned fruit is well as juice from the fresh should be saved to aid in the making of cooling drinks. And when canned fruit is bought for the sake of the syrup, the solid fruit itself can be used in ice-cream, gelatin desserts and puddings.

Here are some recipes for delicious drinks which have all been tested by a dietitian. The first six are particularly well adapted for children.

Chocolate Cinnamon Malted Milk: Shake together in a shaker or large glass jar six tablespoons malted milk, four tablespoons canned chocolate syrup, one teaspoon cinnamon, one-half cup water, two and one-half cups milk and some cracked ice. This makes four tall glasses.

Pineapple Milk Shake: Shake together in a jar or shaker one-half cup canned chocolate syrup, one cup evaporated milk (or fresh cream), one cup pineapple syrup, one cup water and cracked ice. This fills four tall glasses.

Pineapple Milk Shake: Shake together in a jar or shaker one-half cup canned chocolate syrup, one cup evaporated milk (or fresh cream), one cup pineapple syrup, one cup water and cracked ice. This fills four large glasses.

Maple Ginger Cream: Shake together one-third cup maple syrup, one and one-fourth cups evaporated milk, one pint of ginger ale, and cracked ice. Pour into four tall glasses and sprinkle a little nutmeg over the top if you like it.

Colorful Cordials

Prunade: Boil one-third cup sugar and two cups water together for five minutes; cool. Add juice of eight limes, one cup pineapple syrup, one cup prune juice and three cups cold water. Serve very cold in punch glasses. These amounts will make 12 to 15 punch glasses.

Currant and Raspberry Shrub: Boil one-third cup currant jelly, two cups water and one-third cup sugar until the jelly is melted. Cool and add juice of two lemons and contents of a number two can of raspberries, pressed through a sieve. Chill, add two cups carbonated water, and serve at once. This makes twelve punch glasses.

Apricot Punch: Press contents of a number 2 can of apricots through a sieve. Boil two-thirds cup sugar and two cups water five minutes, cool and add to apricot purée. Add juice of six limes and four cups plain or charged water and serve very cold in punch glasses. This will make about sixteen punch glasses.

Effervescent Beverages

Four Fruit Fizz: Have the following ingredients ice cold: mix together and serve over crushed ice: syrup from a number 3 can of fresh pineapple, [illegible] lemonade syrup, one-half orange juice, one-fourth cup lemon juice, two bottles charged water. This makes about sixteen punch glasses.

Cherry Mojave: Boil one-fourth cup sugar and one cup water, cool and add one-fourth cup Maraschino cherry juice and the syrup from a number 2 can of sour pitted cherries, a ten-ounce can of grapefruit juice, and one cup of water. Chill. Add one bottle of White Rock and serve ice cold.

Havana Special: Mix contents of a ten-ounce can of grapefruit juice and one cup pineapple syrup, and add one-fourth cup sugar which has been boiled with one cup water and cooled. Chill, add one bottle carbonated water, and serve ice cold in punch glasses. A sprig of mint may be served in each glass if desired. This recipe makes about ten punch glasses.

Sleeveless

THE smart shops are full of them — adorable gowns with no sleeves at all. Once in a while Dame Fashion does relent and give the Fair Sex something that is comfortable as well as smart. How good these sleeveless gowns will feel when the thermometer is creeping upward to ninety in the shade! Nevertheless, many women are hesitating to wear them. Last year's sun-tan left the arms all fuzzy, and the fastidious woman hesitates to expose them to sight. The New York debutantes have solved the problem for themselves, and others are fast following suit. They simply zip their arms free of hair and then enjoy the comfort of sleeveless frocks throughout the summer months.
