GEN. GRANT'S ADMINISTRATION.

Rev. Wm. T. Butler says that he did not die are in his sermon delivered on Sunday, that Gen. Grant was the weakest President the country had ever had, led to that certain acts of the Administration had led to that impression on the part of many persons.

Well, a man is better known by his acts than his professions—and "the impression of many person" is no doubt the correct one. Public opinion made General Grant President in November last almost by acclamation, and public opinion would unmake him President to morrow, if it had the opportunity. Gen. Grant is a failure as a civilian, whatever his military qualifications.—He failed in his Inaugural Address, in the selection of his Cabinet, and has failed in the measures of his Administration. He reads no books, makes no study of men or public questions, knows little or nothing of what is done in the Executive Departments, allows an extreme partizan named Tulloch, advanced from the Secretaryship of a party committee, to turn out men of great necessity and value to the government, and to put in those demanded by members of Congress and others. He abandons the seat of Government for weeks, allows his Cabinet to be anywhere and everywhere, but at the post of duty, engages in fast driving and constant smoking, and expects to hold the reins of Government as he holds the reins of his fast teams on the beach at Long Branch, Cape May, Annapolis, and elsewhere. But these are among the less or causes of grievance against the President. Naturalized American citizens are shot without mercy and almost without trial. Halpine, Wyatt, Polhamus, all were American citizens, and unjustly sacrificed. The President has no time to attend to wrongs done his countrymen in Ireland and Cuba, but plenty of time for attending balls, dinners, visiting friends, and watering places. It is no fiction, therefore, to state, "he is the weakest President the country ever had."—N. Y. Express.

SCENE IN A LIVERPOOL CHURCH.

St. Margaret's church, Liverpool, has lately been the scene of outbreaks and disturbances. The services in connection with its openings were continued on Thursday, and the congregations were large both morning and evening. Lord P. G. Osborne preached in the evening, and at the conclusion of his sermon he addressed some observations to those present on the subject of toleration. He begged them to be charitable to those opposed to them in doctrine. Should a competent court decide that the teachings of the real presence was not the teaching of the Church of England he was willing to minister no longer but there was no fear of his going to Rome. It was most un Christian and un-English to condemn a man while he was on his trial. They, the Ritualists, should not be called dishonest now when a judicial opinion had not been given. After the sermon the officiating clergyman and clericals, bearing crosses and banners, walked in procession down the aisle chanting the hymn. This was very distasteful to some of the congregation, who were heard to mutter their displeasure, while others walked out of the church. While this was going on inside the church an excited scene was taking place outside; and murmurs and hootings could be heard by those inside the sacred building. When the doors were thrown open for the congregation to depart, a mob of about three hundred persons collected and hooted the worshippers. Mr. Horsfall, by whom the church was built, had to make his escape by the back door of the vestry, and it was some time before clergymen could leave the vestry. A force of police was present, and also a number of detectives, but they could do little in such a mob, and had great difficulty in clearing the streets. It is expected that the police authorities will put a stop to these disturbances.

TRIAL OF A STEAM PLOW.—A steam plow and accompanying apparatus, imported by Col. Wm. E. Patterson from Leeds, England, was lately put in operation on the recent purchase of that gentleman in New Jersey.

Colonel Patterson's large tract of land is to be devoted to the culture of sugar beet. As the soil is a sandy loam, closely akin to that which the French have been so successful in sugar beet culture, Colonel Patterson sees no reason why a profit cannot be realized in this country in the same direction.

The test of the steam plow was made in the presence of a considerable number of people, including General Capron, of the United States Agricultural Bureau at Washington. This gentleman having beaten his sword into a plow-share, has, from the first, taken active interest in the subject of relieving horses from this arduous and exhausting labor. Though his intervention the apparatus, which cost $12,000, was admitted free of duty, and, at its successful operation on Tuesday, no man grinded a higher degree of satisfaction.

