THE SENTINEL.

Monday Evening, Oct. 22, 1866.

A Remarkable Scene.

Two days before Mr. John Van Buren died, the following remarkable scene occurred. We quote from the New York World:

A TOUCHING SCENE.

On Friday this supreme anxiety of Mr. Van Buren for the restoration of the Union showed itself in an instance which is probably one of the most remarkable in mortuary history. He was feeling physically better. His mind showed however, no decrease of directness or clearness upon general topics, or upon any at all, excepting that singular intensity with which he contemplated the distracted condition of the country. While half reclining, half sitting up, supported by the arm of his daughter and niece on either side, Mr. Van Buren's eye lighted up with an unusual brilliancy, and even in his position he seemed to expand to the eye with the pride and port of the orator of other days. The narrow cabin became a vast auditorium to his view, the few friends a mighty audience, but, more than all, the interests of the country rose supreme in his mind and compelled utterance.—He began a speech on national affairs, and concluded it not until he had spoken without interruption, two and a quarter hours. The gentlemen around his bed say that it was in all respects worthy of, and in some superior to, his happiest efforts. At the first he rapidly and perspicuously photographed the progress, the purposes, and the problems of the late war, and emphasized the pledged faith of the national government that it could and should ultimate only in a secured Union of free and equal States. He then adverted to the efforts of Mr. Johnson to carry out that pledge in letter and spirit, and to have for his inspiration and guide the unmistakable commands of the Constitution, and the generous magnanimity of the people. This part of this most remarkable address was followed by a scarification of Congress in terms of satire, eloquence and reproach, of which none were so capable as he. A rapid review of the policy of reunion and disunion next ensued, and he thought he was once more addressing his fellow-citizens in his native State. The subject was presented with a splendid reference to the natural interests and historic greatness of the Empire State, imperatively demanding that she plant herself square on the side of a perfected Union of equal and honored States. At the close Mr. Van Buren pronounced a eulogy upon the worth, the talent, the integrity of Hon. John T. Hoffman, such as only a man of his strong intimacy with the subject of his praise, and that intensity of personal attachment, of which he developed such a remarkable amount, could so gracefully, so sincerely, and so magnetically pronounce. As a piece of composition, whether viewed as a literary, an argumentative, or an oratorical production, this dying address was in all respects no less a credit to the National reputation of the speaker, than it was a vindication and tribute to the cause and motives that evoked its utterance."

BASE BALL.—The national game of America is now, par excellence, base ball. We can imagine how readily the English game of cricket was transformed into this active game, which is so much more suitable to the habits and temperament of our people. Cricket—although a highly scientific game—is a slow and serious pastime compared with its American prototype. It requires more skill perhaps to play it well, and closer study for the looker on to understand it; but everybody, ladies and all, comprehends the game of base ball, which is a matter of quickness of eye, rapid play of muscle, swiftness of foot, and ever changing position, that carry the interest of the spectator as well as the player directly into the fortunes of the game. Hence our national game chimes exactly with our national characteristics. The phlegmatic element of the Anglo-Saxon family may be fairly represented in the English game of cricket, during which the original Anglo-Saxon can dawdle off and smoke his demonstratic pipe or aristocratic cigar at intervals; but the new branch of the family in America, with young, vigorous blood swelling its veins, wants constant life and motion in its sports. Hence the English game has almost fallen into decay among us, while the American game is every day attracting the interest which but a short time ago attached almost exclusively to the race course, or, among certain classes, to the prize ring.—N. Y. Herald.

ACCOMMODATING HIMSELF TO CIRCUMSTANCES.—The Richmond correspondent of the Danville Register tells the following anecdote about Gen. "Allegheny" Johnson, on the march to Bristoe station in the fall of 1863. The General was riding along the road, and perceiving one of his men up a persimmon tree, hallooed out to him:

"I say there, what are you doing up there? Why ain't you with your regiment?"

"I'm gettin' simmons, I am," replied the soldier.

"Persimmons, thunder! They are not yet ripe. They are not fit to eat."

"Yes, but general," persisted the Confed, I'm trying to draw my stomach up to the size of my rations. If it stays like it is now I shall starve."

The General had nothing further to say, but rode on.

SILK GROWING IN ALABAMA.—Mr. Wiley Duffy, of Davideon, Tallapoosa county, was in our office yesterday and exhibited a number of skeins of sewing silk of all colors. They were spun by his wife, and equal the silk which is brought by our merchants from the North. Mr. Duffy is able to sell them under the market price. Last year Mr. Duffy's wife sold silk thread to the value of $180. When we reflect that the mulberry grows luxuriantly on the hills of Alabama, and that the labor of spinning the silk is but slight, the whole work of feeding the silk worm and gathering the cocoons occupy but four months of the year, and when we reflect furthermore that $180 will supply meat and bread enough to a large family for the year, we would advise our people of the hills who are in want to plant mulberry orchards and spin silk.—Montgomery Mail, Oct. 6.

As Beast Butler was driving from his hotel in Columbus, Ohio, to the depot, a man in great haste ran from the sidewalk into the street, stopped the carriage, and exclaimed, holding up a thirty spood: "Here, General, here's something you dropped."

In consequence of the bonds and liens, held by the State on various Rail Road Companies, having been in part executed during the late war, I have concluded not to offer them for exchange until the reception of special instructions from the General Assembly.

I have deferred the time of opening bids in order that parties interested might have opportunity of examining the reports of the various Companies for the present year, which no doubt can be obtained from the proper officers of the Companies.

INFALLIBLE YEAST POWDERS.

Scientific men, who thoroughly understand the subject, concur with great unanimity in saying that nothing exerts such a deleterious influence against health as bad bread. The remedy is at hand in SIMPSON'S INFALLIBLE YEAST POWDERS, the value of which is thus certified:

RALEIGH, Aug. 24, 1866.

I have tested the Yeast Powders you manufacture and can recommend them as vastly superior to any other ever used by me. In addition to the lightness and sweetness of the bread, the powders are economical, as one-third the lard usually required will answer in the making of either loaf bread or biscuit. For pastry and cakes they are excellent.

VINCENT A. ORR.

The price of these powders per package is 25 cts. or 75 cts. per pound. To be had at Wm. Simpson's Confectionary Store, Fayetteville Street, Raleigh, N. C.

RALEIGH, Aug. 23, 1866.

This is to certify that I have used Mr. Simpson's Yeast Powders and find them to be superior to any I have ever used. After trying them once no housekeeper will be satisfied without them.

MRS. S. D. HARRIS.

RALEIGH, Aug. 23, 1866.

MRS. RANSOM'S SEMINARY,

WILMINGTON, N. C.

THE buildings being completed and my teachers having arrived, I have opened my Seminary for Girls and Young Ladies near the corner of Third and orange streets, Wilmington, N. C.

Everything will be taught which can be desired in the thorough education of a lady.

It will be to the advantage of all, that the pupils be entered as early as possible.

Owing to the scarcity of money, my terms in the English studies will be seventy-five dollars, and in the Primary Department fifty dollars per year.

For further particulars apply to the Principal.
