New B.W.I. University Serves Caribbean Area

KINGSTON, Jamaica — Princess Alice of Atmione, cousin of King George VI, was installed recently, as Chancelor of the New University College of the West Indies, in Jamaica.

Following the installation ceremony the Princess visited a number of British West Indian territories. A feature of her tour were visits to schools and colleges which in due course will send students to the University College.

Now in its second academic year, the new University College is already becoming a cultural center for the 2,000,000 square miles of the British West Indies. Among its student body are students drawn from every part of the Caribbean area, from Honduras on the Central American mainland to British Guiana, 1,600 miles away.

The University is situated on a 670 acre site at the foot of the Blue Mountains, six miles from Kingston, Jamaica. Until the permanent buildings are completed, work is being carried on in temporary houses on the main site. Main buildings for the University and Teaching Hospital are scheduled for completion by the end of 1953.

It is planned to expand the student body to 700 as quickly as possible. Of these about 200 will be studying medicine and among the 70 students already in residence the majority are studying for the first and second parts of the Bachelor of Medicine degree. Once the figure of 700 has been reached, expansion will proceed more slowly, but by 1960 it is hoped there will be a student body of 1,500.

A new Faculty of Natural Science has been started this year and many of the students are working for the London Bachelor of Science degree in preparation for become ma science teachers. The teaching staff now includes 2 West Indians who won scholarship to British Universities, and teaching for the London Bachelor of Arts degree is expected to begin next year.

The purpose of the new University College is to provide an institution of higher learning for the whole Carribean area. The University will at first prepare its students for the London University examinations but will later become an independent university granting its own degrees.

Proposed layout of the permanent buildings includes a central nucleus of the main convocation hall, art, library and administration buildings, students' hostels, halls of residence students' union, science buildings, art gallery and museum. The capita cost is being paid for by the British Government while recurrent costs will be borne by the West Indian Governments.

An important part of the University's work will be undertaken by the Department of Extra-mural Studies, which has already appointed seven extension teachers, one for each of the territories or groups of territories concerned. The Carnegie Corporation of New York has granted money to finance the training of part-time teachers employed by the Extra-Mural Department.

The University has already received several valuable gifts from private individuals and organizations. These include a house with about 20 acres of land in Jamaica, funds towards the building of sports grounds, and buildings, collections of books for the library, and the promise of sets of publications by the National Academy of Science in the United States, and the Carnegie Institute of Washington.

S. C. TEACHER SPEAKS AT NCC

DURHAM, N. C. — Dr. Louis K. McMillan, German-educated professor of History at South Carolina State College, inaugurated North Carolina College's pre-Spring forum committee lectures heard in Duke Auditorium Monday with a grim picture of postwar German education.

Dr. McMillan visited Germany last Summer.

According to Dr. McMillan, who earned his doctorate at the University of Bonn, shapers of educational policy in postwar Germany are "either senile old men, inexperienced young men, or frustrated old women."

In general, the historian charged "continuation of medievalismL ed. German education today is a "continuation of medievalism which discourages a realistic appraisal of world wide intellectual trends and is ill-adapted to produce the kind of democratic thinking or action which in America is usually held to be the oal of popular education."

McMillan's speech was the first in a series which will bring to the North Carolina College campus the Hon. M. Joseph Charles, Haitian ambassador tothe United States on April 28; Phillips Russell, the noted University of North Carolina Biographer, on Aprial 24; W. Tom Bost, dean of North Carolina newspapermen on March 3; Mrs. Harriet Pressley, director of women's affairs for Radio Station WPTF on March 6; and Dr. Anne Cooke of Howard University on April 17.

A tribute to the Negro press ushering in observances of National Negro Newspaper Week featured a panel discussion on February 27 of "The Role of the Negro Press in Making Democracy Work." Participants included L. E. Austin, editor-publisher of the Carolina Times; A. M. Rivera, Carolina's manager of the Pittsburgh Courier; and Charles A. Ray, director of the North Carolina College News Bureau.

