SELECT MALE SCHOOL AT OXFORD. This School, which hitherto has enjoyed a high degree of prosperity under the conduct of J. H. Horner, A. M., by whom it was originally established, will be opened on the 13th of July, and arranged to prepare boys for the advanced Classes in the University.

For this purpose, Prof. A. G. Brown, whose reputation is well known as a teacher of the Ancient Classics during the last thirteen years at Chapel Hill, will be associated with the present Principal, and Rev. T. J. Horner will continue to be an Assistant Instructor.

The school, as thus organized is designed to be permanent and of the highest grade. As it is divided into a few classes pursuing a regular course of studies, considerable time will be devoted to examination and lecture upon the subject of every lesson by each instructor in his own department.

Important advantages have been secured by the establishment of a Literary Society with its library, and an efficient system of discipline, in which special attention is given to the habits and deportment of the young men who not engaged in the immediate duties of the School.

Its location is very eligible, the climate of Oxford is excellent, and the commodious building, lately erected, stands upon an eminence in a beautiful grove, and near the residence of the Principal and other private families, who will accommodate the students with board.

Two terms of twenty weeks each, commencing with those of the University, compose the scholastic year, and the price of Board and Tuition is ninety dollars a term.

Applications should be made as early as practicable, accompanied in every instance with a statement of the age and proficiency of the applicant.

LOVING AND TRUSTING

When other friends are round thee,
And other hearts are thine;
When other boys have crowned thee
More fresh, more green than mine:
Then think, O! think how lonely,
This throbbing heart must be;
Which, while it beats, beats only,
Beloved one, for thee!

Yet, do not think I doubt thee,
I know thy truth remains;
I would not live without thee,
For all the world contains.
Thou art the star that guides me,
Across life's troubled sea;
And whatever fate betides thee,
This heart will turn to thee.

THE SUMMER NIGHT

O, the summer night,
Hath a smile of light,
And she sits on a sapphire throne,
Whilst the sweet winds load her
With garlands of odor
From the bud of the rose o'erblown!

O, the night! the night!
'Tis a lovely sight,
Whatever the clime or time;
For sorrow then spareth,
And the lover outpoureth
His soul in a star bright rhyme.

It bringeth sleep
To the forest deep,
The forest bird to its nest;
To care bright hours,
And dream of flowers,
And that balm to the weary, rest!

BABY-HANDS.

BY E. P. ROSS.

Fondly clasped together,
Round the mother's neck,
What a pretty picture
Baby hands do make!
But baby-hands don't always
So innocent appear;
For often full of mischief
Baby-fingers are.

For example, see them
At the supper table,
Doing all the mischief
That to do they're able.
Smash! there lies a tea-cup
Shattered on the floor;
Or see the milk from the pitcher
Prematurely pour.

Twisting now the handle
Of the rattle-box,
Or with it giving pussy
Agonizing knock;
Jerking mother's ear-rings,
Pulling father's hair,
Or scratching Johnnies eyes out,
What a roguish pair!

Crack! "there goes the mirror!
What won't he next destroy?
Who gave the child the hair brush?
'Tis no baby's toy!
Goodness! did you ever!
There the instand goes!
Just as I expected,——
Now look at your chair"

Pulling now the stockings
Off his baby feet,
And cramming them into baby mouth—
"O! the little sweet!
Down the stair-way venturing,
No danger does he reck;
"Mercy on me! surely
He'll break his precious neck."

Now a perch i' the window,
Patting against the pane,
For just in sight is father
Coming up the lane,
Always making mischief,
Heeding no commands,
Till in a baby slumber
Bound are baby-hands.

A STORY FOR APRIL

A little girl, whom people may have observed selling violets around the New York Hotel, offered a bunch the other day to a gentleman and lady who were staying at that establishment, as they were returning from a walk.

"Please buy my violets, sir," said the little one, holding up a purple bunch that still seemed to have the dew upon it. "Please buy my violets—only a sixpence a bunch."

"No go away, child," said the lady, rather harshly. "I don't want them."

"My dear," remarked the gentleman, mildly, "you have spoken rather harshly to the poor child; see, her eyes are filled with tears."

The lady looked around. The little violet girl, whose eyes were as dark as the flowers she sold, was weeping silently. In an instant Mrs. Y's warm Southern nature gushed out, and turning back, she clasped the poor child in her arms, and endeavored to assuage her grief.

"How very, very like our poor Alfred this child is," said Mrs. Y., looking attentively in the face of the violet girl. Alfred was their only son, who had come to New York some five or six years ago, where he died of dissipation.

Mr. Y., attracted by his wife's exclamation, examined the little girl attentively.

"There is a strong likeness," he replied.

They questioned her. She had little to tell.—Her mother and father were both dead. She was not certain but her father's name was Y——. It was enough. The old lady and gentleman took the child between them in a carriage, and straightway, drove to the house of her grandmother, with whom she said she lived. There they discovered that their son had absolutely been married; some time before his death, to a pretty sewing-girl, who did not long survive him, and who died leaving behind her this one child. Mr. and Mrs. Y. were rich and childless. This little creature ragged and uneducated, was more welcome to them than a fortune. She was instantly washed and dressed, and teachers had for her. Her fortunes changed as the seasons changed. It had been winter with her for a long time, and now it was May. I have no doubt but, in a few years, I shall have the pleasure of dancing with her at some ball in the Fifth Avenue.—Ex.

