The Earthly Paradise.

H. Heine, Translated by Lord Houghton.

I long not for Elysian fields,
Or paradise or islands of bliss;
No fairer forms that region yields
Than in my time I've known in this.

No angel with the softest wing
Can be to me the wife I lose,
And on the clouds to sit and sing
Is not a pastime I should choose.

Dear Lord! how I should bless Thy name,
If Thou, instead of Heaven, wouldst please
To mend this body's ragged frame,
And give just gold enough for ease.

I know that sin and vice abound,
But it has been my wont, for fear
To pace unharmed this naughty ground
And loiter through this vale of tears.

Little I heed the noisy town;
Seldom I pass my humble door;
In slippers and in dressing gown
I rest, and ask for nothing more,

Except my wife, where'e'er she speaks
My soul no other music feels,
And in her honest eye it seeks
The secret of all noble deeds.

A little health, a little wealth,
Are all I pray for; let us go
Through a little of happy stealth
I and my wife, in statu quo.

"What do your audiences want, then?" asked Rumpledge, when they received his play unkindly. "I think they want plenty of sweetness and light," answered the manager. "Oh, then give them plenty of ballet girls and calciums," added the great dramatist.

A gentleman who employs a great number of hands in a manufactory in the west of Scotland, in order to encourage his work people in a due attendance at church on a fast-day told them if they went to church they would receive their wages for the day in the same manner as if they had been at work, upon which a deputation was appointed to acquaint their employer that "if he would pay them for over-hours they would attend likewise at the Methodist chapel in the evening."

SYNOD OF NORTH CAROLINA.

Third Day's Proceedings—Missionary Meeting.

Raleigh News and Observer.

The Synod met at 9.30 a. m., and was opened with prayer by the moderator.

There appeared in the Synod Rev. John W. Primrose and Rev. L. H. Baldwin, of the Presbytery of Orange, and the Rev. R. Z. Johnston, of the Presbytery of Mecklenburg.

Overtures from the Presbytery of Fayetteville were referred to the committee on bills and overtures.

The reports of the Presbytery of Mecklenburg were read and referred to appropriate committees.

The report of the committee on statistical reports, appointed to prepare memorials of Rev. Edward Hines, Rev. D. E. Jordan, Ruling Elder Watkins, Rev. Daniel Lindley, D. D., Rev. J. Rumple and Elder Murdoch, deceased, was made the order of the day for to-morrow at 10.30 o'clock.

Salisbury was chosen as the place of the next meeting of the Synod, after an interesting and animated nomination and ballot. This is a departure from the usual custom to meet in Presbyteries in turn. The time was left to the choice of the pastor and elder of that church.

The report of the agent of publication brought this matter and the subject of colporage to the Synod. The report was approved without [illegible]

The hour for the missionary meeting arrived, and the Synod and the large audience assembled enjoyed the exceedingly interesting services connected therewith. The exercises were opened with a beautiful voluntary, rendered by the choir, "Rock of Ages." Then the moderator read a portion of Isaiah second chapter. Rev. Walter W. Pharr led in prayer. The hymn, "Arm of the Lord," was next sung, after which the synodical agent, Rev. R. Z. Johnston, made the report, after which the Rev. Dr. J. Leighton Wilson, secretary of foreign missions, made an address about forty minutes long, exceedingly rich in thought and facts and that deeply affected the audience, after which a collection was taken amounting to over a hundred dollars.

Interesting remarks were also made by Rev. Dr. Smith and Rev. S. Taylor Martin and others.

The Synod took a recess till 2 p. m.

The Synod met after recess and resumed the consideration of the report on foreign missions and adopted the resolution appended thereto.

Several new names were enrolled, and the Synod now numbers nearly 190.

The agent of sustentation, Rev. H. G. Hill, made an admirable report, which was so commended to the Synod as to be approved without much debate.

He was followed by Rev. C. M. Payne, of Wilmington, who presented an interesting report on the subject of evangelistic labor. This matter was pending when Synod took recess at 4½ p. m., in order that its members might attend a reception kindly tendered by the principal of Peace Institute to the Synod.

A large audience attended the musical and calisthenic exercises, delighted and charmed with all that they saw and heard. Professor Baumann's great reputation was sustained by his fair pupils, and the studio exercises likewise enchanted those in attendance.

After recess the hour for the consideration of education arrived. The report on this subject was made by Rev. Z. McKinnon, of Concord.

