"Togo" Bentley has a secret ambition to lead the clouters of the league. If he keeps going at the clip he started somebody's going to let the secret out too soon.

Togo Bentley has been at bat 12 times and has made five singles, two doubles and a triple. At this rate what will his average be?

Trinity, 5; Eastern, 4

(Special to Daily News.)

Durham, April 30.—In a game crowded with interesting and full of features, Trinity again defeated Eastern college here today by a score of 5 to 4. Things looked rather gloomy for Methodism up to the sixth, when combining hits and errors they succeeded in making five runs. The features were the playing of West brothers at first and short for Trinity.

Wilmington High, 3; Donaldson, 1.

Wilmington, April 30.—The Wilmington high school baseball team defeated the Donaldson Military school here this afternoon by the score of 3 to 1. The game was a pitchers battle in which Davis, for Wilmington, had the better of it, only three hits being registered against him and four against McFall for Donaldson.

CHAMPS WON LAST

Ridgeway Let Twins Down With Two Punky Hits.

BENTLEY GOT THREE HITS

Charlotte Got Away With the Spartans and Anderson Again Defeated Greenville.

Jess Ridgeway pitched masterly ball yesterday and the Champs romped away in the final game of the opening series. It was sweet revenge to the [illegible] more faithful to see Ridge [illegible] out time successive packages [illegible] to the proud and haughty [illegible] and time after time the crowd [illegible] the applause the spectators bestowed into a small scale demonstration [illegible] the close of the game when it [illegible] that Ridgeway had not only [illegible] the rock against [illegible] but that he [illegible] the Twins pronoun[illegible] against [illegible] they are correct[illegible] have been [illegible] playing [illegible] have been charged [illegible] credited to Harper [illegible] though hit, lacked a effect [illegible] have been monstrous [illegible] credited Fletcher with an error after such an attempt. These little "bits" are merely mentioned in passing to show how near Ridgeway came to pulling off one of those no-hit affairs.

While Ridgeway was delivering an assortment of benders that belied the efforts of the Winstonians to fathom, Laval, the former Greenville southpaw, was also pitching good ball, though his real work was greatly offset in the eyes of the spectators by three miserable boners. Seven hits, three of which were also in the punky class, was the best the Champs could do, and considering the fact that five errors were made behind him, his efforts towards the last were exceedingly creditable. Laval himself aided materially in the big score, for four of the men that made the circuit went to first on four balls, and two other made the circuit as a result of his own errors.

Aside from the brilliant pitching of Ridgeway, the work of McKenzie at second and Weldon in left stood out prominently above that of the other 16 glad tatters. McKenzie, with a total of nine chances, accepted all without a semblance of an error, and to add to his already creditable record he fielded a hot grounder off Fogarty's bat in the fourth, nipped Templin in passing and then caught Fogarty with a quick snap to Hicks, completing a double play that would have been impossible without quick thinking and action. Though he didn't get a hit, he is credited with two of the runs, all going to show that he had his eye on the ball, for he allowed an easy one to take him and stream and again walked on four ball ones. In left Weldon brought joy to the hearts of the fans, and expressions of "Works like Jack Anthony" were heard on all sides. Three seemingly impossible chances were gobbled up by the fleet footed left fielder and like Ridgeway, he came in for his share of the long pentup emotions turned loose by yesterday's assemblage. Thrasher also won applause in the second, when he nipped Winston's only chance to score in the bud with a perfect relay of Laval's fly ball to right.

At the bat there was no question about honors for the day, for "Togo" Bentley just repeated his performance of the day before with three hits out of four times up, one of which was a three bagger. He also caught a good game, though the Twins never got an opportunity to test his pegging ability.

Besides the work of McKivett and Templin and a pretty stop by Harvey Holt, the play of the visitors was featureless, the great reversal of form displayed on the two previous days being so noticeable as to cause sadness among the followers of McKivett.

