CHRISTIAN CHEERFULNESS

DO NOT WEAR A LONG FACE.

How Few Cultivate a Sunny Disposition.

(N. Y. Herald.)

Rejoice in the Lord always: and again I say Rejoice.—Philippians, iv., 4.

What is so common among men as the disposition to see only the dark side of the events of life? Many of us have a tendency to exaggerate our ills which amounts almost to melancholia. If it is not always high tide in our course tune of fortune we sink into a condition of morbid despair. We are too apt to forget that in nature the tide must fall as well as rise. We do not realize that it is the part of wisdom to make the best use of the opportunities we have. We compare our circumstances with those of others who are more fortunate and brood over "the slings and arrows of outrageous fortune."

The tendency to dwell upon our ills grows with time. In the beginning it can be checked easily, but in time it becomes like a torrent gaining impetus with its descent, until it is beyond control. Now and then we receive the sad news that one whom we esteem as upright and godly has allowed this morbid tendency to obtain such headway that it unseats the reason and with it the sense of moral responsibility. Then we learn of the self destruction of such a one and we are not surprised. It was almost the inevitable consequence of a false, onesided view of life that is supported by neither common sense nor religion

With reference to the character of the mind men may be divided into the matter of fact and the exaggerative. While the former are liable to be unsettled and discontented occasionally, the latter are apt to be so as a rule, because their minds being imaginative, create for themselves ideals which they seldom, if ever, attain. Nevertheless, the normal condition of life is one of cheerfulness. God teaches us this is nature, which, as a rule, is bright with sunshine, gay with color and filled with joyous sounds. Laughter and song harmony and beauty are the radiant figures of that living picture whereby our Heavenly Father points out to each the road to happiness. It is the desire of every earnest man to please God. There is no better way to do so than by showing ourselves satisfied with what he gives us. A preacher once said:—"We do not please God more by eating bitter aloes than by eating honey. A cloudy, foggy, rainy day is not more heavenly than a day of sunshine. A funeral march is not so much like the music of angels as the songs of birds on a May morning. There is no more religion in the gaunt, naked forest in the winter than in the laughing blossoms of the spring and the ripe, rich fruits of autumn."

How few cultivate a sunny disposition! How few make an effort to be cheerful when they feel unhappy! There are some the hard lines of whose faces never break into a smile. There are others who know only that mirth which is provoked by artificial means, such as a joke or a ridiculous incident. Some are cheerful only when they have driven a good bargain. You all know the business smile worn by those who are anxious to gain your good will or your money. Perhaps you are acquainted with people who wear the mask of cheerfulness for the outer world and a mask of terror for their homes.

Little do they who go through life dissatisfied and cheerless know how much they lose of that which is sweetest in the human experience. Not only they but all with whom they come in contact are robbed of a portion of the blessing of existence. We owe it to our families, our friends, in fact to all our fellow men, as well as to ourselve, to make brighter, not gloomier, this human life. St. Paul's example shows that even in distressing circumstances cheerfulness is possible, His injunction, "Rejoice in the Lord," was literally obeyed by himself.

The consistent Christian must be cheerful. Even when the knowledge of his sinfulness weighs heaviest upon him he believes that God is forgiving and merciful. The bitterness of his sorrow is sweetened by the promises of God. The gloom of his soul is illumined by the light of God's love, However forbidding the darkness by which he is surrounded. however great the sufferings to which he is subjected, however mercilessly the hand of misfortune may tighten its grip, he knows he shall be higher in the esteem of his God and more fit for his destiny if, with patience and a cheerful heart, he bears these things. The consolations of his religion will never fail him if he appeals to them. Gloomy Christianity is a misrepresentation. However well meaning those may be who dwell only on the sufferings of Christ, only on the wrath of God and the punishment of sin, they do God an injustice and teach only half the truth. There is nothing to gain from such a repulsive presentation as religion. It is not natural, necessary nor fair to our fellow men to minimize those features of our religion that God has made most prominent. There is a bright side which it is of the utmost importance to emphasize in order to win men to religion. The dawn of redemption and the joy of spiritual triumph forever obliterated the sorrows of Calvary. The justice, mercy and love of God irradiate prismatic light on the sombre picture of sin and judgment.

As to Weight and Measures.

Two heaping tablespoonfuls of powdered sugar weigh an ounce.

Two rounded tablespoonfuls of flour weigh an ounce.

One heaping tablespoonful of granulated sugar weighs an ounce.

One cupful of wet or dry material is half a pint.

Two cupfuls of granulated sugar weigh a pound.

One cupful of butter weighs half a pound.

Two ounces of unmelted butter are as large as an egg medium size.

Four tablespoonfuls of liquid are equal to one wineglassful. (A sherry or claret glass is not a wine glass ordinary alluded to in measurement.)

Eggs ought to be weighed instead of counted for custards, cakes, puddings, etc., because nine large, ten medium and twelve small ones weigh a pound without their shells.

Mr. F. C. Helbig, a prominent druggist of Lynchburg, Va., says: "One of our citizens was cured of rheumatism of two years standing, by one bottle of Chamberlain's Pain Balm. This liniment is famous for its cures of rheumatism; thousands have been delighted with the prompt relief which it affords. For sale by W. G. Thomas, druggist and pharmacist, Louisburg, N. C.

COMPULSORY VACCINATION.

ATTORNEY GENERAL THINKS IT CAN BE ENFORCED.

Dr. Lewis Warns the People of Their Danger.