The machinery is by no means complicated. At opposite sides of the space to be plowed are two steam engines upon wheels. On the trial on Tuesday stood three hundred yards apart. The plow has six shares. It is a distinct piece of mechanism, and is fastened to a steel wire cable extending between the two locomotives across the ground to be turned over. It is literally a shuttlecock between the two steam battledores. It moves at the speed of a hundred yards a minute, turning six furrows a foot each in width and eight inches in depth. Its average work, the other, is twenty acres per day. The locomotives are using machines capable of being applied to many useful purposes independent of duty, as steam plowers.

A man rides on the plow as it crosses the soil. General Capron essayed a trip of two, guiding the machine like an expert upon a velocipede. One of the experts, who invented it just after him in a less good fortunes. One of the engines struck a buried boulder. It has an irresistible body in motion striking just as immovable one a rampus must be the result. In this case the man upon the machine was slung high upon air. The concussion broke off two of the teeth of the digger, but as a new one immediately replaced it, the accident was a matter of little consequence.

Of this large tract of ground much is virgin soil. The crops of some cabbages, showing slight evidence of decay, was brought to light by the steam plowshares. These were crumbled up by them as if they were mere touchwood. The soil shows them to largely made up of decayed vegetable matter, and, in the opinion of all who were present, the sugar beet will produce in its enormous crops. A digging machine accompanies the plow, intended for use in soils where roots and stones are obstacles to the course of the plowshare.—This is a wonderful apparatus. It so pulverizes the stiffest soil that a Yankee might put it into bladders and vend it as a substitute for snuff.

To work the machinery costs extremely little. Anything answers as fuel, and at the rate of twenty acres a day, a large estate is soon put under cultivation. The locomotives are then ready for ordinary duty as steam engines, either to grind or thrash, saw or mash.—Journal of Prac. Institute.

PRESIDENT GRANT is enough of a Radical to have reversed the proverb that "it is more blessed to give than to receive." The blessing, in his case, goes 90 to 10 with the receiving. Not long ago, we chronicled the fact that an old woman at the Jersey Ferry had pressed upon his acceptance a single orange, and, though he hesitated a little, his habit of accepting anything and everything that is offered to him impelled him to take and pocket the paltry present. It is believed that General Grant will take anything, unless it may be the hint that this open-bag business is highly discreditable to the Chief Magistrate of the Union. The latest gift to G. ant, which the report quite superfluously says, "was thankfully accepted," was fifty acres of sand barren down in New Jersey. This presentation was made with much ceremony at Bricksburg, New Jersey, on Monday. But as a gift it was worse than the orange; for calling the land worth fifty dollars or so an acre, it takes about two hundred dollars worth of manure to the acre to raise a crop of beans in that region. Therefore, the gift is quite incomplete unless the Loyal League Club or the Grand Army of the Republic unite in providing at least $5,000 worth of manure to go with and upon the fifty acres. In addition, the Tribune might present one or more of the "earth-closets" which it advertises. There need be no hesitation in tendering these gifts. Grant would take the sweepings of the Augean stables if they were offered to him. He declines nothing but good advice.—N. Y. World.

From the Nashville Banner, Aug. 2.

A GHOST.

The Lick Branch bottoms, from the Sulphur Springs away out to the west, where the rising ground commences and where houses and gardens appear, and from the trestle work north where the city begins once more and spreads out into what is known as Germantown, is lonely and sombre after nightfall. It is a dismal waste over flowed every year by inundations of the Cumberland, scarred with gullies overgrown with rank and poisonous weeds, haunted by swine and vagrant dogs who feast upon offal cast out from the streets above. Continuations of Summer, High and Vine streets, like broad metallic bands, cross the waste, dusty in dry weather, and filthy and miry in wet. During the war savage tragedies were enacted here.

A week ago a small party of the wretched people who live on Crawford street, near Vine, sat on the low timber pavement looking out over the bottoms. Eleven o'clock had just been struck, and the echoes had hardly died away from the market house bell, when out on the dreary bottoms, just beyond the trestle, where the moonlight was beginning to fall and to light up the pro-post with a weird light, the party saw suddenly a gigantic figure, wrapped from head to foot in a winding sheet. It seemed to come out of the earth and move solemnly from place to place with a species of gliding motion. Unheard a moment by the shadow of the trestle, the strange spectacle next appeared far out on the bottoms, swinging its gaunt arms, disappeared into the earth to appear at another spot soon after.

