THE SENTINEL.

JAMES H. MOORE, Assistant and Local Editor.

MONDAY, OCTOBER 10, 1870.

A FACT FOR HONEST MEN.

North Carolina is the most abused State in the Union, with less reason for it. Prior to the war no State had a better criminal record than this. The "old North State" was noted everywhere for integrity, sobriety and obedience to law. Since the war, the fiend of that demoralizing state of [illegible] has altered the complexion of the continent record, but if the truth, the whole truth and nothing but the truth had been told of us, it would be seen that in the war, the amount of crime in this State has been the in proportion to population, than in any other State of the Union.

While we believe in an liberal true, and yet the Radical press and Radical leaders in this State simply because they have the ear of the government and the press of the North, have stabbed the fair name of the State, and unmanly and falsely, by their high-wrought charges upon Ku Klux, charging all the crime committed in the State, to that invisible band and [illegible] which in fact three-fourths of the crime is chargable to other parties.

But our object in this article, is to notice a fact, which will not be denied in any of its parts, which presents the moral aspect of society in North Carolina, in a light not [illegible] the truth should have made them [illegible]

In the month of [illegible] a negro man [illegible] the lower part of this county, a party of [illegible] negro forced himself in upon the dwelling of a respectable widow lady, 60 years of age, and demanded her pocket book; a negro boy about 14 years of age and her daughter, were in the house when he entered. Her daughter discovering his bellish design, made her escape through the window and he drove the boy out. Upon his seizing the old lady, the boy, hearing her cries, ran back into the house, which Stinson discovering, drove him off with a threat, which alarmed the boy and he ran off to his mother. He then dragged the old lady near the road and roughly raped her, and after [illegible] his purpose, struck her [illegible] with the breech of his gun. As soon as she recovered from the stunning blow, he told her she had more money than he found in the pocket book, [illegible] here it. He made her go back into the house and tell him where her money was kept. She opened a desk and told him where it was usually kept, and while he was searching, she escaped and left herself. He then made his escape, before the neighbors to whom the daughter had given the alarm, arrived.—The old lady discovering a light in the house, [illegible] enough to see that the neighbors, who arrived, came forward and [illegible] story. The next day [illegible] in this city and [illegible] examination, [illegible] the old lady had one or [illegible] The indignation [illegible] born was intense, yet their [illegible] for the law, led them to suppress their feelings and await the action of the Court.

On Friday last, he was tried in this city before His Honor, Judge Watts, the Superior Court being in session. Being unable to employ counsel, the Judge appointed two able lawyers to defend him. The facts in detail, more fully than we have given them, were proven by the testimony of the lady herself, corroborated by the negro boy and daughter so far as they knew them, and Stinson was fully identified by the parties. Witnesses could furnish no rebutting evidence. The case was so clear, the counsel on both sides agreed to submit it without argument. The jury was composed of twelve colored men, who attentively listened to the testimony. The witnesses were carefully examined by the Judge, and he gave them a fair and impartial charge. The jury retired and after a short consultation, returned with a unanimous verdict of guilty. The Judge delivered a very [illegible] address, and sentenced the prisoner to be hanged on Friday, the 4th of Nov. next, on the scene of his execution. The Judge in this case, acted very properly in [illegible] this case, as a marked evidence of the law-abiding character of our people, and expressed his gratification at the satisfactory of the triumph of law and order in the State over violence.

We beg to call the attention of our Northern exchanges to the foregoing facts. Justice to North Carolina demands that so strong a case, reflecting credit upon the law-abiding character of our people at this [illegible] should be made known.

[illegible] Ball.—The Gold [illegible] of New York, [illegible] Friday last, in the hand for the benefit of [illegible] by the usual form, in [illegible] The report is to be [illegible] the [illegible]

A WORD OF WARNING.

We beg the indulgence of our friends, both personal and political, who count themselves among the supporters of Radicalism and the friends and advocates of the principles which have hitherto guided the party, called the Democratic-Conservative party of North Carolina. We have a word of counsel, prompted by no personal or sinister motive. The party with which we act, is intrinsically and simply, if its enemies should give it a name, the North Carolina State party, while the party of our opponents, is emphatically the anti-North Carolina State party. Taking its name, however, from the material which composes it, and from the general principles which guide it, it is not inaptly styled, the Democratic-Conservative party. The interests of the State in future, absolutely depend upon the continued triumph and harmony of that party as it is now constituted. Laboring, therefore, with an honest intent to promote the future substantial and moral interests of North Carolina, we are opposed, determinedly opposed, to any and every measure or movement, which could tend, in the least, to disturb the harmony and solidarity of the party.