YOUTH PASSES NAVY EXAM

NEW ORLEANS (ANP) — Elmer St. Elmo Dupre, 17-year-old New Orleans high school youth, was the only Negro among the 60 successful candidates in the state of Louisiana who passed the Naval Reserve Officers Training corps examination, it was announced last week by the National Urban League.

Dupre and 104 other Negro youths from the New Orleans area took the NROTC examination under the sponsorship of the New Orleans Urban League as a phase of its education and vocational guidance programs.

According to the latest official reports from Navy sources, Dupre is the only Negro from a southern state and one of the two Negroes in the nation to pass the NROTC examination. He is a graduate of Christ Christ Grammar School and Xavier University Preparatory school and is the son of A. L. Dupree here.

Further the examination entitles Elmer Dupre to a college education which will qualify him for a commission in the Naval Reserve upon graduation.

D. C. PARENTS ASK FOR MORE SCHOOLS

WASHINGTON (ANP) — A group of 20 Negro and white parents of southeast Washington called upon members of the House of Representatives, District of Columbia sub-committee on Appropriations last Tuesday to request additional schools in that section of the city.

In a statement made to the five members of the subcommittee, the delegation declared that the worst overcrowding in elementary schools in the entire District of Columbia exists in the Congress Heights and Potterson elementary schools.

These two schools have a combined capacity of 1296 and a combined enrollment of 2341, with 1350 children on part-time schedules. They pointed out that the Negro junior high students are housed in the totally inadequate Turner elementary school, and many others travel outside of southeast to attend schools since there is no junior high school for Negroes in southeast Washington.

These parents not only requested appropriation for the construction of new schools to relieve the current overcrowded situation but also the consideration of integrating the school systems at the earliest possible date.

"It is our conviction that Congress must end the undemocratic and costly dual school system" the statement read. "We want our children to go to school together and to learn to live together democratically and harmoniously. As taxpayers, we know that the dual school system is expensive and inefficient. For example, we have shown that the Anacostia High School will soon be too small to accommodate the white children in southeast. We have demonstrated that the Negro children in southeast need a high school now. The obvious solution is one big new high school for all children."

The delegation headed by Mrs. Edith Scharport and Joseph Quander reported that Cong. Joe B. Bates of Kentucky, chairman of the subcommittee, said he would look into the situation and try to give them some relief. The two committee members which seemed the most sympathetic were Steven R. Yates, Democrat of Illinois and Foster Wheeler Democrat of Massachusetts. Yates claimed that the answer to such problems could best be solved through Home Rule which he favors. With an effective Home Rule, citizen would be in a better position to get some of the things they want in the District of Columbia, he said. Rep. Fureolo promised to make a tour of the section of the city at a very early date and get a first-hand account of the school situation there.

The least interested Congressman was Rep. Ralph E. Church, a consistant enemy of progress (R., Ill.) whom they reported as being on committee on the conditions of District schools. He promised the delegation, however, that he might come with Mr. Fureolo on this tour if it was convenient.

India Ends Last Of Foreign Ties

BY LAWRENCE C. BURR

NEW DELHI, India (ANP) — Twenty years after Mahatma Gandhi declared this nation's intention to become free, the Republic of India was born.

Following the wake of a long series of events culminating in the achievement of independence in 1947, the establishment of the republic breaks the last bit of foreign control exercised in the internal affairs of Asia's leading free nation.

Excelled only by nationwide celebrations in 1947, this occasion provoked responses from the people never before imagined possible. Throughout the nation various forms of observances were organized. Swearing-in ceremonies of newly elected national and provincial officials highlighted the festivities. India's 350 million citizens of color are on the march towards a wider meaning of demoratic government.

The influence of Englands' parliamentary system of government is the dominant force in the newly written constitution. Dr. Rapendra Prasad, an outstanding member of the Congress party, was elected the first president of the republic by members of the Constituent assembly. Succeeding C. Rajagopachariar, the last governor general of the interim government, Prasad is likely to become as important in India politics as George Washington became in the annals of American history.

