The Wonder of the Age.

NO PAY!

IF Dr. Tobias' celebrated Venetian Liniment does not cure Cholera, Dysentery, Cramp, Colic, Cramps, Dyspepsia, Vomiting, Mumps, Toothache, Headache Chapped Hands, Cold Feet, Mosquito Bites, Insect Stings, Chronic Rheumatism, Swellings, Old Sores, Cuts, Burns, Bruises, and Pains or Weakness in the Limbs, Back and Chest.

NO HUMBUG—TRY IT.

Dr. Tobias has warranted his Liniment for eight years without ever having a demand made for the return of the money—all that is asked is to use it according to the directions.

NO ONE WILL EVER BE WITHOUT IT

After once using it. If you do not find it better than anything you have ever tried before.

GET YOUR MONEY RETURNED.

Thousands of Certificates have been received speaking of its rare virtues. Now a days it is the practice to fill the papers with certificates from unknown persons, or given by those who have never used the medicine—now Dr. Tobias offers to say to any one who will prove that he ever published a false certificate during the time he has had his medicine before the Public.

1,000 DOLLARS

Call on the agents and get a Pamphlet containing genuine certificates. As persons curious of the large sale of the Venetian Liniment have stated it is injurious to take it internally, Dr. Tobias has taken the following

OATH,

I, Samuel I Tobias, of the City of New York, being duly sworn do depose that I compound a Liniment called Venetian, and that the ingredients of which it is composed are perfectly harmless to take internally, even in double the quantity named in the Direction accompanying each bottle.

New York, January 9th, 1856.

S. I. TOBIAS.

Sworn to this day before me,
Fernando Wood, Mayor.

Price 25 & 50 cents, sold by the druggists and Patent Medicine Dealers throughout the United States.

Also for sale Dr. Tobias' Horse Liniment in pint Bottles at 50 cents, warranted superior to any other.

ERNEST LINWOOD,

By Caroline Lee Hentz.

ALTHOUGH but a single month has passed since the first copy of this brilliant book was issued, yet so great has been the demand for the latest and most beautiful work from the pen of its lamented authoress, that we are now printing the

TWENTIETH THOUSAND,

with an unabated demand still pressing on. Since the days of the Lamplighter, no book has sold so rapidly, or become so universally popular.

Col. Fuller of the New York Mirror, in one of the most elegant articles ever penned, in regard to authors or their productions, uses the following beautiful language:

Ernest Linwood.

"Death darkens his eye, unplumes his wings,
But the sweetest song is the last he sings."

In the volume entitled "Ernest Linwood," just issued by Jewett & Co., of Boston, we have the dying song of the elegant and gifted Mrs. Caroline Lee Hentz.—Mournfully sweet like the sigh of an Æolian lyre, yet deep and oracular as the voice of many waters, it seems to have been poured forth while her soul floated down to the ocean of Rest. On almost every page we can trace the shadow of the death-angel, who bore her away when her song was ended. Mysterious gleams from beneath the uplifting veil of Spiritland stare at us as we read. The book is a broad-cast farewell—a lingering hand-grasp from one we love. If as mistaken, its impressive passages are revelations of the inner life of the writer—wonderfully vivid and absorbing, because wonderfully real.

We will not attempt to follow out, in this notice, the thread of an inimitable tale; in so doing we should only anticipate scenes and events, which come, with beautiful linkings and fine effect, before the eye of the reader. We would not rub the bloom of half its charm.

Sweet Gabriella Lynn will tell her own story.

SPRING GOODS FOR 1856.

At No. 29 Cheap Place.

One Door above R. Smith's Corner.

I AM now receiving my SPRING AND SUMMER STOCK OF FANCY and STAPLE DRY GOODS, Hats, Boots, Shoes, Bonnets, &c, &c. which I intend selling at Reduced Prices to punctual buyers who will pay when called on, and especially to those who buy with Cash.

I deem it unnecessary to enumerate articles. My Stock is Large and well assorted, and I want the money for them by the 1st of August next; and to enable me to get it, I intend selling Goods a little cheaper for CASH this reason than they have been sold in this market heretofore.

Some of our Newspapers are adopting the Cash system at lower prices; why not some merchant follow suit. If the rule works well in one case why not in the other. But I leave this point for wiser heads to discuss. One thing however, I will say, and that is, I can sell Goods cheaper for Cash than those who sell on 12 and 24 months time; and to test this matter, don't take my word for it, but call and try, and I think I will be able to prove it to your entire satisfaction. Everybody call and see H. L. EVANS.

Legal Anecdote.

From the Boston Transcript.

