Sunday Reading.

How are the mighty Fallen!

Again has the grave closed over one whose fame was co-extensive with the civilized world. The last star of the first magnitude in our political heavens has set forever.—Daniel Webster has been summoned away from the exciting scenes of time, to the changeless realities of Eternity. To see a man of giant intellect, long experience, and world-wide renown thus suddenly transferred from the arena of politics to the silence of the tomb, is a spectacle which rivets our attention, and invites us to meditation.

It is said that this great man, a short time previous to his departure, prayed aloud for the forgiveness of his sins, through the mediation of Christ, and that after taking leave of his family and friends, he died in peace, being resigned to the will of God. That one so full of years, wisdom, and honors should die a hopeful death is surely matter of sincere rejoicing; but may we not also regret that his whole life was not given to the service of his Creator? His religious influence would have equalled his political power. In high places he might have restrained vice; he might have brought within the pale of the Church the mightiest spirits in the land, while the poor and illiterate, in this and other countries, would have felt the force of his example.

Nor must we fail to call attention to the danger of delaying repentance until the last hour. It is sometimes the case that a man may live in sin until near the close of a long life, and then be pardoned and saved. But how often are the unregenerate, as well as the pious, stricken down in a moment. How often does their last sickness produce delirium, and thus preclude the possibility of exercising faith in the Redeemer. And how often is the hoary transgressor utterly callous, and indifferent about spiritual things, although his mind is unclouded. Of five or six thousand conversions reported in the New Testament, there is only one which occurred in a dying hour. To suspend the interests of the immortal soul upon the faint probability of a death-bed pardon is folly in the highest degree.

And yet in every instance of return to God after a long season of procrastination serves to illustrate the efficacy of the Christian Religion. When after a long and tempestuous voyage on the ocean of life, men find themselves wrecked upon the coast of Eternity, they fly to Christ, and cling to him as to the last plank amid the general ruin. They may, from youth to old age, busy themselves with the affairs of this life—they may give their days and nights to the acquisition of wealth, or to the discussion of political questions, but at last they would hasten to the cross—then they would find shelter from the final and endless storm of Jehovah's indignation—then they would find eternal repose. So that there are but few, hardened infidels not excepted, who do not sooner or later give their voice in favor of the power and diversity of the Saviour's Atonement. For although mercy may be clean gone forever, and although despair may have extinguished the last glimmerings of hope, they yet believe in the power of Christ to save, and curse themselves for not yielding to the woolings of the Holy Spirit ere it took its everlasting flight.

"WILDE'S BREVITY OF LIFE."

BY RICHARD HENRY WILDE, OF GEORGIA.

My life is like the summer rose,
That opens to the morning sky,
But ere the shades of evening close,
Is scattered on the ground to die!
Yet on the rose's humble bed
The sweetest dews of night are shed
As if we wept the waste to see—
But none shall weep a tear for me!

My life is like the autumn leaf
That trembles in the moon's pale ray,
Its hold is frail, its date is brief,
Restless—and soon to pass away!
Yet ere that leaf shall fall and fade,
The parent tree will mourn its shade;
The winds bewail the leafless tree,
But none shall breathe a sigh for me!

My life is like the prints which feet
Have left on Tampa's desert strand;
Soon as the rising tide shall beat,
All trace will vanish from the sand;
Yet as if grieving to efface
All vestige of the human race—
On that lone shore loud moans the sea,
But none shall mourn for me.

ANSWER TO WILDE'S BREVITY OF LIFE.

BY MRS. SPOKLEY.

The dews of night may fall from heaven,
Upon the withered rose's bed,
And tears of fond regret be given,
To mourn the virtues of the dead;
Yet morning's sun the dews will dry,
And tears will fade from sorrow's eye,
Affection's pange be lulled to sleep,
And even love forget to weep.

The tree may mourn its fallen leaf,
That fades and dies in autumn's gloom;
And friends may heave the sigh of grief
O'er those who sleep within the tomb;
Yet soon will spring to view the flowers,
And time will bring more smiling hours;
In friendship's heart all grief will die,
And even love forget to sigh.

The sea may on the desert shore
Efface each trace it bears away;
The lonely heart its grief may pour
O'er cherished friendship's fast decay;
Yet when all trace is lost and gone,
The waves dance bright and gaily on;
Thus soon affection's bonds are torn,
And even love forgets to mourn.

FALLING OFF IN THE ROMAN CATHOLIC CHURCH IN THE U. STATES.

