JUDGE BOYD IS HEARING ILLICIT DISTILLING CASES

Sentences Imposed on "Old Timers"—Timber Cutting Cases Nol. Prossed.

Several cases were disposed of in United States court this morning, most of them being illicit distilling cases. Thomas McAllister was found guilty of distilling but prayer for judgment was continued in his case. Charles Hickman, who was convicted along with him, was sentenced to two years in the federal prison at Atlanta.

W. A. Barker, the old pioneer, who was brought to Asheville about a month ago from Madison county, charged with running a "still," and who spent his sixty-ninth birthday in jail here on default of bond, was found guilty, and Judge Boyd sentenced him to a year and a day in the Atlanta prison. His attorney pleaded for a more lenient sentence on account of his age but the judge said the defendant wasn't much older than he was himself, and he did not consider him an old man.

H. S. Lones was convicted of helping around some of the illicit plants and was sentenced to two months' imprisonment in jail.

Marion Cook, one of the "old timers" from Jackson county, who, Judge Boyd said, had been dodging back and forth across the state line for years in his distilling operations, was found guilty of illicit distilling, and given two years in the Atlanta prison and fined $100. A plea was made to the court to change the sentence on the grounds that Cook was insane. Those who testified, however, that he was insane, also said that he had a reputation for distilling, and they were not sure that the insanity didn't come from drinking. The sentence remained unchanged.

Several cases came up concerning the cutting of timber on the Cherokee reservation. The indictments resulted from a comparatively new law and Attorney Holton nol. prossed a number of them and only asked that the costs be paid by a few of the defendants whom he considered to be to blame in the matter. These had not been settled when court took a recess at 1 o'clock to convene again at 3.

The local bar association met this morning to arrange the civil term calendar and decided to make the present term very short, with only a few civil cases on the docket. A special term is to be held, beginning January 8, for the trial of civil cases only.

Among the civil cases that are to be tried this term, is United States vs. Hiawassee Lumber company, which will come up Friday.

Yesterday Afternoon.

A few cases were disposed of yesterday afternoon. Jim Andrews was charged with distilling and found guilty. An illicit distillery had been cut up near his house, on his spring branch. The defendant denied any knowledge of the existence of the plant and said it did not belong to him.

James W. Smith of Madison and William Bird of Swain were also found guilty of illicit distilling.

Railway Bond Election.

The county commissioners of Guilford have designated December 11 as the date for the people in various townships in Guilford county affected an opportunity to vote on the question of issuing bonds to aid in the building of the Randolph and Cumberland railway. The townships through which the proposed railroad will pass and which will vote on the bond proposition are High Point, Sumner, Friendship, Gilmer and White Oak. It is proposed that the new road run from some point on the Seaboard in Moore county, possibly Cameron, to Winston-Salem and on to Greensboro. The towns through which the road will pass, if constructed, are Carthage, Ashboro and High Point. There was some objection raised to fixing the date for the election December 11, those objecting representing the Greensboro and Roxboro Railroad company, and said that an election would soon be asked allowing the people to vote on the question of issuing bonds for that road, and that two elections coming so close together would be very expensive. Those appearing before the commissioners in the interest of the Randolph and Cumberland road insisted that the election be held December 11, saying that it was contemplated asking other counties through which the road will pass, including Moore, Chatham, Randolph, Forsyth and Yadkin, to hold elections on that date.

BEAT A WHITE MAN; IS LYNCHED BY MOB

Meridian, Miss., Nov. 8.—"Judge" Moseley, a negro, was taken from Deputy Sheriff Brown near Lockhart yesterday by a mob of about 400 persons and lynched. The negro's body was bullet-riddled. Moseley assaulted J. H. Covington, white, with a stick at Lockhart. Covington was beaten over the head and also had one arm broken. A posse searched the woods for Moseley all afternoon and by quick work the negro was placed in jail. Covington was unable to appear at the trial and the negro was ordered taken to Meridian for safe keeping. Deputy Sheriff Brown left immediately in a buggy. When about two miles out of town he was met a mob of more than 50 masked men who demanded the negro. Brown remonstrated without avail. Brown says just after turning back to Lockhart, he heard shots in the woods toward the place where the negro was taken.

There is much excitement at Lockhart according to advices to the sheriff here, who sent deputies there to help preserve order.
