POETRY.

Look on the Bright Side.

"Old man, I prithee, tell me why
You always wear a smile;
Though others oft look wan and sad,
How do you care beguile?

Though doomed to care and penury,
And bowing down with age,
Yet still light hearted, blithe, and gay,
You treads life's weary stage."

"I'll tell thee all, my youthful friend,"
The good old man replied—
"Whate'er mayhap, I always look
Upon the brightest side,

O'er all the land, there's not a man,
How hard seem his lot,
But, if he will, can often find
A bright and sunny spot.

"I've lived and toiled for many a year
Beneath the summer's sun,
And in the winter cold and drear,
My labor still went on;

And in that varied course of years
Did much of ill betide,
But still I always strove to look
Upon the brightest tide.

"When sickness came, and hours of pain
Dragged wearily along,
And mourning sad and murmuring vain
Dropped from my feeble tongue,

Kind hearts were there, and kindly words
Fell softly as my ear
And loving ones were always nigh
My fainting heart to cheer.

"And through a long and wearied life
I've learned this lesson well—
That in this world of care and strife
There's more of good than ill;

And even in poverty and toil,
Peace with us will abide;
Man may be happy if he will
But see the brightest side."

The Long ago.

Oh! a wonderful stream is the river Time,
As it runs through the realms of tears,
With a rushless rhythm and musical rhyme,
And a broad flowing sweep, and a surge sublime,
That blends with the ocean of years.

How the winters are drifting like flakes of snow,
And the summers like buds between,
And the years in the sheaf—so they come and they go
On the river's breast, with its ebb and flow
As it glides through the shadow and sheen.

There is a magical isle on the river of Time,
Where the softest of airs are playing;
There is a cloudless sky and a tropical clime,
And a song as sweet as a vesper chime,
And the June with the roses are staying.

And the name of this isle is the Long Ago,
And we bury our treasures there;
There are graves of beauty and bosoms of snow—
There are loves of dust, but we loved them so;
There are trinkets and tresses of hair.

There are fragments of song that nobody sings,
And a part of an infant's prayer;
There's a lute unswept, and a harp without strings,
There are broken vows, and pieces of rings,
And the garments that she used to wear.

There are hands that are waved when the fairy shore
By the mirage is lifted in air;
And we sometimes hear, through the turbulent roar,
Sweet voices we heard in the days gone before,
When the world down the river is fair.

Oh! remembered for aye be the blessed isle,
All the days of the old night—dreaming
When the evening comes with its beautiful smile,
And our eyes are closing to slumber awhile,
May our "greenwood" of soul be in spring.
