HE GAVE ME A BOOK THIS MORNING

This poem was written on New Year's Day by Mr. James M. Carr, of Berryville, Va., nephew of Sampson.

The old book is closed.
It closed last night at twelve.
It's filled with happy memories—
Memories which last year brought,
Memories of hope and love,
Memories of faith and service,
Memories fo words spoken of Jesus
Memories of people who love me,
Memories of those I love.
For these, dear Lord, I thank thee.

But Ah!
That book has other memories—
Memories of deeds undone,
Of many kind words unspoken,
Of resolutions broken,
Memories of sin and failure,
Of anger and envy and greed,
Three hundred and sixty five pages
And each page has a stain,
For I have not kept them all clean,
Each day, O Master, I've sinned.

That book which thou gavest is finished.
How poor it is thou dost know.
But this prayer I make as I close it
"Dear Lord, Forgive."

He gave me a new book this morning
A book with all pages white
It's filled with hopes and ambitions
And ideals so pure and bright.
Help me to keep it so clean,
This new book thou gavest me.
Help me to fill it with love
And service, O Master, for Thee.
Help me to keep selfishness out,
And greed and envy and lust.
Help me to fill it with faith
And hope and sincerity and trust.

Each day this year may I find Thee
And honor Thee with my all,
In service for Thee, O Master,
E'er true to Thy loving call.
And then, when this book is ended,
When the last page is done,
May I hear Thy blessed approval,
"Good and faithful servant, well done."

JAMES M. CARR.

A New Year's Prayer

To grow a little wiser day by day,
To school my mind and body to obey,
To keep my inner life both clean and strong,
To free my lips from guile, my hands from wrong,
To shut the door on hate, and scorn, and pride,
To open them to love the windows wide,
To greet with cheerful heart what comes to me,
To turn life's discords into harmony,
To share some weary workers heavy load,
To point some straying comrade to the road,
To know that what I have is not my own,
To feel that I am never quite alone,
This would I pray from day to day—for then I know My life will flow in peace, until it be God's will I go.

PEASANT FROCK

Designed in sizes: 4, 6, 8 and 10 years. Size 6 requires 1¾ yards of 35 inch material for the jumper and 1 yard for the contrasting blouse, with ½ yards of ribbon for trimming.

Pattern 8381—The vogue for peasant style of frocks is shown in many ways, but one of its most fetching examples is the little dress sketched.

The upper part of the jumper, which would be a bodice on a grown up, becomes a little palin squared yoke above which the white waist bows. This blouse is sweet on a small child because of its neckline drawn up into gathers by means of the cord or ribbon.

The puff sleves are finished with the same cord and bows which may be in a gay color to tone in with the dress. A cotton material in small gay print is suggested with a white cotton for blouse.

First of the 1935 Airflow Cars

NEW YORK CITY (Special)—Predictions that cars will be even further streamlined next year were verified this week, when the first of the 1935 Airflow cars was previewed by automobile editors behind locked doors at the Waldorf-Astoria Hotel here.

There has been a great deal of conjecture as to what the new 1935 cars would be like, since Walter P. Chrysler announced that his Airflow models would be a permanent part of the Chrysler Motors line.

This new Airflow car is expected to be the most advanced of the streamlined cars to first be viewed by the public in January at the New York Automobile Show. It has been smartly restyled. The editors found that the front of the car had been designed with a narrowed radiator which makes it look considerably longer and smarter than the 1934 model.

It was predicted at the pre-view that most cars next year will follow the Airflow trend. Already a number of the most expensive European models have followed the Airflow design, some almost duplicating in appearance the new De Soto.

Announcement was made at the showing, that because of improved business conditions and the outlook for even greater automobile buying next year, that the De Soto Motor Corporation would also announce another car in January which would be a companion car to the present Airflow line. The new car, it was stated, will have many of the Airflow features of design and construction, but will be considerably lower in price.