We are opposed by a party, which has struck its poisonous fangs at the vitality and life of the State. She is bleeding at every pore, because of the reckless and dangerous stabs, made at her vitals by the Radical party. That party is led by professional demagogical politicians, schooled for years in the principles and practices of trickery, deception and violence, whose sole aim is self promotion and aggrandizement, reckless of what befals the State or her people. No further proof is needed of the truth of this declaration, than the real history of the party in this State and the history of the men who lead it.

They are not only selfish, deceptive and vindictive, but they are adepts in low diplomacy and trickery. Their only hope of success in future, is the defeat of the Democratic-Conservative or North Carolina party, and their only prestige of hope to defeat us, is in their hope of success in dividing us.

Some days ago, we alluded to the rumor, which has gone North, that the Radicals of this State, were bent upon our division.—We treated it then as a rumor, and one perfectly Utopian. We still believe that the effort will prove a signal failure. But we are now assured, from sources which we cannot doubt, that leading Radicals now express themselves confidently, of success in their attempts to divide, scatter and destroy us. They have no hope from a change of sentiment among the people as to the real character of Radicalism. They know that under any guise which gives an inkling of its real character, "Radicalism is a dead dog in North Carolina." But taking counsel from their great prototype, they will not scruple to assume new phases and forms, in order to effect their design.

There is but one way, by which they can hope to circumvent us, and that is in the future choice we may make of office-bearers. As a general thing, our people are extremely poor. With few exceptions, none of our people have been able to keep their heads well above water since the war, except the Radical office holders and politicians. Immense sums of money have been robbed from the State, and by book or by crook, a good portion of it, has found its way into their pockets. The poverty of our people therefore, forces many of them to desire office, as a means of their support. Others who can live without office or place, impelled by laudable motives, patriotic and personal, manifest a desire for promotion. This, in both cases, is natural. Yet this disposition to secure position, however laudable in itself, is the weak place in our party and in all parties, and the Radical leaders know the weak points of people, if not quite so well as their old Master, yet well enough to seize upon every possible advantage we may unwittingly give them.

The next General Assembly will have several important positions to fill. The greatest wisdom and forecaste will be required to discharge that duty. We cannot act wisely and safely, if we singly or in groups commit ourselves in advance, to any person or measure. Every member of the General Assembly should wait and watch, and determine not to act until the collective wisdom and prudence of the whole body of Democratic Conservative delegates in council assembled, shall have discussed and carefully considered every question. Each member claiming to act with them, should determine to move only in solid column, and should stand shoulder to shoulder to do and dare, whatever shall be determined by the whole, to be best for North Carolina.

INTERESTING EXPERIMENTS IN THE SOUTH.

A dispatch from Washington, says the New York Herald of the 5th, states that the condition of Alabama was created a "serious question" at the national capital for some time, and was the subject of consideration in the Cabinet on Tuesday last. The dispatch referred to continues:

As a result, the President has issued orders directing that the State be constituted a separate military district to the Department of the South, under command of General A. H. Terrill. Two additional companies of troops have also been ordered into the State. General Crawford left for Montgomery last night, accompanied by Senator Warner, who goes to resume the canvass in the State. Senator Warner has been successful in raising considerable money for campaign purposes, and reports the political prospects in the State to be cheering.

That there should be "grave uneasiness" at Washington on account of the aspect of affairs in the South—and that aspect is really of a happy and encouraging nature—is not at all surprising. But why Alabama, [illegible] should be [illegible] political campaign, [illegible] prosecuting Alabama together, does not speak well for the sagacity of those who have the management of the matter.

CELEBRATION AT ROCKY MOUNT.

