DAILY SENTINEL.

WM. B. PELL, Proprietor.

STANTON'S FORTHCOMING DEFENCE.

It is intimated in Washington gossip telegraphed to this city, that Senator Howard, the Chairman of the Committee to whom Stanton's case was referred, has completed his report and will present it on the first day after the recess, if the Senate will go into executive session. It is described by the credulous correspondent of a Republican evening paper as a perfect crusher, annihilating all the charges of the President, revealing damaging Cabinet secrets, and destined to secure the vote of every Republican Senator in favor of reinstating Stanton in the War Department. General Grant (so the gossip runs) is voluntarily to retire from the place he has been keeping warm for the deposed war minister, and Stanton, after enjoying the humiliation of the President, will resign when he gets ready.

Who has stuffed a Washington gossip-monger with this precious jumble? According to his informant, the close-mouthed Grant has suddenly found so loquacious a tongue that he divulges what he is going to do in consequence of the future action of the Senate in secret session, on a report whose contents are still a secret to the Senate itself. Very likely Howard is ready to report, and Stanton, who of course wrote the document, may affect to think that he has demolished the President's charges. But if he really thought so, he would have no motive to forestall public opinion and get his defence pre-indorsed in the newspapers. He cannot dispute that he was the author of Mr Johnson's Reconstruction policy, for he swore to the fact himself before a committee of Congress. If he pretends to deny that he furnished the points for the President's veto of the Tenure-of-Office bill, he can be confronted with the testimony of every other member of the Cabinet. His withholding the dispatch relating to the New Orleans riot was sworn to by himself, and he will hardly venture to accuse himself of perjury. But if these facts are true, he has acted a disgraceful part, and no pettifogging can clear him.

If the Senate should undertake to reinstate Stanton, the action of General Grant will be scanned with keen interest. The President will not, if he can help it, allow Stanton to take possession without a decision by the courts. If Stanton should go straight to the War Department, and Grant, under color of obedience to law, should surrender it to him, Stanton would be in possession, and it would require a dilatory process to oust him. But is it probable that Grant would thus suddenly fling himself into the arms of the Republicans? Would he make a wrangle of this sort the occasion of a political change of base? As a man of honor, he could not take such a step against the known wishes of the President without giving him previous notice of his intention. As a military officer, he could not thus confront and defy his superior. At any rate, the President would be entitled to know, and would take steps to ascertain, what course General Grant thought it his duty to pursue in such a conjuncture. It is a piece of information that could not be refused. But the President, knowing beforehand the views of the Secretary ad interim, could easily prevent a transfer of the office back to Stanton. There may be a doubt of his authority to remove Stanton, but none of his authority to remove, at any moment he pleases, a Secretary ad interim, who has never been confirmed by the Senate. Grant will not stand free, the President only to put somebody in his place who will. The prudent course for Grant, if he wishes to preserve his attitude of quasi neutrality between the two political parties, is to hold on, and refuse to surrender the War Department to Stanton, until the question has been adjudicated by the Supreme Court.—N. Y. World.

SOME SPECIMENS OF NEGRO GOVERNMENT.

To persons fond of theorizing upon the possible elevation of the negro to an equality with the white man, in that most difficult of all arts, the art of wise and humane government, we commend some scraps of news which recently came to us from different parts of the world, where the black man has full power and unlimited scope for the exercise of his gifts in that line.

From the west coast of Africa (old Calabar river) we have details of the butchery of twenty-four persons—men, women, and children—in October, by order of King Archibong. The poor creatures had been barely betrayed into Archibong's hands by other negro chiefs to whom they had fled for safety, and who had promised to protect them. The heads of nine of these victims were cut off, packed in a cask, and sent to the King for him to examine and gloat over at his leisure. A party of missionaries and traders, living in the dominions of this monster, forcibly rescued four of the doomed ones—a man, woman, and two children—and placed them on board a ship in the river. King Archibong demanded their surrender, but the small but determined party of whites not only refused to give them up, but braved the cowardly tyrant with a piece of their mind; telling him that if he did not stop his barbarous practices, Europeans would find a way to make him do so. To this manly defiance the wretch yielded; and soon after the four rescued captives were at sea, on their way to a place of security. The same courageous band of white men had saved six other prisoners from a horrible death, in the month of September—a month when King Archibong reveled in a saturnalia of blood and cruelty. No better evidence could be adduced of the superior mettle of the white race over the black than that a mere handful of missionaries and traders should bend this incarnate demon in his own den, when he is surrounded by a host of warriors faithfully devoted to his service.

Recent intelligence from Hayti is quite of a piece with our foregoing. In Hayti the blacks have had every opportunity and every incentive for demonstrating their capacity for self government and civilization. And yet we find, under the thin varnish of a semi-civilized exterior, the same brutal passions which distinguish the governments of Africa, Jamaica and Dahomey. One Lace Monday, a sanguinary revolutionist has been proclaimed, and then knocked on the head with a cudgel, by his jailer. In this atrocious episode it is reported that President Salnave is an accomplice. Universal alarm and discontent prevailed at the capital, and foreigners were flying to Jamaica for safety. In addition to this cause, the rumor that the millions of counterfeit paper dollars now in circulation in Hayti, and that the Government connives at this fraud also, Salnave left November 20th, on a tour of inspection among his arsenals and powder magazines, and was evidently preparing new horrors for his political opponents.—Salnave is a full-blooded negro, and has been represented as trying to give to the world a specimen of negro government, at its best, with every thing in its favor. We shall now have a chance to see in the future of Hayti, as we have seen in its past, how little aptitude the negro race has for its own advancement; and we trust that the lesson will not be lost upon those who, at the safe distance of New York and New England, are looking with philosophical serenity upon the institution of similar experiments in the Southern States.

The last news from Abyssinia reports the English captives alive and well, and the British army advancing to their rescue through a parching desert, and suffering greatly for the want of water. No more melancholy proof of the cruelty, ignorance, and superstition of the native negro mind can be found in contemporary history than in the fact that this costly and troublesome expedition has been forced upon England by the obstinacy of King Theodore. He is keeping these few Englishmen in durance, because it tickles his vanity to lord it over white men; because it gratifies his instincts of tyranny to see them suffer from torturing apprehensions of death at any moment, and because he is so ignorant of England's power as to suppose that he can defy it with his barbarous hordes.—N. Y. Journal of Commerce.