The Champs scored first in the opening frame when Rickard was given a free pass, purloined second and third and scored on Bentley's three bagger to right. Two were added in the third when Weldon was safe on Laval's wild throw to first and Jackson was given a free pass after Rickard had advanced Weldon to second with a hot grounder to pitcher. Bentley hit an easy fly and Templin let it drop from his tentacles, Weldon and Jackson romping home by having previously displayed good base running judgment in moving for dear life, notwithstanding the fly was easy and would have been caught 99 times out of 100.

This snug little account on the credit side of the score was strengthened in the fourth by the addition of one more run when McKenzie made the circuit after a free pass on Ridgeway's out and Gilmore's wild heave to third. The four final runs came amidst a perfect storm of Winston miscues and Greensboro hits. Bentley started the fifth with a single over second. Hicks beat out an infield hit, and on Laval's wild throw to McKivett, after Hicks was safe a block, both runners advanced another base. Thrasher singled to center and Bentley scored and on Fogarty's wild throw to the plate to catch Hicks the local captain also tallied, Thrasher anchoring at third, from whence he counted on James' sacrifice fly. McKenzie got a free pass and also scored before the fun was over.

The Twins had two men left on bases and only once did they get a man to third. It was simply "Champ" day and the fans enjoyed it to the utmost.

Charlotte, 6; Spartanburg, 4.

Charlotte, April 30.—Charlotte succeeded after three attempts in annexing a game this afternoon, defeating Spartanburg 6 to 4 in a game replete with short hits and interesting errors. The batting of both sides was weak, though those in the stand couldn't tell why, for neither pitcher gave evidence of strong twirling, even though the hit column looks small.

Anderson, 12; Greenville, 3.

Anderson, S. C., April 30.—The locals again walked all over Greenville, defeating the aggregation from that town by the score of 12 to 3.

Each team started off at a lively clip, both scoring three runs in the first, but in the third Anderson simply ran away with everything tossed up, making eight runs and added another in the seventh because they couldn't help it.

Considering the swatting done, the game was a remarkably clear fielding contest.

"Won in the Ninth."

Christy Mathewson, the famous pitcher of the New York Giants, has made the greatest hit of his career with his great baseball story, "Won in the Ninth." It's more than a home run and the fans from eight to 80 are delighted with it.

Matty's idea was to write a book on baseball which would include in its characters the baseball stars at present in the American and National leagues.

The players he selects are those whom he would select from active players to go on two All American teams.

Every year at the end of the season, newspapers over the country pick out two All American teams, but, up to the present time, no one has undertaken to say what would probably happen in a series of games played between two teams of such character.

In the book, Matty gives his idea of how such games would turn out, taking into consideration his knowledge of all of the players, their weaknesses and strength, and the kind of curves that would likely be served to each of them.

Matty has placed the first team in one eastern college called Lowell and the other in a western school called Jefferson. The characters are boys in everything but their ability to play base ball.

"Matty's Lineup. The Batting Order.

The whole range of interesting features about a ball team and the game itself is covered in successive chapters.

One chapter is devoted to selecting and training the team.

Another chapter presents to the current baseball vernacular the style of reporting a game for the college paper, which only passes muster after the professor in English has had a full explanation and discovers that anyone understanding baseball can see the meaning and that it is perfectly plain.

Another chapter takes up the "Making of a hair," outlines some of the intricate questions to be heard in the grandstand at most any game, also how quickly such a novice can become an enthusiast.

Another chapter reveals the secrets of what is come to be known as "inside baseball" and "signal work."

Throughout the chapters have been interwoven many of the stories of actual plays that have come within the range of the author's experience. Famous catches, thrilling episodes of games, tricks pulled off and some that didn't work.

It's a live book on baseball with live characters and written by the one man who knows more about the boys who are playing it today and the methods by which games are won than anyone else in the sport.

Matty's mailman is loaded down these days with congratulatory letters from appreciative fans from all over the country who have seen it and his publishers, the R. J. Bodmer company, of 437 Fifth avenue, New York City, are putting in long hours sending out copies in exchange for $1, from fans who don't know that about every bookstore and newstand in the country is ready to supply them.

We are glad for Matty's success. He is one of the very few men who are in the limelight of American sport, whose life and habits are a worthwhile example for the boys and young men of the country.