The Bishop of Cashel, at a recent public meeting, said:—

There is an immense work, more than we have any conception of, going on among the Irish population in America; there is a great falling off in the Roman Catholic Church in that part of the world. I stated an important fact the other day, in the House of Lords, and I will re-state it here, because I wish to give my authority. I have here The Annals of the Faith, the Great Roman Catholic book, for the details and statistics of the Romish Church. This work contains, among other things, the statistics of that church in the United States; and it appears that the sum total of Roman Catholics in the whole of the United States is 1,663,500

They did not much like the result, it appears, when they had made it out; for in a note it is added, that "the real total far exceeds that amount;" and it is added that the Roman Catholic population of the United States is generally estimated at 2,000,000.—For my purpose, I would just as soon call it, 2,000,000 as 1,663,500. A lecture was given at the end of the last year by a Mr. Robison, at a place near New York, on the statistics of the United States 30,000,000. He further states that there are in the United States 3,000,000 of born Irish, and 4,500,000, descendants of the Irish, so that there are in all 7,5000,000, or 1,000,000 more than are now supposed to be in Ireland. Yet not 2,000,000 of the whole population which came out of a Popish country now belong to Romanish.

I have another authority. Here is a letter from a priest at New Orleans, dated Feb. 1852, to the priests of Ireland, on the subject of the dreadful falling off in the Catholic Church in the United States. The writer says that considering the number who came over, there ought to be 3,970,000 Roman Catholics in the United States, whereas there are only 1,980,000. He is a little under the 2,000,000. I do not quarrel with him about the excess over the other Romish statements. Well, he says the number lost to the Roman Catholic Church is 1,990,000; so that in round numbers, 1,000,000 are confessedly lost to the unscriptural church of Rome, even according to this statement. What this priest acknowledges is doubtless vastly under the reality; yet it is a startling revelation, especially when it is remembered that these 2,000,000 of Irish Roman Catholics have been lost to the Roman Church in less than a quarter of a century.

THE SABBATH IN FRANCE.

The following account is given by a man in that country who cannot be accused of Puritanism: "The Christians murmur, and not without abundant reason, at the various profanations of the sabbath, of which the government and the official and other 'higher' classes set the example. For instance let me trace an outline of sunday's action and aspect.

On Saturday evening, a ball was given at the Tuileries by the president; the number of guests is computed at between three and four thousand. He arrived at nine, with a splendid suite; opened the dance with my Lady Cowley; retired after midnight. It is now broad daylight before five in the morning. I opened the shutters of my study at that hour, and the assemblage was just dispersing—a considerable part on foot. At half-past ten, crowds were stationed near the Place Carousel and along the Rue de Rivoli, awaiting the arrival of the prince president for a review of ten thousand troops. He passed under my windows on horseback at about twenty minutes before noon, perfectly mounted and uniformed, and two regiments followed soon after. He returned from the parade at a quarter before two, still on horseback. I counted nineteen general officers abreast with him; the inmediate staff or escort might be reckoned at eighty superior officers. He did not appear—as on the preceding Sunday—at the races in the Champ de Mars. Notwithstanding anicy wind, the sport drew an immense concourse."

SABBATH BREAKING.

Many facts show that Sabbath-breaking is a prolific source of evil. A father whose son was addicted to riding out for pleasure on the Sabbath, was told that if he did not stop it his son would be ruined. He did not stop it, but sometimes set the example of riding out for pleasure himself. The son became a man, and was placed in a responsible situation, and entrusted with a large amount of property. Soon he was a defaulter, and absconded. In a different part of the country he obtained another responsible situation, and was again entrusted with a large amount of property. Of that he defrauded the owner and fled again. He was apprehended, tried, convicted, and sent to the State Prison. After years spent in solitude and labor, he wrote a letter to his father, and after recounting his course of crime, he added, "That was the effect of breaking the Sabbath when I was a boy."

REMORSE.

In Rensselaer county, New York, a tavern-keeper had abandoned the traffic in alcohol, after he had been several years engaged in it. Whenever the subject of his selling liquor was referred to, he was observed to manifest feelings of deep regret and sorrow. A friend one day inquired the cause. "I will tell you," said he, and opening his account book said, "Here are forty names of men who have all been customers, most of them for years—thirty-two of these, to my certain knowledge, now lie in the drunkard's grave! ten of the twelve now remaining are confirmed sots! These are the fruits of this dreadful and degrading business." Who would be willing to engage in it for the paltry wages of a few pence?

AN AGED DIVINE.

An English paper states that a few Sabbaths since the pulpit of a Wesleyan chapel in Oxford was occupied by a gentleman named Fletcher who had attained the great age of one hundred and five years. His discourse lasted nearly three-quarters of an hour, and was listened to with very great interest by the numerous congregation. Although the chapel was a very large one, the venerable preacher's voice was distinctly heard.

