Sanitary Handling Lessens Mily Loss

North Carolina dairymen lose thousands of dollars each summer as a result of not handling their milk properly.

John A. Arey, extension dairyman at State College, says that because milk is so easily contaminated, every person connected with its handling should be clean in his methods. When drawn from healthy cows, few bacteria may be found in it.

Milk souring is caused by bacteria changing milg sugar into lactic acid It is impossible to remove these bacteria by straining, as many people think.

Milk receives most of its contamination from the body of the cow during milking. Therefore, it is essential that all parts of the animal's body be kept clean and well-groomed

Then, too, the milker's hands may be a source of contamination, so they should be clean and dry during the milking process.

Small top pails have proven effective in cutting down the number of bacteria that enter while the cow is being milked. Dairymen should recognize this type of container as one of the easiest and cheapest means at his disposal for producing good milk.

All containers used in handling milk should be of metal with all corners and seams completely filled with solder. To clean these containers thoroughly, they should first be rinsed in lukewarm water then scrubbed with a brush in water of the same temperature as that in the rinsing process to which a good alkali washing powder has been added. After washing, sterilize with steam and store in a clean dry place.

Milk should be cooled immediately after the milking process and held at a temperature of below 60 degrees

To Hold Referendum For Potato Growers

Potato growers in Eastern North Carolina will march to the polls May 13 and 14 to determine whether they want the marketing of their product controlled this year.

Should two-thirds or more of those voting in the referendum favor restrictions, a control program will go into effect. The proposen marketing agreement would prohibit in interstate shipment potatoes falling below the U. S. No. 2 grade and those of less than one and one-half inches in diameter.

Poll open at 9 a. m. on each of the two voting days and will close at 5 p. m. Public notice of the place of balloting will be made at least three days in advance of May 13.

L. P. Watson, extension horticulturist at State College, explained that each producer of potatoes for market is entitled to one vote.

Educations meetings to acquaint growers with provisions of the marketing agreement have been held in most of the affected counties.

Roger Babson Declares Business Future Bright

OCALA, Fla., May 10.—(IPS).—Roger Babson, authority on business trends, declares here in an interview that the "current emphasis on unemployment relief and labor unionism is nonsense."

"The near future is bright, Mr. Babson said, 'except for this nonsense of relief and labor unions as they are functioning at present.

"Relief undermines character and should be reduced 80 per cent, he continued, while unions undermine production by forcing use of labor machinery and as a result higher prices.

Says Grazing System Will Build Civilization

A system of growing feed crops in winter and so utilizing forage crops as to furnish continuous grazing for livestock throughout the year will build a superior civilization in the South, believes Hugh MacRae, of Wilmington, owner of Invershiel Farm in Pender County.

Mr. MacRae invited a group of farmers and agricultural workers to inspect his system of continuous grazing as followed at Invershiel Farm on Tuesday, May 3, and, following a tour of the 50 fields now in grazing crops, the group heard a number of brief messages from among those present. Dean I. O. Schaub of State College and former Congressman A. F. Lever, of South Carolina were the principal speakers Dr. Scaub endorsed the MacRae system as a goal toward which livestock owners might work in this State. He also stated that this system might help to increase the numbers and quality of livestock on North Carolina farms.

Invershiel farm consists of 600 acres of land of which 200 acres is now planted to forage crops in 50 different fields. The 165 cows on the place may be kept in any given area for grazing by one-wire, temporary electric fences operated with storage batteries.

There are 82 cows now in milk on the place and all the milking is done by four men using the milking machine. Another four men operate the farm work.

No harvesting is done on the place except by the cows. Some legume hay is gathered to provide for those days during which the cows cannot be put into the fields. However, there were only 14 such days in 1937.

Linwood James, farm manager, decides each morning where the cows will graze that day. No land is broken on the farm but a subsoil plow is used and the surface carefully disked. This keeps the organic matter and bacteria for legumes in the upper layers of the soil, Mr. MacRae said.
