"All Gone—"
and no cause for complaint

Cottolene

Let the children eat their fill of doughnuts—if made from Cottolene. There's no stomach-ache or indigestion in Cottolene doughnuts, because Cottolene is a vegetable oil product, pure and healthful as olive oil. It makes food rich, without making it indigestible. It makes food palatable without the greasiness of lard-soaked food. It is more economical than butter or lard because one-third less is required.

From the standpoints of health and economy, Cottolene is unquestionably the leading cooking fat on the market.

Use one-third less Cottolene than butter or lard.

"Miss Nobody From Starland."

Melodious in score, bright in color, rich in fabric and graceful in movement, "Miss Nobody from Starland", with clever Olive Vail and a large company of well known principals, backed by a vigorous chorus of pretty girls, will be the big Mort H. Singer offering at the Auditorium on next Monday, December 4. Adams, Hough and Mitchell divide the honors of book and lyrics, and Joseph Howard furnished the many jingly musical hits with which the famous musical comedy abounds. "Miss Nobody from Starland" inoculates with the germ of laughter throughout its four spectacular scenes. The story centers around a fascinating chorus girl, who is aided in her diamond smuggling enterprise by a host of suitors on board the liner Lusitania. Novelty is the keynote of the story from the first to the last, and one of the earlier surprises is the disembarkation of the passengers at the finale of the opening scene the entire company is precipitated upon the audience by means of a gangplank leading from the deck of the liner to the center aisle. Another innovation is the great dress rehearsal scene which gives the audience a glimpse behind the scenes and shows a musical production in the process of preparation. This is one of the most interesting, as well as laughable, scenes ever shown upon a stage. Among the many song hits are "Ah, Mari, Mari, Tarantelle," "I'd Rather Love What I cannot Have Than Have What I Cannot Love," "I'll Be Your Honey When It's Moonlight," "Kiss Me," and "The Dear Little Ghost of Your Smile." Mort H. Singer has given "Miss Nobody from Starland" one of the most lavish scenic and costume productions ever seen on tour; in fact, the identical production which was seen in Chicago and all the other large cities during its phenomenal tour.

Tickets go on sale Friday morning at Whitlock's.

"The Traitor."

The triumph of "The Traitor" has had but one precedent and that was when "The Clansman" swept through the south like a whirlwind, breaking all theater records and causing more talk and discussion than any play since "Uncle Toms Cabin." It is useless to ask why and to try to explain such success. The thing that interests the public is the fact that it is a success and that everyone is anxiously awaiting the engagement in this city. Many people wonder how it is that the public know so soon what is a success and what is not but the public does know. That is why there is always such a rush to the box office when the sale of seats for "The Traitor" is announced. Besides they remember how difficult it was to secure seats during the first season of "The Clansman" and they probably have in mind the story of the early bird. The date of "The Traitor" engagement in this city at the Auditorium is Tuesday, December 5.

Ticket sale open Saturday morning at Whitlock's.

Fritzi Scheff.

When the Messrs. Shubert decided to send their favorite star, Miss Fritzi Scheff on tour, it was their determination to give her the best cast and finest production obtainable. In following out this purpose the company which will support Miss Scheff in the new Victor Herbert opera, "The Duchess," when it is seen here at the Auditorium, Thursday, December 7, for one performance only, includes such well known people as Riley Chamberlain, May Boley, George Anderson, Laura Hamilton, John E. Hazzard, George Graham, Madison Smith, Robert Milliken, Robert Flynn, Belle Court and M. Berenson.

The production is identically the same as seen at the Lyric theater, New York, where Miss Scheff was the sensational success of the season. There are three baggage cars crowded with scenery and effects. The costumes are the latest creations of the modistes' and milliners' arts, and the chorus is made up of girls who are not only comely to look upon, but who can really sing. Miss Scheff will also have with her, her own orchestra of 20 pieces from New York. This orchestra will accompany her throughout her tour. The production itself was staged under the personal instruction of J. C. Huffman and William J. Wilson, the latter being general stage director of the New York hippodrome. As Miss Scheff's local engagement is for one performance only, it behooves the Asheville theatergoers to secure their reservations at the Auditorium in time.

Ticket sale opens Wednesday morning at Whitlock's.

"The Thief."

The chief thought, apparently, in the mind of the American woman today is to dress well. It is around this thought that "The Thief" was written. For two years ever since its first production at the Lyceum theater, New York, this question, "To steal, or not to steal in order to hold your husband's love," has been argued. "The Thief" solves the question. It comes to the Auditorium next Friday evening.
