County ASCS Offices Seeks Improvements

Each county farm program office in North Carolina is being asked "What steps need to be taken to improve service to farmers and program administration?" A. P. Hassell, Jr., Executive Director for the Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation State committee, said today.

"County committeemen, county office managers, and farmer fieldmen are to evaluate the work and service in each ASCS office," Hassell said.

"The benefits are expected to be in the form of better, faster service for farmers," Hassell continued, "and to make sure that the public business is kept in public view."

Training programs for committeemen and employees in 1963 will be based largerly on needs identified in this self-study of county ASCS offices.

The ASCS Service has begun an extensive program to improve service and management efficiency. All employees have been asked for their suggestions on how to better do specific jobs.

In accord with recommendations of the citizens committee which has just completed a study of the farmer committee system, Hassell said, a major effort will be made in 1963 to encourage more farmers to take part in the election of ASC committeemen.

Secretary of Agriculture Orville L. Freeman has announced that the farmer committee system will continue to be the farm program field force and that it will be strengthened as recommended by the citizens committee.
