Tobacco's Early History

By the time Columbus discovered America, natives of the new land were using tobacco in every form that it is used today.

The Caribs of the West Indies inhaled or snuffed a mixture thru a hollow tube. Aztecs used flavored reed cigarettes.

Indian tribes in what is now the United States and Canada smoked their tobacco in pipes—war pipes, peace pipes and pleasure pipes called "calumets."

Natives of Santo Domingo chewed plugs of tobacco.

Whiteville — L. P. Mangum, of Evergreen, Route 1, has found that sub-soiling tobacco land can pay off handsomely.

According to Cameron M. Garris, assistant agricultural agent in Columbus County, Mangum sub-soiled some of his tobacco land this year and some he didn't. He is expecting $200 to $300 more per acre where he did.