Mr. Choate is quite famous for the amplitude of his vocabulary. When Webster's new Dictionary came out, some one was mentioning to the Judge that it was said to contain four thousand new words. "Oh, then," said the Judge, apparently in alarm, "don't let Mr. Choate get hold of it, for if he does, what will become of us?"

The late Judge Wilde, while, at the bar, was quite famous for his apt repartee. He was once trying a case, and labored very hard to obtain a certain answer from a reluctant witness. The opposing counsel interrupted him with the side remark—"Ah, it's no use, brother Wilde, to pump the witness further—you are only on a wild goose chase." "Just so, said Mr. W., Wild(e) on one side, and goose on the other."

The late Mr. Henry H. Fuller, was one of the most ready wits that ever graced the bar of any country. Many a man has been immortalized as a wit in London or Paris, on half the capital he possessed. He was once engaged in trying a case, and in his closing arguments, he made an irreverent allusion to some one not named, and it was done in such a way, that the opposing counsel took it in high dudgeon as an allusion to himself and wrote Mr. F. a note, demanding an apology. Mr. Fuller replied in his happiest strain, sorry that he had taken that allusion to himself, because it certainly was not meant for him, but for a much older member of the bar than either of them, to wit, the devil."

MORAL—Never take an uncomplimentary allusion to your self, if you can help it. It may be meant for the——.

The bench deprecates long argument, and hence admire most your men of few words. Mr. Coffin (Timothy) once, in rising to address the Court remarked, "May it please the Court, I am about to make a very short and a very excellent argument, for Mr. Justice Wilde stated to me that he considered that the first proposition always included the last. I shall submit the case upon the record." The bench were unanimously of opinion that it was the model of an argument.

Two of the great guns of the New Hampshire bar, Jeremiah Mason and Isiahed Bartlett, had been battling all the week, and the most important cases had been disposed of. The judge was half asleep, the jury was in scarcely a better condition, and cases were decided before the parties interested hardly knew which way to turn. At about 4 o'clock, an old man was placed at the bar, accused of passing counterfeit money.—There were but few persons in the court house—The lawyers who had finished their business, had gone home, and the old fellow seemed in a fair way to be rapidly consigned to the State Prison. Mr. Bartlett, the younger gun, sat with his arms folded, and his feet upon the edge of the table, apparently asleep, while the attorney general was examining two or three witnesses. Never was justice hurried through in a more summary manner. The evidence was direct and conclusive, and as witness after witness left the stand, the old prisoner's face grew paler and paler and he trembled at the certainty of his fate.

By and by Mr. Bartlett opened his eyes, cast a glance at the grey hairs of the culprit, yawned gently, and, turning to the attorney general, said audibly, "I'll defend this man." He asked no questions of the witnesses, and took no notes—but when the evidence was through, he rose and delivered one of the most beautiful arguments ever heard. The testimony, which appeared as clear as noon-day, he pulled all to pieces—he made discord of harmony—nonsense of sense—discrepancy of the most exact agreement, and when he touched upon the old man's unjust sufferings, he drew tears. Without leaving their seats, the jury declared the prisoner "Not Guilty!" The weeping man, with clasped hands, leaned forward, seeming to invoke a blessing upon the head of his defender. 'Let him out, constable," said Mr. Bartlett, "and now, you old rascal, go about your business, and never let me catch you counterfeiting money again." The jury stared in wonder, and we left the court-house laughing yet sorrowful.

A Little Quakeress in a Hurry.

An amusing matrimonial story is told of the olden time of New England. It so fell out that two young people became very much smitten with each other; as young people sometimes do. The young woman's father was a wealthy Quaker—the young man was poor but respectable. The father could stand no such union, and resolutely opposed it, and the daughter dare not disobey openly.—She "met him by moonlight," while pretended anger to have seen him—and she pined and wasted in spite of herself. She was really in love—a state of sighs and tears, which women oftener reach by imagination than reality. Still the father remained inexorable.

Time passed on, and the rose of Mary's damask cheek paled off. She let no concealment, like a "worm in the bud," prey on that damask cheek, however; but when her father asked her why she pined she always told him. The old gentleman was a widower and he loved his daughter dearly. Had it been a widowed mother who had Mary in charge, a woman's pride never would have given way before the importunities of a daughter. Men are not, however, so stubborn in such matters, and when the father saw that the daughter's heart was really set upon the match, he surprised her one day by breaking out: "Mary, rather than mope to death, thou hadst better marry as thou chooses and when thee pleases."