RALEIGH, N. C., Jan. 27.
Editor News and Observer:

The presence of smallpox in our two largest cities, Wilmington and Charlotte, is a serious matter, and as the State Health officer I feel it to be my duty to warn the people of their danger. The only practical way to reach the people to any great extent is through the newspapers, and I therefore ask the publication of this communication, not only by yourself, but by every paper in the State, as a patriotic duty.

The danger of a widespread extension of this horrible disease is not an imaginary, but a real one. And for two reasons chiefly:

1. A very large proportion of the population have never been vaccinated, and are therefore susceptible to the disease. A leading practitioner in one of our towns told me some time ago that not 10 per cent. of the children under 10 years of age in his town had ever been vaccinated.

2. It is practically impossible to enforce an efficient quarantine. Every one knows that nothing short of a cordon of armed sentries on duty night and day can keep people out, who want to enter a city or town, and our country districts are of course, utterly indefensible in this respect. But quarantines which are expensive, irritating, injurious to business, and after all ineffective, do not constitute the best method of fighting smallpox. The best method is vaccination, which is practically a perfect protection. The prejudice against it entertained by some people is unreasonable. The danger of vaccination with some loathsome disease is absolutely avoided by the use of virus direct from the cow, as is now nearly the universal custom. The risk also of any serious inflammation of the arm by the antiseptic methods now in vogue has been reduced to a minimum. There is no reasonable ground of objection to vaccination. No one has a right to jeopardize the health and life of his neighbor. In no well regulated community will he be permitted to do it. He will be compelled to submit. The right of the duly constituted authorities to enforce compulsory vaccination is set forth in the following letter from the Attorney General.

"LEXINGTON, N. C., Jan 25, 1898.

Dr. R. H. Lewis, Secretary North Carolina State Board of Health, Raleigh, N. C.:

SIR—In reply to your letter of recent date it is my opinion that under chapter 214 of Laws, 1893, it is competent for the authorities named in said chapter, to enforce compulsory vaccination. The legislature may, in the exercise of its constitutional authority, confer upon boards of health of cities and towns the power to enact rules and ordinances for the promotion of the public health, and the abatement and prevention of nuisances, which shall have the force of law within the communities over which the jurisdiction of the respective boards extends. Dill. Mun. Corp., Section 308, Slaughter House Cases, 16 Wall (U. S.) 36.

Health being the sine qua non of all personal enjoyment, it is not only the right, but the duty of the State to pass laws for the protection and preservation of the health of the people. It is competent for the legislature to require scholars of public schools to be vaccinated. Abeel vs. Clark 84, Col. 326. Any person not vaccinated may be excluded from school. See Statutes of Massachusetts and Maine.

Yours truly,
ZEB V. WALSER,
Attorney General."

The machinery for the vaccination of all the people, those unable to pay free of charge, is provided in section 23 of the act cited above and in section 25 of the same, the authorities of all cities and towns are authorized to make such regulations and impose such penalties "as in their judgement may be necessary for the protection and advancement of the public health."

So there can be no excuse for failure on the part of those upon whom the responsibility rests to do their duty in this matter. Let everybody be vaccinated and we can laugh at smallpox There is no other reliable way of warding off that most loathsome and fatal disease.

RICHARD H. LEWIS, M. D.,
Secretary North Carolina State Board of Health.

Public Scandals.

Under this head the Concord Journal promulgates some very sensible remarks, which are timely at this period, and should furnish a big banquet of very serious food for the thoughts of people everywhere.

Perhaps the world has ever been bad. Perhaps there will never be a day when there will be no scandals, no treacheries, no betrayals, says our contemporary. But there is one thing certain: There was never an age more morally responsible than this, and there was never an age in which there were more public scandals. It does seem that the very germs of decay have gotten into the very heart of public life, and now we have the scandals of the French government and betrayal of Greece, the tyranny of Russia, the dry dock scandle in New York, and on down to small North Carolina railroad presidents, the taint is seen and felt. Everywhere corruption is a part of everything.

What are we to do about it? Where shall we turn for hope and relief?

These things are logical results of our civilization. When you undermine a people's faith you undermine their life; you destroy their worth and their hope. When the church descends to a station where Lyman Abbott can ridicule the old, old story of the Bible and yet be furnished with a pulpit it shows that this grand old Gibralter of human safety is decaying at its very base. When the foolishness of preaching becomes so intensely foolish that sermons are preached to slumbering congregations by a gramophone, it shows that the preacher in charge of that church is asleep in this grand Gethsemane of sorrow. Sleep is death. Death is decay. Religion is life. And perfect life is refined, sensitive, generous, honest. This work of decay has gone on from pulpit to pew, from pew to fireside and with one fierce, devil-leap, from the fireside into all departments of public life.

Now, what are we to do? Let us return to the fountain of the Rock; let us live a life that supplies life; let us abandon false philosophies and erratic teachings which damn, even, human progress by deadening the mind and dwarfing the soul. Let us insist on chastity and a high purpose. And by this means the fountain will be purified and very soon the cool currents of living water will be felt coursing throughout this earthly garden of God, and His drooping, wilting, flowers will be refreshed and infused with new life and new possibilities.

It is not often that a physician recommends a patent medicine; when he does, you may know that it is a good one. Dr. J. P. Cleveland, Glasgow, Va., writes: "I have used Chamberlain's colic, cholera and diarrhoea remedy in my practice and it has proven to be an excellent remedy, where a thorough course of medicine had failed with me. I recommend it to my patients every time for colic and diarrhoea." Many other progressive physicians recommend and use this remedy, because it always cures and cures quickly. Get a bottle and you will have an excellent doctor in the house. for all bowel complaints, both for children and adults. For sale by W. G. Thomas, druggist and pharmacist. Louisburg, N. C.
