More Than 500 Go On Farm Tour

In less than two hours from then the group was sitting down to a tempting cold plate served by the Crabtree P. T. A., and within a a few hours, the same group, tired, but happy, drank punch to their heart's content at the home of Mr. and Mrs. W. D. Ketner.

A special loud speaking system was used at every stop, and some who have been on tours in every section of the state said it was the first time they had ever been on a tour that every word could be heard. The system was operated under the direction of assistant county agent, W. A. Corpening, who did most of the explaining of the projects.

Business men as well as farmers, could hardly believe their eyes and ears when they saw and heard of the success of Mr. Cathey's bean and tobacco crops.

And before the group finished discussing the Cathey projects, the tour had stopped at the farm of Grover Abel, in Beaverdam township, and and there saw what triple phosphate will do to bring out a pasture and increase clover growth.

The calves being fattened for the show in Asheville were the center of attention while the hydraulic ram was being put into operation for a demonstration on the Abel farm.

The group left the Abel farm for the next stop at Guy Chambers in Iron Duff, and there Mr. Chambers gave a demonstration of spreading lime, and showed results in a pasture limed and unlimed. The group was also shown a pure bred Hereford cow and calf, owned by Frank Davis, at the Chambers farm.

The program of the day took place at the Crabtree school after lunch, with Albert McCracken, president of the Haywood County Mutual Soil Conservation and Land Use Association, presiding.

The principle address was made by Vance E. Swift, director of the farm security administration in this state. He was followed by Miss Anna Carolyn Rowe, district supervisor of home demonstration work.

Immediately after the program, the crowd gathered on the campus for the mare and colt show.

There were 57 entries in the mare-colt show, and prizes were awarded as follows:

The tour went to Fines Creek, and at the home of Mr. and Mrs. D. Reeves Noland, saw a farm electrical plant and a modern kitchen. (For details of this kitchen, read Hilda Way Gwyn's "Here and There.")

The erosion prevention work on the farm of T. N. Leatherwood, in White Oak, was explained by R. W. Graeber, forester of State College. A hillside had been planted in pines, and had controlled the washing away of the hill.

The last stop of the tour was made at the Ketner farm on Jonathan's Creek. Here general home improvement was noted and outbuildings painted with old motor oil colored with mortar coloring was explained.

By actual count, there were 103 car and trucks in the motorcade at one time during the day. The largest gathering was at the Crabtree school.

rested, Head had a .32 Spanish type pistol on him and 21 shells in his pocket, according to Greeneville officer.

Young Sloan told Greeneville officers, while in sheriff's office there, that he had no resentment against the two men, "they would never have attempted it if they hadn't been under the influence of liquor."

For several hours before Mr. Sloan arrived in Greeneville, Bobby was the center of groups who asked about his hair-raising experiences.

It was learned from a reliable source here, that the federal investigators in Greeneville, worked for a number of hours trying to get a confession from the two boys, who maintained that their minds went blank about dark Saturday and they did not remember anything until they found themselves in the Greeneville jail Sunday morning. Later, however, the boys made a complete confession of the crime as charged.

Carl Head is the son of Henry Head, who has lived on the Sloan estate for 25 years, where Carl was born.