The last Tarboro' Southerner contains a lengthy account of the late barbecue and celebration at Rocky Mount. It also publishes the letters of several gentlemen who were compelled to decline the invitation to attend, which we have not space to publish in full, but as they contain sentiments which ought to be put upon record and remembered, we compile the following extracts from them:

Hon. W. R. Battle after extending his non-attendance, says:

I can assure you, gentlemen, that no man in the State feels more profoundly than I do, the importance of our recent great political victory. When, as one of the counsel for many persons who had been illegally deprived of their liberty by the Governor, I was told by the Chief Justice of the State, that he had exhausted the power of the judiciary in a vain effort to make the writ of habeas corpus effectual for their relief, I felt my heart sink within me; but when I and my associate counsel found the means of deliverance for our clients, through the instrumentality of Judge Brooks, of the United States District Court, and that the good people of North Carolina had arisen in their majesty to vindicate their rights, I felt once more that I was still living in a land of freedom.

Hon. B. F. Moore says: Permit me to assure you, gentlemen, of my most hearty concurrence, that the late political triumph is cause for rejoicing among ourselves and of gratitude to Heaven. I am sure that the people intend it as a rebuke upon the wasteful and corrupting extravagance committed, or willfully permitted, by the public authorities; of a lawless usurpation of forbidden powers, and a reckless defiance of the constitutional guarantees of freedom.

Let no man suppose that this triumph overthrows evil in the colored race. Their political and civil freedom are secured by an area that no State or party in a State can touch. If they regard themselves citizens of the State equally liable with the whites to all the burdens of taxation; if they love that hand of freedom which snatches the citizen, unjustly imprisoned by the sword, from the military dungeon, and the military hangman's rope, and gives liberty before the law; and if they are not willing to be deprived of the hard earnings of the sweat of their brow, they too have as much occasion to rejoice over the late triumph as any other portion of our citizens.

Let us, by our moderation and firmness, profit by the opportunity offered, to put the State upon the footing of its old name for honesty and integrity.

Hon. W. N. H. Smith, now of Norfolk, Va., says:

It would afford me great pleasure to meet with you on that occasion, and exchange congratulations on the result of a civil contest of law and liberty against oppression and power, which may well work an era in the history of the Old North State. But having just returned from a tour of professional duty, and as my associate, Judge Biggs, intends to be present, I am constrained to forego the pleasure for myself. Let us show unite more resolutely, to secure for ourselves and children the fruits of this splendid victory, and by our course of moderation and firmness lay deep and lasting the foundation of our future prosperity.

Hon. Thos. Bragg says:

Great is the rejoicing of our people in all parts of the State, over our recent signal political victory.

May we have the wisdom and good fortune to successfully reap the fruits of it, and to establish on a firm and enduring basis our rights and liberties as a free people.

Hon. Geo. Davis being on a visit to Asheville in quest of health, regrets that he cannot unite with them in celebrating the Conservative victory.

Gov. Graham says:

The result of no election was ever more creditable to the deliberation, and intelligence of the people, or inspired a more hopeful confidence in their capacity and zeal to take care of their great interests, public and individual.

"It was no common party race
Jostling kindred intrigue for place."

But the expression of the calm judgment of the grand inquest of electors, without the excitements of an active canvass, in vindication and rebuke of confidence abused, public credit ruined, public and private interests sacrificed, and the dearest and most valuable rights of individuals and of society violated. There was quite sufficient cause for the overthrow of our adversaries, in what was done and tolerated by the Legislature and Executive, months ago; but when to these were added a military invasion by an armed force, in great part from East Tennessee, its seizures and incarcerations of men, whom their slanders, the very pillars of society in their several neighborhoods; and the announcement and insolence that the judiciary was impotent for any relief, their defeat became a rout. The opportune moment having arrived in this crisis for the people to speak through the ballot box, they resolved to provide remedies for these evils, if none then existed, by entrusting power to other hands, and demanding new guards for their future security. In so uncertain times they proclaimed that the military is subordinate to, and must be governed by the civil power and that the privilege of the writ of habeas corpus is not a mere paper declaration, but a substantial right, which shall never be suspended by State authority, in peace or in war; and that the mere issuing of the writ is a mockery, unless its execution be enforced, and the aggrieved and innocent prisoner restored to his liberty. I expect the people to vindicate will not be lost upon us; that it will teach us patience in future trials, if any are to fall to our lot; and, above all that there is in this country something more formidable than an army with banners;" and that is the decree of a free and brave people at the polls.

