$700 Boxes of the Southern Hepatic Pills
Have been ordered in one day.

THIS combination of medicines was first prepared by the proprietor in 1825, when he was pronounced by three eminent physicians in a Southern city, as in an advanced stage of Consumption. These Pills cured him. He is now over seventy years of age and in discharge of active professional duties. Their good effects upon others created such a demand for them that he was compelled to desist from supplying them gratuitously.

They are not recommended by the proprietor as good for all diseases, but only for such as arise from DISORDERS OF THE LIVER. Many persons have testified to their good effects in Chills and Fevers, Bilious Fever, Pneumonia, Dyspepsia, &c., &c.

Read the following:

S. D. WALLACE, Esq., President of the Wilmington and Weldon Rail Road, Aug. 30, 1862, says: "It has been said that "DYSPEPSIA," is our national disease. However this may be, it caused me long and severe suffering. Providentially a friend furnished me with a few boxes of the "Hepatic Pills," and the use of them has perfected a cure. In my family they have been used frequently with eminent success. Among my acquaintances, many cases originating from diseased liver, have been relieved and cured by them. I regard them an invaluable medicine, and take pleasure in forwarding this voluntary tribute."

COL. JOHN WRIGHT, of Goldsboro' N. C., Aug. 14, 1862, says: "I have used the Southern Hepatic Pills in my family here and also on my plantation in Alabama, and always with success. I have a valuable servant girl who had been a long time under treatment for consumption, without receiving any benefit. Almost in her extremity, I was induced to try the Hepatic Pills. They were given according to directions, and she is now well, entirely restored by them. A similar case occurred among my servants in Alabama. For liver and lung diseases I have perfect confidence in them."

Full directions and other certificates will be found on the wrapper of each box.

Price, $1 a box; $10 a dozen; $96 a gross. Retailed at the Druggists. For $11 twelve boxes will be sent free to any part of the Confederacy where there are no druggists. Not less than a dozen boxes will be sent by the proprietors. Cash must accompany orders. Checks on local banks taken.

Cotton Yarn for Wool.

HAVING accepted an agency from the Governor of the State, under the direction of Col. H. A. Dowd, A. Q. M., at Raleigh, to assist in procuring a supply of WOOL to provide clothing for our North Carolina Soldiers the coming Fall and Winter, we are authorized to exchange Cotton Yarn at the rate of 1 bundle of 5 lbs. for 3 lbs. of Wool unwashed, but free of sand and burs. Any person having Wool to spare can greatly aid our State authorities in their laudable efforts to sustain the cause of our country, and at the same time contribute (in many cases) to the comfort of their own friends and kindred in the army, not by making a donation, but receive a full equivalent for their wool. It is hoped and expected therefore that a prompt response will be made to this notice, as it is important that the Wool should go into the hands of the manufacturer at an early day, to be made ready for wear by the early Fall. BRIDAL GIFTS TO THE PRINCESS OF WALES.

The bridal gifts to the Princess of Wales have been placed on exhibition. The London Times gives the following description of the articles:—

