New Law Building Is Dedicated, Will Double Physical Facilities

A distinguished company of judges, lawyers, and teachers of law from this and other states gathered here yesterday to help the University dedicate the handsome new addition to its 106-year-old Law School and to pay tribute to its outstanding record of achievement.

The new building doubles the physical facilities of the present Law School, Manning Hall, to which it is connected by an H-shaped corridor. The dedicatory program presided over by Chancellor R. B. House, was held in the spacious courtroom of the new building and topped the day's events which were concluded late yesterday afternoon with a reception and open house following the Caroina-Tennessee football game.

The Dean of another outstanding law school, Dr. F. D. G. Ribble of the University of Virginia who gave the principal address, told the representatives of the legal profession and guests that lawyers have a particular responsibility for the way the human relations of this age work.

"Any weakness in determination incident to greed, ignorance, or prejudice is the greater responsibility of our profession," said Dean Ribble, who is president of the American Association of Law Schools.

Dean Ribble spoke on "Spiritual Values in Legal Education." He began by discussing the concept of law schools as trade schools, and explained that while [illegible] do [illegible] giving [illegible] only [illegible] whole

Unique Stack System Used

A "self-service" stack system, unique among legal institutions throughout the country, will be inaugurated in the future in the new Law School library.

Already, law students have much freedom in the procurement of books, Miss Lucile Elliott, head librarian, pointed out. But after our staff is enlarged, we will allow students absolute freedom to the stacks."

Lauricella Paces TD Parade; Scores Two, Throws Another

by Bill Peacock

Hank Lauricella yesterday gave the finest exhibition of triple threat tailback play seen in Kenan Stadium since the long-gone days of Charlie Justice as Tennessee, the nation's finest team, rolled to an easy 27-0 victory over Carolina before 41,000 fans.

The victory was the sixth in a row for the Vols this year and their 16th straight since losing to Mississippi State last year. Their convincing show of power before the top writers in the country will certainly keep them in the Number One spot.

Lauricella, a 160-pound senior from New Orleans, scored twice, one on a one-yard line buck and another on a 27-yard run wide around right end, and tossed a 25-yard scoring pass to Bert Rechichar. In addition, he tossed a 28-

Negroes See Game; Sit In Card Section

Four Negro law students attended the Tennessee-Carolina football game yesterday using the student passbooks issued several weeks ago by Chancellor R. B. House.

They sat in the student card section, second row from the field.

No trouble developed even though the students were sep-