It would be a great mistake to suppose that our triumph implied any disposition to abridge the personal rights of the colored race, or a contravention of the policy of the United States in conferring those rights. The people of this State are wearied of agitation and long for repose. Many reforms and abuses claim the attention of those invested with authority, but no change, I feel assured, is meditated in these particulars.

Answered.—The Richmond Whig thus answered the query of the Raleigh Standard as to the reason of the failure of immigrants to come into North Carolina: After having done all in your power to frighten off immigrants by getting up a war, convulsing society, and declaring that life and property are unsafe in North Carolina, it ill becomes you to propound the above enquiry. If immigrants avoid North Carolina, it is because you and your co-workers have frightened them off.

The Board of Commissioners of Bladen county have elected Dr. W. A. Bexell, county treasurer in place of E. Wilkerson who was elected in August and failed to give his bond.

THE SENATORIAL QUESTION.

More depends upon the proper selection of a Senator now, than will probably ever occur again. The Senator should be one of acknowledged ability and influence. If, in making the choice, we select those who can take the test oath, the selection will be limited to a small class. If, from those who have had their disabilities removed, the class will be larger, but, if we disregard the question of disabilities, we have the largest class.

I take it, that Congress has settled the rule, to wit: that those who have been elected, Certainly Congress has not refused to remove the disabilities of any thus far elected to Congress from North Carolina. The exclusions have been relative to others here at home. From the several cases from North Carolina, Shober and others, it is not reasonable to presume that Congress will remove disabilities whenever the State demands it, in order that her service may be properly performed? Is it unreasonable for a State thus to demand the removal of disabilities? Can the State ask the removal of disabilities in any other manner? For example, Gov. Graham files a petition to have his disabilities removed. He does it as an individual. He does it to the end that he personally may hold some office, if it were tendered. His petition is recommended by many as individuals. Congress might say, "we see no reason to do this thing as a private favor to Gov. Graham;" but when Gov. Graham appears at the door of the Senate, as a Senator from North Carolina, the case is reversed. He files his petition for removal of disabilities; it is recommended by the sovereign State of North Carolina, for the advancement of her public service. Then there is a distinction between the manner of applying for removal of disabilities. In the one it is a private and personal act, for private and personal reasons; in the other, a public act for public purposes.

I do not believe that Congress will refuse to seat any person who may be elected Senator.

I do not desire to be understood, as expressing any preference. I think, however, the question of disabilities should not enter into the matter, certainly not until Congress has laid down the rule plainly and explicitly, that none from North Carolina can take seats unless their disabilities had been removed previous to their election.

I think the rule as settled by Congress relative to North Carolina, is that when one is elected to that body, they will remove his disabilities and allow him to take a seat.

LUCIUS.

RUMORED CHANGES IN THE CABINET.

It is stated that the Cabinet is to be reorganized. Messrs. Fish, Cox and Robeson withdrawing for reasons entirely personal, and rumor has it that Ben Wade will succeed Cox and General Walbridge will succeed one of the others—probably Fish. General Walbridge, no doubt, will perform the duties of either office with zeal and ability. As for Ben Wade, it would be simply a shame to buy him in the office of the Interior Department. His stuff is of that stern, aggressive material that will cause the much agitation among the agricultural families in that pastoral department. He would lock assembly entangle the dusty details of the Patent Office or the Land Office in less than a week. He would fit shoot so nicely into them as a fire in a haystack or a bombshell in church. He would have been a treasure in the State Department at one time. His enthusiasm for settling the Alabama claims, "pay or fight," nicked the populace so prodigiously at the time he uttered it, and as events have since shown that England is as chary about doing the one thing as the other, probably his policy was an excellent one to follow. In the Cuban business too, he displayed a hearty Americanism that was refreshing; but whether his fiery temper would suit the musty operation of the State Department at the present time is a matter of doubt. The place or Wade—for the old veteran of the Republican party ought to have a place somewhere under the Republican administration—is in the Navy Department. Under the 10 years Rip Van Winkleism in that department our ships and fleets have gone to sed like the old firelock of the Dutch burgomaster, and it needs the young blood of old Ben Wade to burnish them up again. He cannot be too fiery or progressive here. Mental bombshell as he is, he could not blow up our present naval systematic high; but we can warrant that he would at least blow out some of the cobwebs in the barrow and knock off some of be barnacles on the fleet.—*N.