A YOUNG LADY MURDERED—Suicide of the Murderer.—A melancholy transaction occurred at Rabbit Creek, Umpque county, Oregon, on the 26th ult. A man named G. H. Yates, called at the residence of Mr. Anderson, where a young woman, sister of Mrs. Anderson, was living, and after interrogating her as to whether she would marry him, received an answer "that at present it was impossible—she could not;" on which he drew a revolver and fired at her, the ball entering her right side, killing her instantly. He then drew a small single-barrelled pistol and discharged its contents at his own head. The ball entered a little above the right eye and lodged within the cranium. He died a few hours after.

Of the twenty-three millions of dollars in the Treasury of the United States, there are at New York over eleven millions, almost one-half; at Philadelphia, two millions and a half; at New Orleans three millions, and at San Francisco one million and a half.

PARKS.

"London," says Downing, "has over six thousand acres, either within its own limits or in the accessible suburbs, open to the enjoyment of its population, and six thousand acres composed, too, either of the grandest and most lovely park scenery, like Kensington and Richmond, or of luxuriant gardens, filled with rare plants, hot houses, and hardy shrubs, and trees, like the National Gardens at Kew.

"Paris has its garden of the Tuileries, whose alleys are lined with orange trees two hundred years old, whose parterres are gay with the brightest flowers, whose cool groves of horse chestnuts, stretching out to the Elysian fields, are in the very midst of the city. Yes! and on its outskirts are Versailles—three thousand acres of imperial groves and gardens there also—and Fontainebleau, and St. Cloud, with all the rural, scenic and palatial beauty that the opulence of the most profuse of French monarchs could create, all open to the people of Paris.

"Vienna has its great Prater, to make which would swallow up most of the 'unimproved' part of New York city. Munich has a superb pleasure ground of five hundred acres, which makes the Arcadia of her citizens. Even the smaller towns are provided with public grounds, to an extent that would beggar the imagination of our short-sighted economists who would deny a 'greenery' to New York. Frankfort, for example, is skirted by the most beautiful gardens, formed upon the platform which made the old ramparts of the city—gardens filled with the loveliest flowers and shrubs, tastefully grouped along walks over two miles in extent."

INTRODUCTION OF YANKEE DOODLE TO EUROPE. During the negotiations, at Ghent, of that treaty of peace to which I have just alluded, a festival or banquet or it may have been a ball, was about to take place, at which it was proposed to pay the customary musical compliment to all the Sovereigns who were either present or represented on the occasion. The Sovereign people of the United States—represented there, as you remember, by Mr. Adams, Mr. Bayard, Mr. Clay, Mr. Jona. Russell, and Mr. Gallatin, were, of course not to be overlooked; and the musical conductor or band master of the place called upon the commissioners to furnish him with our national air. Our national air, said they, is Yankee Doodle. Yankee Doodle, said the conductor, what is that? Where shall I find it? By whom was it composed? Can you supply me with the score? The perplexity of the Commissioners may be better conceived than described. They were fairly at their wit's ends.—They had never imagined that they should have scores of this sort to settle and each turned to the other in despair. At last they bethought them, in a happy moment, that there was a colored servant of Mr. Clay's who, like so many of his race was a first rate whistler, and who was certain to know Yankee Doodle by heart. He was sent for accordingly, and the problem was solved without delay. The band master jotted down the air, as the colored boy whistled it, and before night, said Mr. Adams, Yankee Doodle was set to so many parts that you would hardly have known it, and it came out the next day in all the pride, pomp and circumstance of viol and hautboy, of drum, trumpet and cymbal, to the edification of the Allied Sovereigns of Europe, and to the glorification of the United Sovereigns of America.—R. C. Winthrop's Address at the Boston Musical Festival.

FATE OF THE APOSTLES.—St. Matthew is supposed to have suffered martyrdom or was put to death by the sword at the city of Ethiopia.

St. Mark was dragged through the streets of Alexandria, in Egypt, till he expired.

St. Luke was hanged upon an olive tree, in Greece.

St. John was put into a caldron of boiling oil at Rome and escaped death. He afterwards died a natural death at Ephesus, in Asia.

St. James the Great was beheaded at Jerusalem.

St. James the Less was thrown from a pinnacle or wing of the temple, and then beaten to death with a fuller's club.

St. Philip was hanged up against a pillar at Hierapolis, a city of Phyrgia.

St. Bartholowmew was flayed alive by the command of a barbarous king.

St. Andrew was bound to a cross, whence he preached to the people till he expired.

St. Thomas was run through the body by a lance, near Maliper, in the East Indies.

St. Jude was shot to death with arrows.

St. Simeon Zelotes was crucified in Persia.

St. Matthias was stoned and then beheaded.

Wm. H. Howard, late of Ocracoke, N. C., was thrown from his carriage near Micanopy, Fla., recently, and killed.
