Coolidge Sympathy With Effort Remove Radicals

In Presenting to the Senate the Names of Postmasters Recommend by Anti-LaFollette Republicans President Indicates He Favors Ousting Insurgents

By DAVID LAWRENCE

Washington, Dec. 20.—The war on insurgency in the Republican party is war to the hilt. President Coolidge now has taken a step which demonstrates to the political world his absolute sympathy with the move whereby the Republican leaders ousted from their ranks the insurgents of the West who in the last campaign gave aid and comfort to the LaFollette candidacy.

This is the most significant happening in politics since the election and more than anything else may lay the lines of battle for the future. President Taft endeavored to use the weapon of "patronage" to fight the enemy within the ranks but it proved a boomerang to him. Mr. Coolidge has the advantage, however, of beginning the fight not in the middle of his term when most of the ammunition is usually spent but at the unprecedented time when he has four full years to serve and his own inauguration is still more than two months away.

The President made no public statement when the Republican leaders in the Senate and House read out of the party the LaFollette insurgents. In presenting to the Senate, however, this week the names of postmasters recommended by the anti-LaFollette Republicans of Wisconsin, Mr. Coolidge lined himself up definitely with the regulars in Wisconsin and fired the first gun of the 1926 Congressional fight when Senator Lenroot, staunch administration supporter, will be up for renomination.

Undoubtedly the LaFollette forces will enter a candidate in the Republican primaries to defeat Lenroot and the latter has for several months known that he had a fight ahead of him. The White House was urged repeatedly before the last national convention to make war on the LaFollette group but it was deemed by the strategists to be unwise to precipitate a controversy until after Mr. Coolidge had been nominated. The action of the Wisconsin delegation at the convention followed as it was by the LaFollette candidacy for the Presidency left the administration no alternative, however, and from that time forward the Republican national committee began to realize that it must build up a new organization in Wisconsin or rather strengthen the regular Republicans who had been making the fight year after year against LaFolletteism with heavy odds.

Usually the LaFollette people have been helped in the Republican primaries by Democratic votes. The Lenroot forces know now that conservative Democrats can be drawn to a Republican ticket when a radical is in the race and there is no doubt that