Having been engaged in business for so long a time, at the same old stand, it would seem useless and unnecessary to give publicity to the fact that I am still "kicking along and blessed with usual health and strength," but my friends Messrs. Holton & Williamson having lately commenced the "North Carolina Whig," in the place of the old familiar "Charlotte Journal," that in days gone by, cheered and made glad so many hearts, on every week presented itself, I thought I would be doing our energetic and persevering friends great injustice were I not to assist them all I can in their arduous, laborious and responsible undertaking.

To those who have so liberally patronized me for the last number of years I return my grateful acknowledgments, still soliciting your continued kindness and custom, feeling confident that it will be to your advantage and interest. I am still occupying my old stand in Charlotte, on Main-street, near Maj. J. R. Kerr's Hotel, and nearly opposite R. H. Brevard's new building.

DR. ALLEN is a well known physician and has used the above medicine in his practice for TWELVE YEARS with the most astonishing effect, having tested its qualities in above

AYER'S
CHERRY PECTORAL
For the Cure of
COUGHS, COLDS, HOARSENESS, BRONCHITIS, WHOOPING-COUGH, CROUP, ASTHMA, AND CONSUMPTION.

TO PREACHERS, WITH HEADACHE AND COLDNESS OF THE BODY, take the Cherry Pectoral on going to bed, wrap up warm, lie asleep during the night.

FOR A COLD AND COUGH, take it morning, noon and evening according to directions on the bottle and the difficulty will soon be removed—None will long suffer from this trouble who once find it can be so readily cured. Persons afflicted with a wasted cough, whose breaks them at their rest at night with fever, by taking the Cherry Pectoral, on going to bed, they may be sure of sound, unbroken sleep, and consequently refreshing rest—Great relief from suffering, and an ultimate cure, is afforded to those who thus afflicted, by this invaluable remedy.

From the agreeable effect in these cases, many find the Cherry Pectoral is the cheapest as well as the necessarily forem. Reasons.

From Prominent Physicians in

Fayetteville, Ten., April 16th, 1851.

Sir:—We have given your Cherry Pectoral an extensive trial in our practice, and find it to surpass every other remedy we have for curing affections of the respiratory organs.

DOS. DUVEY & HAMPTON.

TO SINGERS AND PUBLIC SPEAKERS this remedy is invaluable, as by its agency on the throat and lungs, when taken in small quantities, removes all hoarseness, gives a clear, and wonderfully increases the power and flexibility of the voice.

ASTHMA is generally relieved, and often wholly cured by Cherry Pectoral. But there are some cases of asthma, as of any kind, entirely to be incurable. Cherry Pectoral will cure them, if they can be cured.

BRONCHITIS, or irritation of the throat and upper portion of the lungs, may be cured by using Cherry Pectoral in small and frequent doses—The uncomfortable expectoration is soon relieved.

Rev. Dr. Lansing, of Brooklyn New York, says:—

"I have seen the Cherry Pectoral cure such cases of Asthma and Bronchitis, that I feel not to believe it can rarely fail to cure them done well."

FOR CROUP, give an excess of an ounce to be followed by large and frequent doses, as the Cherry Pectoral would subdue the disease. It is quick to act, and it will do the same always.

WHOOPING COUGH may be broken up and soon cured by the use of Cherry Pectoral.

THE INFLUENZA is speedily removed by this remedy. Numerous instances have been noticed where whole families were produced from the serious consequences, while their neighbors, without the Cherry Pectoral, were suffering from the disease.

SALEM, OHIO, 11th June, '51

Dr. J. C. Ayer:—I write to inform you of the truly remarkable effects of your Cherry Pectoral in this place, and in my own family. One of my daughters was completely cured in three days of a distressing Whooping cough, by taking it. Dr. Moore, one of our very best physicians, freely states that he considers it the best remedy we have for pulmonary diseases and that he has cured more cases of croup with it than any other medicine he ever administered.

Our clergyman of the Baptist Church says that during the rest of Influenza here this season, he has seen cures from your medicine, he could scarcely have believed without seeing.

Yours respectfully,
J. D. SINCLAIR, Deputy Postmaster.

FROM THE DISTINGUISHED PROFESSOR OF CHEMISTRY AND MATERIA MEDICA, BOSTON COLLEGE.

I have found the Cherry Pectoral as its ingredients show, a powerful remedy for colds, and pulmonary diseases.

PARKER CLEVELAND, M. D.

Brunswick, Me., Feb. 5, 1847.

