TEENS HEALTH
Health and Safety Tips from The American Medical Association

Household chemicals are so familiar and we have used them so long that we tend to become careless. When we get careless, some one in our family can get hurt.

Each year half a million people are accidentally poisoned. Many are children, but many also are adults who should know better. Some 1,700 people die each year from accidental poisoning.

We use household chemicals to clean our homes, launder our clothes and open our drains. We spray roses, control weeds in the lawn and exterminate vermin and pests with poisons. We take medicines occasionally without realizing that, while the prescribed dose may relieve aches and pains, an overdose can be fatal.

What can be done to help avoid accidental poisoning in the home? The American Medical Association offers some suggestions —

* Label everything. Don't depend on memory to tell you what's in a bottle.
* Keep all household chemicals, cleansing agents and polishes out of reach of children.
* Keep all medicines, including aspirin, in a locked or inaccessible cabinet.
* Never put poison or toxic substance in a container designed to contain food—milk bottle, soft drink bottle or cereal box.
* Teach your children there are some things they must leave alone. Never forget the curiosity of the child. He will eat or drink anything.

The Congress has proclaimed the week of March 15-21, 1964, as National Poison Prevention Week.

Home poison dangers will be stressed, in an effort to help families remove or reduce them.

If poisoning occurs in your home, three steps are essential — (1) Administer first aid to the victim; (2) Save the container and any of the poisonous substance to identify it; (3) Get medical help immediately.

First aid involves getting rid of the poison or delaying its absorption. To get rid of the poison induce vomiting, by finger gagging after a generous drink of tepid water. To delay absorption, have the victim drink milk or raw egg. Vomiting should not be induced when volotile oils like gasoline or kerosene are involved, or when corrosives like lye or drain cleaners are swallowed.

Prevention of accidental poisoning requires a sense of responsibility and an awareness of possible hazards. Remember, your home contins enough unlabeled poison to kill your entire family.
