JOSIAH TURNER, JR., EDITOR.

NEW YEAR'S DAY IN 1790.

The levees of President Washington were far more select and rational than those of the same officer have been for the last few years. They were numerously attended by all that was fashionable, elegant, and refined in society; but there were no places for the intrusion of the rabble in crowds, or for the mere coats and boisterous partisan—the vulgar electioneerer—or the impudent place-hunter with boots and frock coat, or with patched knees, and noses at their elbows. On the contrary, they were select, and more courtly than have been given by any of his successors. Proud of her husband's exalted fame, and jealous of the honors due not only to his own lofty station, but to the dignified station to which a grateful country had called him, Mrs. Washington was careful in her drawing-rooms to exact those courtesies to which she knew he was entitled, as well on account of personal merit as of official consideration. Fortunately, moreover, democratic rudeness had not then so far gained the ascendancy as to banish good manners; and the charms of social intercourse were heightened by a reasonable attention, in the best circles, to those forms and usages which indicate the well-bred assemblage, and fling around it an air of elegance and ease at which only the envious affect to decry, and only the innately vulgar ridicule and contemn. Nose, therefore, were admitted to the levees but those who had either a right by official station to be there, or were entitled to the privilege by established merit and character; and full dress was required of all. In those days, also, late hours were not necessary to fashion; and many of our fair metropolitan readers, who are in the habit of dressing at 10 to enter a drawing room at 11, will doubtless be surprised to learn that Mrs. Washington's levees closed always at 9.

This was a rule which that distinguished lady established on the occasion of holding her first levee, on the evening of January 1st, 1790. The President's residence was in the old Franklin House, in this city, at the head of Cherry street. The day was uncommonly mild and pleasant. It was full moon, and the air so bland and serene that the ladies alleyed to their light summer dresses. Introduced by the aids and gentlemen in waiting, after being seated, tea, coffee, pies and plum cakes were handed round. Familiar and friendly conversation ensued, and kind enquiries, on the part of Mr. Washington, after the families of the exiles, with whom she had been acquainted during the Revolutionary war, and she always received marked attention from General Washington. Mrs. Washington stood by the side of the General in receiving the respects of the visitors. And the social chit-chat of the company the clock struck nine. Mrs. Washington then rose with dignity, and looking around the circle with a complacent smile, observed, "The General always retires at nine, and I usually precede him." At this hint the ladies instantly rose, adjusted their dresses, made their salutations, and retired.

General Washington had, on that day, been waited upon by the principal gentlemen of the city, according to the ancient New York custom of social and convivial visiting on that day. After being severally introduced, and paying the usual compliments of the season, the citizens mutually interchanged their kind greetings, and withdrew highly gratified by the friendly notice of the President, to most of whom he was personally a stranger. In the course of the evening, while speaking of the occurrances of the day, Mrs. Washington remarked, "Of all the incidents of the day, none so pleased the General"—by which title she always designated him—"as the friendly greetings of the gentlemen who visited him at noon." To the inquiry of the President whether it was usual or customary, he was answered that it was an annual custom derived from our Dutch forefathers, which had always been commemorated. After a short pause, he observed—"The highly favored situation of New York will in the process of years, attract numerous emigrants, who will gradually change its ancient customs and manners; but whatever changes take place, never forget the cordial, cheerful observance of New Year's Day."

THE END OF TIME.

The "end of time" is again prescribed, though the last day is not fixed. One "J. T." publishes his assurance that the "harvest of the world" is approaching. Let sinners repent and saints exult. The subjoined passage from the eleventh chapter of the Revelation he expounds as applicable to the war in Europe:

And the nation were angry, and Thy wrath, O Lord God Almighty, is come, and the time of the dead that they should be judged, and that Thou shouldst give reward Thy servants the prophets, and to the saints, and to them that fear Thy name, small and great, and shouldst destroy them that destroy the earth.

He quotes again: "Three unclean spirits, like frogs working miracles." He says that ever since the Franks migrated from the swamps of Westphalia the frog has been their heraldic symbol. The miracles these frogs work are to be taken as marvels of wickedness, rather than of supernatural results. These marvel workers are the Red Republicans, represented by Mazzini, Castellar, Garibaldi, Gambetta, and their fellows.

The awful interest with which we naturally contemplate the final end introjates the too earnest student of prophecy. It has even usurped a great integration here and there, for ages back, and has yielded but little to the promise of science that the world is yet in the morning. The profound and plausible expositions of Bishop Newton, more than those that his illustrious namesake, the philosopher, wrote of the Revelation, make him almost a prophet of the current calamities of Europe, in his interpretations of Scripture. The early Christians lived in habitual readiness for the last of events. Tradition tells that when dame and gloom maddened the people of Pompeii and Herculaneum, the few Christians came forth, sought and found each other, and marched in solemn procession amid the fatal shower of ashes, raised the hymn of faith, above all horror, and went to meet with unshrinking trust the very world's destruction. It is believed that Paul and his principal adjuvants considered the temporal creation near its doom. Several times during the middle ages the expectation was almost universal, and the fact is seldom recognized in all its power that the Puritans believed their lot cast in the latter days.

GRAND LODGE OF N. C.
OFFICE OF GRAND SECRETARY,
RALEIGH, Dec. 28th 1870.
To the Masonic Fraternity in North Carolina:

THE Grand Lodge of Masons of North Carolina having determined to celebrate the centennial anniversary of the date of its Charter, on the 14th day of January next, all Master Masons in regular standing are fraternally invited to take part in the ceremonies on that occasion.

Masons at a distance who may visit this city with the view of participating in these ceremonies can travel over the several Railroads in the State for one fare, by procuring return tickets.

The following resolution was adopted at the late Annual Communication of the Grand Lodge:

RESOLVED, That all the Subordinate Lodges in the State be requested to celebrate the one hundredth anniversary of this Grand Lodge on the 14th day of January next."

Notwithstanding the action of the Grand Lodge as set forth in the foregoing resolution, it is desired that the Lodges generally throughout the jurisdiction be represented in this city on the day designated, in order to secure a demonstration creditable to the Grand Lodge and commensurate with the occasion.

The programme will be published in due time by the committee of arrangements.

WE see a great deal in the papers about the coming exhibition of Col. Simon Hayes' New Circus, &c. When it does come, it will no doubt be a grand affair, for the Colonel is some in his role and says, and does a great many funny things. Besides all this the Colonel is the best looking man in town, which is accountable for from the fact that he is a pat on of PINK C. HARDIE.

Now let me say a word or two about my own exhibition. I have on exhibition the finest stock of Cigars in the State, and at the lowest prices.

I have on exhibition the largest and best assorted stock of Smoking Tobacco in the State.

I have on exhibition the finest stock of Chewing Tobacco in the City.

Also, Pipes of all kinds. I am daily stocking the celebrated Sally Mitchell and Burnett Pipes. Everybody knows these goods, therefore, it is needless for me to puff them here.