DR. VALENTINE MOTT,

THE WIDELY CELEBRATED PROFESSOR OF SURGERY IN THE MEDICAL COLLEGE, N. Y. CITY, SAYS:—

"I give my personal testimony that I find and discover "Ayer's Cherry Pectoral," which I consider particularly adapted to cure diseases of the Throat and Lungs."

Cures of severe diseases upon the Lungs have been effected by Cherry Pectoral in such extreme cases as warrant the belief that a remedy has at length found that can be depended on to cure the Coughs, Colds and Consumption which carry from one third thousands every year. It is indeed a medicine to which the afflicted can look with confidence not to fail, and they should not fail to avail themselves of it.

For the removal and permanent cure of all Diseases arising from an impure state of the blood or habit of the System.

Among the many and important discoveries of this generation is one whose fame will be written, as with a pen of beam, in the history of the past. Sands' Sarsaparilla stands forth alone, and by its own works proclaims its power—that mute eloquence so mournfully afflicting in the aspects of the suffering for relief has been answered. Thousands of cases of disease have been cured by this invaluable medicine, such as are furnished in the records of time. These things are not done in secret places, or in some unknown town, but are performed in our principal cities and public places. Facts are brought before the world to entertain it, beyond doubt, the healing virtues of this preparation; and the facts contained, although genuine, are as plain as the light of day.

The Sarsaparilla is combined with the most efficacious, the most salutary properties, the most potent simples of the vegetable kingdom; and its unprecedented success in the restoration to health of those who had passed under the most distressing chronic maladies, has given it an exalted character—furnishing, as it does, evidence of its own intrinsic value, and recommending it to the afflicted in terms that the tongue only can know. It has long been a matter of important consideration in the practice of medicine, to obtain a remedy similar to this—one that would act on the liver, stomach and bowels with all the precision and potency of mercurial preparations, yet without any of their deleterious effects upon the vital powers of the system. Although possessed of powerful healing properties, it is entirely harmless, and will not injure the most delicate constitution. When in perfect health, no ill effects are produced by its use, except an increase of appetite; but when disease is lurking in the frame, and warning for the conflict along the path of life, then its mysterious influence is felt and seen; it imparts new life and vigor, and brings health and strength to the suffering and diseased.

SCROFULOUS AFFECTION OF THE EYES.

WIN SHIPS, Ky., October 29, 1849.

A. B. & D. SANDS—GENTLEMEN: I should have presumed to write to you, if it was not only to let the public know the almost miraculous effect your Sarsaparilla has had upon me. My limbs were covered with ulcerous sores, so that I could not walk during the whole Spring and Summer. In this situation I commenced the use of your Sarsaparilla, and after taking two bottles was entirely cured. I must also tell you of another wonderful cure. My brother was afflicted with this complaint in his head so bad his physician told him the loss of his sight was inevitable and permanent blindness ensued in both eyes. Three bottles entirely restored his sight, and we cannot but recommend all similarly afflicted to use Sands' Sarsaparilla. Yours, truly,

BENJAMIN F. GUSKNER.

ITS POPULARITY ABROAD.

From South America.

Mariquina, Venezuela, April 12, 1849.

Messrs Sands—Gentlemen, I embrace this opportunity to make known the great benefit I have received by using your valuable Sarsaparilla. About three years since I was attacked with Rheumatism in my shoulders, and shortly my legs, and so severe was the pain, that I was unable to sleep. I tried all of the best medicines I could hear of without receiving any benefit, until through the advice of a friend I procured some of your Sarsaparilla, and after using four bottles in the course of fifteen days, I found myself entirely well. I have no hesitation in saying your Sarsaparilla is the best medicine I ever took, and can confidently recommend it to my friends and the public.

Your obedient servant,
J. M. JESURUN.

Here is another, nearer home:

New York, Jan. 8, 1850.

Messrs Sands—Gentlemen,—I have great pleasure in acknowledging to you the great benefit I have received by the use of your Sarsaparilla. A subject of pulmonary disease, I made a voyage to Europe, but while there received no benefit. A few weeks after my return, I was seized with a violent hemorrhage of the lungs, and from the debility and great prostration of strength that followed with the protracted difficulty of respiration, I am entirely relieved by the use of your Sarsaparilla, which I consider a most important and truly valuable discovery in the healing art. I feel that I have not for fourteen years enjoyed so good health as at present.

Very gratefully yours,
S. E. SEYMORE.

When every other remedy has proved ineffectual

Many persons have said, on reading my circulars that it CURES TOO MANY COMPLAINTS! but I replied, "Use it according to the directions, and if it do not get relieved, your money will be returned."