Rev. Dr. Hepburn then made a full, able and interesting address on Davidson College, presenting its status, showing its work, the results, proving all that is claimed for it, its present hopeful outlook and full equipment for its college work. The reverend speaker made an earnest defense of denominational education as not narrowing the mind or range of thought, as meeting the demands of society. He compared the standing of those who had graduated elsewhere. He stated the high repute the college had won from the great professors in the best universities, from the honorable standing its students and graduates take in universities and professional schools, from the demand made for its graduates as teachers, and its widening area of patronage and increasing numbers. He also spoke of the needs of the institution, and urged the Synod to exert its influence in increasing its patronage, and in adding to its endowment.

Our Gold Mines.

Raleigh News and Observer.

At a meeting of the American Institute of Mining Engineers, Prof. Kerr made some remarks explanatory of the re-appearance of gold in North Carolina sands after they had been thoroughly washed. That gold does reappear in visible particles in these washings is certain. It would seem that the gold is held in solution by the alkaline waters permeating these gold bearing sands, and is brought down from the source of gold supply in a dissolved state. In process of time a reaction takes place, and the gold is deposited in the sands, which thus yield successive crops of the precious metal, and are renovated like our old fields by disuse. We make the following extract from Prof. Kerr's remarks:

I will state that no fact about these gold deposits is more commonly known or more universally acted upon than this; and these gravels are regularly reworked every ten or twelve years, the second and third crops often equalling the first; and my friend, Major Hotchkiss, near me, announces that the same is true in Virginia. It is true throughout the gold belt of the South. Now, as to the agency by which this aggregation of the fine, diffused, invisible gold is effected, no doubt Prof. Eggleston, who has just taken his seat, has indicated correctly the direction in which the solution of the problem is to be sought, viz: the gold dissolving power of alkaline waters. And Dr. Hunt has just shown us where to look for such solvents in these waters, and also the source of the silica. In fact, the two processes, the solution and the aggregation of the gold and the deposition of the quartz as parts of the same complex chemical action which is going on continually in all these superficial gold gravels, and the two proceed pari pasu, and are complementary to each other. You may almost see these processes going on under your eyes. These deposits are simply the half-decayed debris of the feldspathic gneisses and schists of the neighboring hills and slopes. The feldspathic sands are undergoing kaolinization by the percolation of meteoric waters, the resulting alkaline solutions, passing downwards, meet, dissolve, and redeposit the gold, while the liberated silica is precipitated, often attaching itself to and replacing any organic substances that may be present, thus furnishing an explanation of the extensive silicifications occurring in these deposits. I have often seen entire trunks of trees petrified in this way, lying within a few feet of the surface. I had in my hand last week a section of such a tree bole not less than a foot thick, in the middle of which was a rift, representing a crack in the log, the walls of which were faced with the projecting pyramidal terminations of perfectly formed minute crystals of quartz. Thus, as I said, you may almost see with your own eyes, these two concurrent, mutually independent chemical processes—the re-accumulation of workable gold in old, exhausted washings, and the deposition of the residual silica. Any why should we not expect to find these world old forces of mineral accumulation, transference, and deposition in activity now as well as at any former period?

Another Woman's Venture.

The failure of the Woman's Bank of the notorious Mrs. Howe, of Boston, is now followed by the explosion of a New York "Ladies' Mining and Stock Exchange," and the disappearance of the manager, a Mrs. M. E. Warren, who seems to be anxiously looked for, but so far in vain. This was a speculative affair, which took "margins" from confiding ladies, promising them fortunes in return as the result of operations in stocks. The object of this concern, like that of Mrs. Howe, pretended to be benevolent entirely. It claimed to have capital enough of its own, but would receive deposits from ladies in order to give them the chance to multiply their incomes. The depositors had grown to be quite numerous by the time of the exposure of Mrs. Howe's swindle, but this seems at once to have alarmed the depositors and the bankers, and the latter closed their doors on November 1. There are said to be at least a hundred victims of these operations, who have lost sums varying from $25 to $3,000. They are chiefly persons who could not afford to lose, and who, for that reason, should have abstained from risking their little all on such uncertain ventures.

Ingersoll's Sophistry.

Chicago Lecture.

"A young Presbyterian, the other day, tried to convert me," he said, rubbing his hands mirthfully: "he was a new convert himself, and was very full of his own importance. Bumblebees, you know, are always largest when first hatched. 'You are happy now then,' I said, 'when so many people are going to hell and you going to heaven?' 'Yes,' he said he was happy. 'Doesn't it make you miserable,' I said, 'the knowledge of those others going to everlasting hell?' He said he had not thought of it in that light. 'Suppose now,' I said, 'you are saved and your mother is not—could you be happy in heaven with your mother in hell?' The young man hesitated a little, but he was faithful to his new Church. 'Well,' he said, 'at least, I believe God knows what is best for mother.'"