Though only a constitutional office, the first Indian president is likely to wield tremendous influence in the affairs of state. He commands very great respect from all sections of the Hindu community.

In parliamentary government it is the Prime Minister and his party, not the president, who is in command of national affairs. Pandit Nehru, one of the world's ablest statesmen, will remain at his post through the emerging government.

Wallabhai Sardar Patel, the Home Prime Minister, will lead the Congress party during the coming five years term of office. In spite of the many difficult problems facing the union these leaders are expected to harness the resources of the nation in its quest for freedom. Sovereignty Absolute; No Allegiance to Commonwealth.

The anomaly of India's position is the fact that, though remaining in the British Commonwealth of Nations, no allegiance to the King is undertaken. Except for this instance every remaining member of the commonwealth swears allegiance to him. All foreign relations will be handled by the prime minister himself and India will act in its relations to other nations without any reference to commonwealth obligations.

Unlike all the pre-British days though comparatively free experienced no such freedom and respect as does the modern political state among the free nations of the world. Taking in charge of her own affairs for only a short period of time, India has been able to build a comparatively stable government. This is due in part to the unity of purpose in driving the foreigner from domination. For this degree of cohesion the Congress party, its leaders and the inspiration of Gandhi are to be lauded.

In the entire sense the United States of America has been referred to as the melting pot of the world. People of several races, cultures and backgrounds have been welded into a unified national government. All speak the same language, owe allegiance to a common flag, and contribute to the development of the world's most powerful capitalistic economy. In the sense that people of different races can come together in one nation, America is the most outstanding example.

India has the very same task in welding people of different religions together into a democratic nation. Sikhs, Hindus, Mussulmans, Jains, Parsees, Christians, and a few other groups determine their political loyalty by religion rather than by nationality. Repeatedly, Nehru has explained the fact that India is conceived as a secular state and not as a religious one. In this way India and Pakistan differ. In view of the presence of many religions, as happened in America, to happen in India. If in the field of race relations and religion, Identification America and India can demonstrate the brotherhood of all mankind, democracy will have winn a great victory.

No other road than Indo-American cooperation lies ahead. India dislikes America's practice of race discrimination very much; however the two nations must discover each other anew in the hope that democratic government will be shared by the nations of the world. The world cannot remain half slave and half free.

SOLON ASSAILS HISTORY OF GWU

WASHINGTON (ANP) — Rep. Arthur G. Klein (D., N. Y.) took a crack at the Secretary of Defense, Washington University, last Wednesday.

In a prepared statement the New York congressman said that on the 216th anniversary of the birth of George Washington — he was pleased to learn of the recent equal opportunity and racial equality in the school for which was named by Washington, and which bears his name in the city which is the nation's capital and which was chartered by Congress over a century ago with a specific prohibition of discrimination.

Referring to the university as the only jim crow institution of higher learning in the District of Columbia, the congressman said that the wrangling among the officials of the university came at a most inopportune time, the week in which we celebrate the memory of the founder of his country, the author of proclaimed Brotherhood week. The week in which the District of Columbia has discovered that its undemocratic pattern of discrimination and segregation is illegal.

Rep. Klein also mentioned the editorial which appeared in the Washington Bulletin, a student weekly publication, some weeks ago which contained that if and since the GWU to remain the "third State" by abandoning its anti-Negro policy. This editorial was endorsed by the Nonpartisan Club, the racial commission of Phi Beta Kappa and a number of Protestant and Jewish student groups. Still there was no reaction from the President of the university until the Jewish press widely reprinted a brief story sent out by a Washington JTA correspondent.

According to Klein, George Washington left 50 shares of C. and O. Canal Company stock to found a college to teach democracy to the people. James Monroe and John Quincy Adams supported and approved Congress College out of which GWU grew.
