other, to exchange knowledge and insights, skills, innovation and ideas."

According to Joseph Rosenstein, Chairperson of the August Institute, and overall chair of the planning committee, "The most astonishing thing about the Havurah Institute is that the participants give up a week of their precious vacation time to study and prepare courses for which they will receive no credit. They participate joyously, giving enormously of themselves, and deriving the greatest satisfaction and inspiration from their shared efforts."

The morning courses are part of a total program including workshops, forums, entertainment and recreational activities. A special feature of this summer's institutes will be group projects involving institute participants in such activities as the creation of objects of art; dance, music and dramatic performances; the writing of school curricula and creative prayers, as well as many other efforts intended to benefit the entire institute community.

Participants at the Havurah Institute include adults and children (child care and a Jewish program for children from infancy up to the age of 14 is provided); married and single — people ranging in age from their early twenties to their eighties. All find intellectual, social and spiritual stimulation in accordance with their own needs.

Those interested in learning more about the Havurah Summer Institutes or receiving a registration brochure, should contact Helen Rubinstein, The National Havurah Committee, 2521 Broadway, No.25, New York, NY 10025 (212/316-3011).

Israel

crops grow, and new highways multiply. People who came from around the world now share a language and a culture. For some of those, whose dreams were to live a normal life in a Jewish state, the dream has been realized.

But for others the struggle goes on. With the idealism that led the founders of the country to build a Jewish state, they envision a state in which all citizens are treated with justice, in which another people is not kept under permanent suppression.

That is the miracle of Israel: that, despite her accomplishments, the questioning, the soul-searching, and the striving for a more perfect nation go on.
