FALLING LEAVES.

They are falling, slowly falling,
Thick upon the dress and pall,
Severed from the noble branches
Where they waved in beauteous pride.
They are falling in the valleys,
Where the early violets spring,
And the birds in sunny spring-time
For their dulcet music sing.

They are falling, sadly falling,
Close beside our cottage door,
Pale and faded like loved ones
They are soon to wander o'er.
They are falling, and the sunbeams
Shine in beauty soft around,
Yet the faded leaves are falling,
Falling on the mossy ground.

They are falling on the streamlets,
Where the silver waters flow,
Andangen their placid bosom
Onward with their waters go.
They are falling in the churchyard,
Where our kindred sweetly sleep,
Where the idle winds of summer
Softly o'er the loved ones sweep.

They are falling, ever falling,
Where the summer breezes sigh,
Where the gems in beauty glisten
Bright upon the mirror sky.
They are falling when the tempest
Moans like ocean's hollow roar!
When the tuneful winds and billows
Sadly sigh for evermore.

They are falling, they are falling
Write our saddened hearts still go
To the sunny days of childhood,
In the dreamy long ago;
And their faded hues remind us
Of the blasted hopes and dreams,
Ended like the faded leaves
Cast upon the icy streams.

CLASS OPINIONS.—A FABLE.—A lamb strayed for the first time into the woods, and excited much discussion among other animals. In a mixed company one day, when he became the subject of friendly gossip, the goat praised him.

"Pooh!" said the lion, "this is too absurd. The beast is a pretty beast enough, but did you hear him roar? I heard him roar, and by the manes of my fathers, when he roars he does nothing but cry ba—a—a!" and the lion bleated his best in mockery, but bleated far from well.

"Nay," said the deer, "I do not think so badly of his voice. I liked it well enough till I saw him leap. He kicks with his hind legs in running, and without his skipping gets over very little ground."

"It is a bad beast altogether," said the tiger. "He cannot roar; he cannot run; he can do nothing; and what wonder? I killed a man yesterday, and in politeness to the new comer offered him a bit, upon which he had the impudence to look disgusted, and say, 'No, sir; I eat nothing but grass.'"

So the beasts criticised the lamb, each in his own way; and yet it was a good lamb, nevertheless."—Charles Dickens.

For Ladies' Goods! For Gentlemen's Goods! For Misses' Goods! For Boys' Goods! Ditto for Children!

What a lucky set of individuals!

Now just let me tell you, that there is more humbug in this. Don't every man, woman and child know that it is humbug—large enough to be seen even with one eye shut? So let them talk, puff and blow, but stay, LOOK OUT! HANDS OFF! and show your good judgment by