The effect on the little group of spectators may be imagined. The night, still and solemn, not a breath of air stirring the thin mists which crept up from the diminutive stream which flows through the branch, and before them the horrible figure in white. There was a commotion and crowds rushed forth from the neighboring tenements in all sorts of habiliments and gazed fearfully out at the spectre flitting in the moonlight.

Two men of firmer nerves than the rest, seized their revolvers, and rushing down to the trestle, snapped their pistols several times at the figure, which was leisurely moving before them. But their weapons refused to go off, and suddenly the figure loomed up into gigantic proportions, and then like a flash disappeared into the earth and was seen no more that night.

Several times since, the same figure has appeared and always about the same hour, it reports may be relied upon. One old lady insists that she saw the spectre plainly walking along the top of the trestle work, and that she saw the stars through its thin body as through a veil.

A ROMANTIC INCIDENT.

Some years ago (says the New Orleans Picayune) a gentleman named Paul Recott, a resident of New Orleans, but formerly living in France, lost his little son, a lad of ten years of age, from a vessel off the Canary Islands. It was night at the time, and although every possible exertion was made to rescue the boy, yet were they unsuccessful, and the little fellow was given up for lost. Shortly afterward the family came to New Orleans, and in time the grief of the parents for the loss of their son became only a sorrow living in their memories. He was dead, they thought, and grief could not bring him back to life. But he was not dead. He had got possession of one of the planks thrown out to him, and although missing his friends, was picked up the next day by an English vessel. In this ship he made the voyage to Cuba, and failing to communicate with his family, on his arrival, engaged in the employment of the vessel for several years. At last, hearing the whereabouts of his family, he received his city in quest of them a few days since. The joy which the appearance of the boy had long considered dead can, as the reader can, be more easily imagined than described. It was like one risen from the grave, and disclosed a series of incidents in the history of romance so often engaged the pen of the novelist and essayist.

THE Ætna is the LEADING LIFE INSURANCE COMPANY in North Carolina.

Largest amount of Losses to Widows and Orphans!

The Largest Revenue to the States. And has by far the largest number when compared with 58 Companies reported officially by the Commissioners of New York and Massachusetts it will be seen that the Ætna ranks as one of the first Companies of the Continent. But two of the fifty-eight Companies permitted to do business in New York and Massachusetts had so large an income for the year 1868; but two had so large a number of Policies in force, but one among all those incorporated under the laws of the State of New York had so small a per centage of Expense to Income during the year 1868.

Its expenses are lower than most Companies', and consequently its ability to make and pay liberal dividends to the insured is greater than that of most other Companies. It is one of the great Companies of the land in Income, in Assets, in Number of Policies, in Amount Insured, in Solidity and Strength, in Soundness, Cheapness, Promptness, and Success. Persons contemplating this mode of investment in the future as in the past would do well to examine the claims of all and take a policy accordingly.

IN INVITING THE MERCHANTS OF NORTH Carolina to an examination of our

we desire to inform them that, owing to the rapid increase of our

WHOLESALE BUSINESS,

we shall be prepared to offer them, this season, a stock of

Foreign and Domestic Dry Goods

AND

not equalled in the State of Virginia, embracing every article needed by Virginia and North Carolina Merchants, all of which we intend to sell at

GUARANTEED BALTIMORE PRICES

We ask of our friends, and the WHOLESALE TRADE, generally, an examination of our stock and prices. We are confident we can save time and expense to merchants by buying of us this season.

Our store will remain in New York during the entire season, and we will therefore be in constant receipt of new goods bought at auction, of Manufacturers and Importers.

Copartnership.

I HAVE, THIS DAY, associated with me my son, JOHN A. PESOUD, and the drug business hereafter will be conducted under the firm of

P. F. PESOUD & SON.

The CASH PLAN will be strictly adhered.—We must have the cash or an equivalent, on delivery of goods.

The former partner returns his thanks to his friends, and the public generally, for their generous support for the past 25 years, and solicits a continuance to the new firm, who will use their utmost exertions to merit and share increased patronage.

All indebted will please pay up this month, as my old business must be closed speedily.