The gifts are divided into five classes—that is, jewelry and goldsmith's work, silver plate, porcelain, textile fabricks, and miscellaneous; but except in the matter of jewelry, no actual division is attempted, and the plate and china, shawls, laces and works of art, are, as we have said, grouped together with beautiful effect as to form and color. The jewelry makes a magnificent display. There are whole suits of gems, with bracelets, rings, broaches, lockets, and even tiaras, for almost every day in the week. The most magnificent of these are, of course, those given by the Prince himself, by her majesty, and by the King of Denmark. The latter is a truly royal gift—a gorgeous necklace of five rows of brilliants and pearls, terminating in the centre in an enamel facsimile of the famous Byzantine ornament—the much revered cross of Dagmar, beautifully executed. Unquestionably, however, the most beautiful and the most tasteful specimen of jewelry is the parure presented by the Queen in the name of the late Prince Consort, and made from a design drawn by his royal highness himself. Of the same kind, in another part of the collection, will be found three drawings of noble groups of silver-gilt plate, now making but not yet ready for exhibition. These drawings represent gifts made by the Queen in the name of the Prince Consort, and executed from the prince's own designs. The centre group will be a noble and most lofty tazza, the base surrounded with a large group of figures representing Edward I. presenting the first infant Prince of Wales to the Welsh chieftains. The two vases which are to accompany this royal gift are of Etruscan form, so graceful in shape and ornamentation that even our greatest modelers might feel proud of their conception. But to return to the jewelry. In one case it shows a set of Indian ornaments, consisting of corsage, pair of bracelets, and armlet, entirely composed of pearls, emeralds, and diamonds, the gift of the Queen. These are indeed, "barbaric gold and gems," for all the jewels having been cut and set in India, are, of course, in the pure oriental style—that is to say the diamonds are flat and lusterless, and the fine emeralds are drilled through and spoilt by holes; in fact, though the value of this present must be very great, it is much more curious than beautiful, and the jewels as much resemble common glass as it is in the power of such rich and rare gems to do. Near it are a superb pearl and diamond necklace and ear-rings, the gift of the prince to his bride, and one of the most costly of them all. The most costly, however, is the grand diadem of fine brilliants, also given by the prince to the princess the day before the marriage. It is impossible to avoid mentally calculating the great costliness of this royal gift, especially when one can guess at it from the data supplied by the magnificent city necklace which stands immediately beneath the diadem. The centre stone of the city necklace is valued at £5,000, and one can count in the diadem above it no less than eleven brilliants almost, if not quite, equal to it in size and purity of water. This almost queenly crown is so constructed as that it can be taken to pieces and worn, if wanted, in separate ornaments—a convenience of which it is not likely the princess will ever avail herself; as it is almost embarrassing to conjecture how she is to manage, even by the subdivisions of her time, to wear all the separate ornaments that are here displayed. Most of the presents given by the royal family are the work of Garrard & Co., except one exquisitely beautiful gold necklace, given by the prince, the Etruscan form of which shows it to be the work of Mr. Phillips. The young princes and princesses of our royal family make a joint present of a noble brooch of brilliants and sapphires; the Prince and Princess Louis of Hesse a bracelet of turquoises and brilliants; the Duchess of Cambridge a magnificent diamond and emerald brooch; the Princess Mary a diamond bracelet; and the Duke of Cambridge also a diamond and enamel bracelet. The Landgrave William of Hesse and sisters give a most beautiful parure of gold, of a fine old Danish design; and the Chamberlain Juel another suit of the same richness; while the inhabitants of the two Islands, Laaland and Falster, also send a gold suite, of ancient Scandinavian design—such as the wives of the Vikings of old might have worn in state—consisting of a massive diadem, armlet, brooch, hair-pin, button, ear-rings, finger-rings—all of massive gold, of quaint old Runic design.

One of the most interesting presents in this part of the collection is that made by the bridesmaids—a bracelet in eight compartments, each one containing a miniature of the fair young girls who followed the Princess to the altar, with their initials set in diamonds on the cover of the portrait. The ladies of Liverpool give a cross composed of eleven large and superb brilliants, suspended from a row of pearls; the ladies of Manchester, a very fine opal and brilliant bracelet; the ladies of Leeds, a fine diamond bracelet in a white and gold casket. In a case by themselves are three boquet holders, one from the Maharajah Dhuleep Sing, one from the Lady Mayoress, one from the ladies of Gravesend. As the Princess brought one with her, and Southampton is about to give her another, her highness will need only one more to have one for every day in the week. Of the three now at South Kensington, that made by London and Ryder for Dhuleep Sing is incomparably the finest. It is a most massive and costly ornament, of rock crystal and gold, jeweled over with diamonds, emeralds, rubies and pearls. The Highland companies of the Edinburg Rifle Volunteers gave a beautiful and characteristic plaid or shawl brooch, with a Gaelic inscription, and Lord Herries a massive, chased, gold Indian bangle, set with rubies and emeralds. These are the chief or most interesting ornaments among the jewelry.

Among the porcelain gifts there is a vase almost large enough to bathe in, given by the King and Queen of Prussia. Near this are an ewer and plateau in the style of the sixteenth century, an imitation of the exquisite Limoges enamels, the gift of Lord Spencer. The Dowager Duchess of Sutherland gives a china service and a beautiful pair of beakers, which will bear a favorable contrast with the Sevres clock and turquoise porcelain candelabra presented by the members of the household of the prince. The textile fabrics include all presents of this kind that have been made, from the Indian shawls and pieces of satin and velvet for dresses, given by the Queen and the prince, to the exquisite fairy-looking webs of lace from Belgium, Norwich, and Ireland. The city of Norwich sends quite a small outfit in this department—crape shawls, opera cloaks, dresses