And what did Mary? Wait till the birds of the air had told her swain of the change, or till her father had time to change his mind again? Not a bit of it. She clapped her neat bonnet on her head, walked directly into the street, and then as directly to the house of her intended as the street could carry her. She walked into the house without knocking, for knocking was not then fashionable, and she found the family just sitting down to dinner. Some little commotion was exhibited at an unexpected accession to the heiress in the widow's cottage, but she heed not. John looked up inquiringly. She walked to him, and took his hands in her's: "John," said she, "father says I may have thee." And John got directly up from the table, and went to the parson's. Just in twenty-five minutes they were man and wife.

A Real Hard Shell.

We don't refer to the religion, but to the physical shell of the old negro whom a correspondent of the Baltimore Patriot met in the cars from Chicago, Illinois, a few days ago, and thus describes:

"Far back towards the corner, sat an aged colored man, quite in character. Neither old Hagar, Moses Small, nor Barnum's Mark Anthony, could rival him. He had passed through nearly one hundred years, wore a wig of Indian hair, black as jet, beneath which was a beard white as driven snow. A more complete representation of an Egyptian mummy could scarcely be imagined. All of sudden the old fellow struck up a hymn, in a clear, shrill voice, thus attracting general attention. It seemed as though he "played on a harp of a thousand strings." In his hand was a petition asking aid to purchase his home in Missouri. Narrating briefly his history, he said: "I was born, Massa, in Nor Carolina, near de Cape Fear, one hundred years ago. My Massa tuck me to Missouri, where he died and let me free. I got lighten on de fort ob July, eighteen hundred, and I've been preacher, leas Gor, ever since. Some calls me Methodis, but I'm hard shell Baptiste, and expects to continue so to die and de tudder world. I feels great power and hopes to do good. He said he had seen Washington and other great men of the Revolution; was quite prolific in early reminiscences. Many of the passengers gave him small donations, for which he would benevolently dispense numerous blessings."

Testings of Punch.

The Eagle's Pen Feather.—"The pen with which the treaty of peace was signed was pulled from the wing of an imperial eagle in the Jardin des Plantes, by M. Feuillet des Conches, chef du bureau des protocols."—Globe.

As the arrow that brings down the eagle may bear
That eagle's own feather to guide its barbed sting,
So the pen that now stops the French eagle's career,
Is properly plucked from the French eagle's wing.

A Rare Shower.—A gentleman who had been in our city at four o'clock, when a flood of clerks is generally let loose, was talking upon the subject to his wife at dinner, when he wound up grandly by saying, "I never witnessed such a scene of confusion in all my life, my dear. What with the clerks, and with the rain, I never shall forget! Only imagine, my darling, that not only was it raining cats and dogs, but hailing omnibusses also at the same time."

Look at Home.—The treaty of peace provides, it is said, for the maintenance of the integrity of the Ottoman Empire, but that empire includes so many rogues in the shape of dishonest pashas, that the fact of his integrity seems questionable. Whilst endeavoring to secure the integrity of Turkey, we might also take measures for the preservation of our own, which will soon cease to be more than doubted, if fraud, and embezzlement continue to occur among us at their present rate.

A Fitting Truth.—Woman's partiality for thin shoes is to be accounted for by her insuperable dislike to thick understanding.

An Embarrassing Demand.—We see there is a new song by Balfe, called The First Kiss. Is there not some degree of danger in such a title? For instance, what would a shopman think, and how would he behave, if a pretty young lady went up to him, and smilingly said, "If you please, sir, I want you to give me The First Kiss!"

All of a Piece.—We cannot help feeling that in the conduct of the war, and in the conclusion of the peace, we have not had much reason to boast; for we have been wateful in the former and early led in the latter business. In our use of the diplomatic pen we have not proved ourselves to be pennywise; while in our waste of the materials of war, we have been more than pound foolish.

Merely an Opinion.—It has been remarked that General Airey might be judiciously named for the command of a light division.

The Pin and the Needle.

A pin and a needle being neighbors in a work basket, and both being idle, began to quarrel, as idle folks are apt to do.

"I should like to know," said the pin, "what you are good for, and how you expect to get through the world without a head?"

"What is the use of your head," replied the needle, rather sharply, "if you have no eye?"

"What is the use of an eye," said the pin, "if there is always something in it?"

"I am always active, and can go through more work than you can," said the needle.

"Yes; but you will not live long."

"Why not?"

"Because you have always a stitch in your side," said the pin.

"You're a poor, crooked creature," said the needle.

"And you are so proud that you can't bend without breaking your back."

"I'll pull your head off if you insult me again."

"I'll put out your eye if you in touch me; remember, you
