Butte, Montana, has been dubbed "the richest hill on earth," because of the extensive mining of copper, silver, gold, zinc, manganese and lead in the vicinity. According to the Book of Knowledge, it began as a mining camp in 1864 and was named for Big Butte, a nearby volcanic peak.

Unscrupulous persons sometimes try to obtain confidential information by taking advantage of the reputation and prestige of the Social Security Administration, according to Mr. Lex G. Barkley, social security district manager.
Every social security field employee carries an identification card, he continued. If you have any doubts about his identity, ask to see his card. "When talking to people on the phone we always state our name and business", Mr. Barkley said. If you have reason to believe your caller is prying, ask him to hang up so you can call him right back. Look up the number for the Social Security Administration in the phone book. You will find it under United States Government. When the operator answers, "Social Security Administration", ask for the person who called you, by name.
All information given to the Social Security Administration is confidential and is used only to administer the social security laws. The social security office is phohibited from supplying information to anyone for th epurpose of locating missing persons, collecting bills, or providing mailing lists. Most people know this and are willing to give them any and all information they need to perform their job.
Help the social security employees keep personal information about your age, income, and family confidential. Be sure you are not giving information you want kept confidential to someone who is willing to identify himself and only implied he worked for social security.
