NIGHT WINDS.

Night of the summer sea,
Voice of the sweet breeze,
Over the sedgy lake
Talking in whispers,
Coming in your sighs,
Full of sweet litanies,
Born as the day is done
Lifting her vapors.

Wind of the ashley eve,
Bringing the soul that grieves,
Lulling that a dear one heaves,
Sweet be your pillow!
Kiss of the living air,
Breathing through lattice leaves
Stirring some dreamer's hair
On its white pillow.

Spirit of the tender night,
Whose lamp-lit blessed lights
Where, under quieted lids,
Weaves languish—
Send to my aching palm,
Under the starry light,
Soft as thy touch of balm,
Dove-like whispers.

Wind of the mighty deep,
Dry all the eyes that weep,
Soothing every heart to sleep,
Out of its sorrow
Wind of the holy night,
Over our slumber's sleep
Rolling low love and light
Wait for the morrow!

FIGHT EXTRAORDINARY.

Last evening a fight occurred in which a man, a woman, and two dogs were singularly mixed up. Lieut. Goldey had his attention attracted by the cries of a boy, who complained that his leg had been injured by a fall. Two women stopped and expressed sympathy with the boy, and while they and the lieutenant were endeavoring to alleviate his condition two dogs got to fighting. One dog ran around behind one of the women and the other dog pitched at his antagonist, taking the shortest course under the dress of the woman.

The result was, the last mentioned dog forced his head through the hoops worn by the woman, and, in this position, seized the other dog. As the dog who was fastened in the hoops plunged forward, away went the woman with him, and as he attempted to pull the other dog either way the woman had to come along. The woman screamed vociferously, and her companion did likewise. A crowd assembled, and the woman, whose skirts were entangled by the dog, cried lustily that she was being eaten up. Lieutenant Goldey chased about the woman until he obtained hold of the dog by the hind legs, and he pulled him with all his strength, but the tackle of the hoops had curled tightly around the dog's neck. Lieut. Goldey now reached his hand toward the dog's head, and the animal became infuriated, the consequence being that dog, man and woman rolled on the pavement in a heterogeneous mass, the other dog all the time jumping around to strike the enemy.—The Lieutenant finally gave a terrific jerk at the hoops, which parted at the waist, and the dog started off, dragging the woman a short distance, when she became disengaged from them and the dog went off with the skirt, his head still in chancery.—The woman demanded a new skirt from the Lieutenant, in which she was backed up by her friend, whereupon the Lieutenant, having become exhausted at the dog fight, fled swiftly, he not desiring to have a woman fight.

LATEST OUTRAGE UPON THE FASHIONS.—A newly inducted policeman in New Orleans recently had a singular adventure with a fashionably dressed lady, whom he met coming out of a dry goods store. He had heard of shop-lifters, who carried off the most costly goods in a sack disposed about their persons. He was ambitious of distinction, and here was a chance for the coveted fame. The lady was evidently carrying a heavy load. She must be a shop lifter. There could be no doubt of it—he would arrest her.

"You are my prisoner!" he said, laying his hand on her shoulder.

"What do you mean?" demanded the insulted lady.

"What's that you're got on your back—stolen goods?"

"Heaven! I never was so insulted. No, Sir, it's not stolen goods.'

"I mean no offence, madam, but my duty compels me to examine it."

"Sir—villain—that's my—my Grecian bend!"

MY STOCK IS LARGE AND VERY COMPLETE. Allow me to say that you see some very strange advertisements. Some say they bought goods before the rise—some after the decline—some just in time—and so forth again—some say goods cheaper than anybody else—some selling goods at unprecedently low prices—some controlling the trade, &c., &c., and all such stuff. What a lucky set of individuals! Now just let ME tell you, that there is more humbug than poetry in all this. Every man, woman and child know that it is humbug—large enough to be seen even with one eye open. So let them talk, puff and blow, but STOP, LOOK OUT! HANDS OFF! and show your good judgment by

COMING TO CREECH'S

to buy your goods. I intend to run through this campaign with my motto, to give each and every individual value received for their support!
