[From the Hillsboro Recorder.]

THREE DEAD INDIANS.

THE FRESHET OF NEW HOPE—EIGHTEEN INDIAN GRAVES DISCOVERED.

New Hope is a little branch, country folks would call a river. It gurgles and winds its way within five miles of Chapel Hill and ten miles of Hillsborough. The little stream has been on a big spree, had a big freshet, and played the deuce with the crops and the bridges, and beside has unearthed a bend of that country on which was once established an Indian town. After the water had fallen and gone into its banks there were discovered eighteen Indian graves all laid out in regular platter three feet apart one way and five feet the other. Three of these graves were opened.

AND THREE DEAD INDIANS

were found sitting in their skeletons. Their knees drawn up to the stomach and their heads facing the east. They were beads around the neck and shoulders that were kept in the soil perfect and are now in our charge to show to any one that desires to see. These Indians were wrapped in a matting made out of flag and plaitted together, a piece of which was found preserved in one of their graves and is now to be seen in our possession. There were six or seven different kinds of beads around their necks—some blue glass and others out of soapstone or lime stone. There were also two pieces of potter ware with unexplainable hieroglyphics carved on them found in the graves, two pieces of small copper pipe, and another piece of small pipe made exactly in the shape and likeness of a little bugle. The skulls were the thickest for human beings that you ever saw and the bones were exceedingly large.

TRADITION.

John Patterson, the grandfather of Maj. W. N. Patterson of this county, came into possession of this bend of creek land in the year 1751. Indians were there then, and there was but one white man there named Baker who lived in a little bend of the creek. Baker's land was the only land cut down and cleared up and to this day that bend is known as "Baker's Corner." There is still the hollow rock near Mann Patterson's old mill which extends a mile down the creek bank and there is a walk-way underneath the rock. Pigeon holes are cut all about in this rock which tradition says the Indians used to hide their tobacco and sugar and coffee in. A traveler named Lawson speaks of this hollow rock in a history of his travels through that section nearly a century ago. He says it was a "one eyed tribe" of Indians who inhabited there; that he was detained there three days and in his explorings of the place an Indian guide carried him to this rock and as soon as they came in sight of the rock the Indian ran to it and spit on it for what reason is unknown.

Not more than fifty steps opposite where these graves were found is a hanging rock that juts two [illegible] into the creek and under it is a hole of water very deep. Maj. Patterson says that when he was a boy the old negroes said that the Indians used to cut somersaults from the hanging rock into the hole below—but, said the Major, we boys were always afraid to take the leap—it was too high. Major Patterson has kindly left in our charge all the relics we have mentioned where they can be examined by any who are curious.

THE BURIED TREASURE AND ARCHIVES OF CONFEDERACY.—The Theta Delta Chi fraternity, which met at the Astor House, New York, in February last, listened to an oration by Wm. L. Stone, who, in the course of some interesting reminiscences of the rebellion spoke of David Tilghman as the officer selected by the Confederate Government to take charge of its treasure and archives.

On the morning of Mr. Davis's capture, says Mr. Stone, Tilghman waited upon him at his bedside and said: Mr. Davis, by this map you may see that the enemy are here, such and such is the situation of the roads. If you come with me you will be able to leave the country in safety. If you do not, you will be captured in five hours. To Mr. Davis replying curtly, that he knew his own business best, Tilghman continued: Very well, sir; I have been entrusted with the treasure and archives, and propose to secure them, even at the peril of the loss of your favor and of my life. I shall start at once by the route I have marked out."

The result is well known. In less than five hours Mr. Davis was a prisoner, but the archives were safe.—When, a few weeks after, in the recesses of the forest, Tilghman learned that all was lost, he alone, and with his own hands, buried the treasure and archives; and, unless, during the four days that elapsed between parting with me and his untoward death, he revealed the spot, the secret as to the whereabouts of the archives is forever buried; and as long as they shall be kept from the pen of man so long shall the story be a monument to our Brother's unswerving fidelity. This is the true history of the archives of the Southern Confederacy, although rumors are from time to time set afloat of their being now in the vaults of this bank and now of that.

The fashionable shoe for ladies is made seven inches high, with an inch and a half heel, a Spanish instep, arched sole, a movable heel of gilt or silver, with an India rubber tip to deaden the sound; and they cost from $8 to $20 a pair.

In the bull fighting days, a blacksmith, who was rearing a bull pup, indoced his old father to get on his all-fours and insulate the bull. The canine pupil pinned the old man by the seat. The son, fearing the paternal tearing, exclaimed, "Hold him, father! hold him! bear it, brother, bear it! it'll be the making of the pup.

Mark Twain thinks that rain water is not reliable for a steady drink. It is too gassy. The next morning after drinking thirty-eight bottles he found himself full of gas, and as tight as a balloon. He hated to sacrifice an article of clothing he could wear, except an umbrella.

The fly has let loose. He seems to keep bald headed sinners awake at church on a warm day, so that their unregenerate hearts may be touched by the pleaded word.

Thirty-four persons killed and another wounded by lightning while repairing a barn in Chicago Saturday.
