FOR THE CHILDREN

A Shooting Match.

This picture shows Sambo, a game and [illegible] with two confederates, who [illegible] in one room while the conspirators in the other.

A rough target is drawn and placed at a convenient height upon the wall, and [illegible] Sambo is placed about five feet from the target and the table and with his forefinger for the sentinel. Then he is sure he is pointing in the right direction he is blindfolded by his confederates, while the other stands close to the target. He is told to walk toward it and see if with his outstretched forefinger he can touch the bullseye.

The confederate by the target slightly opens his mouth and follows the direction of the pointing finger until the blindfolded victim finds it caught firmly, but not roughly, between two rows of teeth.

Then as he is "initiated," he stays with the confederates while one by one the other victims walk into the trap.

It is great fun if there is good humor at the feast.

A Mystified Crow.

During a piazza game of pingpong one of the balls was sent quite a distance out over the lawn, where a crow seized it and bore it off in triumph, evidently thinking it was an egg. After much pecking, from all of which the frolicsome little ball bounced away unbroken, the crow had an excited consultation with several of his fellows and then deliberately carried the ball to the top of a high tree and let it drop. Again the assembly of black feathered experimenters gathered around in amazement. Was there ever such a remarkable egg? It had fallen from a height that played havoc with their eggs and their fledglings as well and yet survived intact! Then one after another tramped on it, cawing loudly all the while.

At last, in sheer exhaustion and disgust, they all gave it up, flew to the top of their favorite tree and, still cawing loudly, watched one of the pingpong players come out from the house and carry off this invincible egg that had baffled their boldest attacks.

Babykins and His Friend.

Babykins had a little friend that used to come to visit him once a week. It was the day of the week when the nursery was swept. Nursie would put the glass from the bureau down upon the floor while she was dusting and putting things away, and then it was that this other little Babykins came.

It was a dear little Babykins that had curly hair waving over its head.

Babykins would creep up close to the glass, but he never could touch the little visitor.

One day Babykins thought he would creep around behind the glass and have a romp with the dear Babykins who lived there. Oh, he was so disappointed! What do you suppose was there? Nothing at all but the back of the glass! Babykins made haste to creep back again to the front of the glass, and there was the visitor.

Babykins played with him until nursie came and took the glass away. Then Babykins' little friend went, too, for another week.—Babyland.

Questions For Boys and Girls.

If you are good at guessing or answering here are a few questions you can wrestle with:

You can see my day, a white horse, but did you ever see a white colt?

How many different kinds of trees grow in your neighborhood, and what are they good for?

Why does a horse eat grass backward and a cow forward?

Why does a hop vine wind one way and a bean vine the other?

Where should a chimney be the larger, at the top or bottom, and why?

Can you tell why a horse when tethered with a rope always shrinks it while a cow always twists it into a kinky knot?

How old must a grapevine be before it begins to bear?

Can you tell why some leaves turn upside down just before a rain?

What wood will bear the greatest weight before breaking?—Exchange.

An Apollinaris Practical Story.

A little boy laid his stick of candy on the mantel while he buttoned his shoes. His sister, being ill, walked around the room, reaching the candy as she passed, and finally ate it. When her brother had finished buttoning his shoes and reached for his stick, it was gone! "You have my candy, miss. Give it to me!" he cried. "Brother," she answered, "if you overlook that candy you will have to be the whale, and I'll have to be Jonah."

Mr. Nobody.

I know a funny little man,
As quiet as a mouse,
Who does the mischief that is done
In everybody's house!
There's no one ever sees his face,
And yet we all agree
That every time we break a vase
It was done by Mr. Nobody.

'Tis he who always leaves our books,
Who leaves the door ajar;
He pulls the buttons from our shirts
And scatters pins afar.
That something dear will always vanish
We are sure we can't see how,
We have the blame to be done
By Mr. Nobody.

SELECTIONS

A WONDERFUL TREE.

It Has Tarantula-like Blossoms With a Stupefying Odor.

A wonderful tree of unknown variety has been discovered in a mountain canyon in a spur of the San Jacinto mountains, down near the Mexican line. It was discovered by a party of prospectors who penetrated the canyon in search of water. A branch of the tree and its blossoms were brought to this city for classification, but it is unknown to botanists in this city.

The leaves of the tree resemble in size and shape the fig leaf, but they are of a vivid purple color and the under side of the leaf is thickly covered with stiff hairs which stand out from the leaf fully half an inch. These hairs are sharp and thornlike and easily penetrate the skin, and when they do so they are poisonous, causing swelling and much pain.

The blossoms are as peculiar as are the branches and leaves. They are of a rusty red color and are about two inches in diameter. In shape they are a very good representation of the tarantula. There is a huge hairy bulb, in shape resembling the abdomen of the poisonous spider, and there are several chives, or stamens, corresponding to the legs of that insect.

The most peculiar feature of the plant, however, remains to be told. Whenever one approaches the plant or when the wind agitates the branches of the tree the flowers give off an abundance of perfume—heavy, sickening and deadly. This perfume has the quality of chloroform, and a few inhalations of the odor produce unconsciousness. The prospectors who made the discovery of the plant were rendered insensible upon approaching the tree to examine it.

As the plant seems to have no botanical name two names have been suggested by the qualities of the plant itself. One is tarantula plant, the other chloroform tree.—Los Angeles Times.

The Human Lottery

"Ah, if only I were beautiful how happy life would be."

Many a forlorn maid has said this as she looked into the mirror. For beauty women have sacrificed home, love and friends. It is the one possession in the lottery of human life which women would not refuse.

BRADFIELD'S Female Regulator

for young girls on the threshold of womanhood, has been invaluable. When they become pale and languid, the eyes dull, aching head, feet and hands cold, appetite gone or abnormal, obstructed periods and painful menses, and their systems generally run down, they need building up, and the blood needs cleansing.

Bradfield's Female Regulator for women is particularly valuable and useful owing to its tonic properties to build up the system, and as a regulator of the menstrual flows. Painful, obstructed and suppressed menstruation permanently relieved and all diseases peculiar to her genital organs are cured by it.

Regulator clears the complexion, brightens the eye, sharpens the appetite, removes muddy and blotched conditions of the skin and cures dull headache to a certainty by removing the cause.
