THE DAILY ARGUS.

GOLDSBORO, N. C., AUG. 2, 1892.

THE YEARS.

The years are all alike. With childish laughter
They follow butterflies with endless wings;
They peep into the birds' nests; they look after
White lambs and other pretty little things.

Then, in the first flush of their youth, they bring us
Shy gifts of violets in a gallant way;
And ah! what charming, low love songs they sing us
From leaf green shadows where the wild doves stay.

But, somewhat later, they show bearded faces,
And away the scythe and bear the sheaves about
In the hot fields, and quite forget the graces
They had of old—as others do, no doubt.

Still later they go out for us and gather
The scarlet fruit in and the yellow corn,
Or walk about the withering woods with rather
A faded look and sigh and seem forlorn.

Then they sit still and watch the dying embers
Behind the curtains in some pictured room,
While each one somewhere in his heart remembers
The dew, the summer moonrise and the bloom.

Then comes the last night watch, the lonesome tapers,
The few tears of the many prayers quick said,
The black-lined columns in the morning papers,
And, yes—the many virtues of the dead.

—S. M. B. Piatt.
