Dress a Minor Consideration With the College Girl.

Less Expensive Than the Boys—A Health-Keeping Routine Worth Practising—Recipes and Other Valuable Hints for Women.

Dress in a woman's college is a matter of much slighter moment than it is popularly supposed to be. The last thing a girl who is in earnest about her education cares for is her gowns, if only they are comfortable and suitable. One girl known to the writer went through an entire college course of four years with four new gowns, and she was well dressed all the time. The expenses of fitting up one's quarters are not so much for a woman as for a man, supposing it to be done at all in the latter's case. The "knowing how," which is characteristic of a woman's fingers, is better than a great many dollars in a man's purse. The daintiest study parlors the writer has ever seen were two furnished with the most obvious articles of need by the college, and decorated at an additional expense of $25 for the two by the girls who had taken them for the year. There is no point of expense in which the woman student has not the advantage of the man student. No matter how little he can live on, she can live on less. When he economizes in dead earnest he goes into a cooking club and eats abominable food because it is cheap. She rigs up a kerosene stove in her own room and does her own cooking and lives well on a dollar less a week than he does.

A Health-Keeping Routine.

"Nature designed," writes an authority on health matters, "that the enormous amount of material exuded from the skin should be carried off and purified largely by the action of light and air. Our clothing prevents this action; it is in parts, as the clothing of the feet, almost air-tight, and is wholly impermeable to light. * * * That by the end we are encased in an envelope of active putrefactive change, which must necessarily exert a most depressing action upon the skin, and thence upon our physique in general, cannot be doubted." The health precautions he advises are: A sponge bath in the morning, with brisk friction before or after, a complete change of clothing before dinner, with washing of the feet, and friction with a flesh brush, and in warm weather a sponging off at night. The clothing removed should be hung up, fully exposed to air and light, and, of course, two suits of underclothing will be in use. It may be added that fresh stockings every day are a luxury well worth paying for; that shoes should be alternated every day or two, and that the feet should not be encased in high leather or kid boots a moment longer than must be.

A Convenient Work-Box.

To make a holder for buttons, tapes, hook and eyes and those various small necessities which always intertangle so vexatiously in the free play of the work-basket, six small druggist's powder boxes are needed, the kind that slip into a case of white enamel finish. These have the mark of what is within arranged, to act as a kind of handle; it is easy enough to tack the buttons, safety pins, etc., through the pasteboard by a few strong stitches. Place the boxes one above the other in a double tier of three each, and pass a firm band of broad tape of muslin around, joined tightly at one of the lower corners by a close overcasting. A broad pretty ribbon is tied about over this with a bow and loops on top. A broad pretty ribbon is tied about over this with a bow and loops on top. A broad piece of ribbon may be used instead of the muslin band if equally as convenient. This box is handy enough, and its value will be appreciated when it has been given its place for awhile on the corner of the table, or tucked into the traveling trunk, where it holds fast its contents, and is ever ready to fill all demands made upon it.

A Potato Omelet.

Miss Maria Parloa's recipe for this appetizing variation on the usual methods of preparing potatoes is as follows: Put into a stew-pan, with enough boiling water to cover them, four pared potatoes of good size, and cook for half an hour. Drain off all the water and mash the potatoes until smooth and light. Now add a teaspoonful of salt, one-fourth of a teaspoonful of pepper, a heaping tablespoonful of butter, half a teaspoonful of finely chopped parsley, a few drops of onion juice and half a gill of hot milk. Beat the mixture with a fork until quite light.

Put a tablespoonful of butter in a frying-pan and on the fire. When the pan is hot and the butter melted, press the prepared potato through a vegetable press or a colander into the pan, and smooth the surface over lightly without pressing the potato down. Cover the pan and cook until the omelet is brown, which will be in about 20 minutes. Fold over, turn out on a hot dish and serve at once.

Where Rastus Was Looking.

"Why, Uncle Rastus, what's the matter with your leg? That's a bad limp you have."

"Why, Colonel, dey is several causes to which I 'tribute de trouble. Dey are lack o' fo'sight on my part, ignorance o' medical and surgical art, an' inher'ted desire to a good Thanksgivin' dinner. To tell de truth, Colonel, in de first place, I didn't foresight I'd be known Capin Harrison had dot his trap in his hen house; den with mechanical ingenuity, I'd know how to spring dat trap wif'out puttin' my leg in it. As to de odder matter, as de desire fo' turkey was inher'ted from my father, I makes no complaint."

A Herald of the Infant Year.

Clip the last thirty years or more from the century, and the segment will represent the term of the unbounded popularity of Hostetter's Stomach Bitters. The opening of the year 1893 will be signalized by the appearance of a fresh Almanac of the Bitters in which the uses, derivation and action of this world-famous medicine will be lucidly set forth. Everybody should read it. The calendar and astronomical calculations to be found in this brochure are always astonishingly accurate, and the statistics, illustrations, humor and other reading matter rich in interest and full of profit. The Hostetter Company, of Pittsburgh, Pa., publish it themselves. They employ more than sixty hands in the mechanical work, and more than eleven months in the year are consumed in its preparation. It can be obtained, without cost, of all druggists and country dealers, and is printed in English, German, French, Welsh, Norwegian, Swedish, Dutch, Bohemian and Spanish.

A single grateful thought is the most complete prayer.

CIRCULAR.

The old and reliable firm of Cohn & Weisel was established in Newbern in 1852. The oldest house now in the city and the only surviving member of which is Adolph Cohn, who has been engaged in the Music business for the past ten years and is now located on Craven street, three doors below the City Hall. I would be pleased to inform my friends, patrons and the public generally that I have secured the large and elegant brick building formerly occupied by John Patterson, deceased, where I have ample accommodations for properly conducting my large and increasing business, and will constantly keep on hand of the latest designs, lasting tone, superior workmanship and of leading manufacturers and the best material. Also a good supply of SHEET MUSIC.

And I will endeavor to make my business as popular as the old firm used to be, and one that will give satisfaction to my numerous patrons.

The proprietor, Adolph Cohn, would take this occasion of returning his thanks to those who have taken an interest in his welfare, and would respectfully solicit the continuance of the kindly feeling of his friends.

Respectfully,
