Lean Upon my Arm Mother.

Pray lean upon my arm, mother;
Your form is feeble now,
And silvery are the locks that shade
The furrows on your brow.

Your step is not so strong, mother,
As in the days gone by;
But strong as ever is the love
That beams within your eye.

When I was but a babe, mother,
With tender love inspired
You carried me for many an hour,
Until your arms were tired.

From childhood up to manhood's years
Through every pain and ill,
You watched me with a loving eye,
You watch my welfare still.

And shall I fail you now, mother,
When all your strength has fled—
Neglect to guide your feeble steps
As through life's vale you tread?

Your eyes are dim with age, mother,
Care's lines are on your brow,
The little feet you guided once
Are strong to guide you now.

Then lean upon my arm, mother,
Henceforth life's journey through,
What you did so long for him
Your boy will do for you.

THE EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE.

An important meeting of the Democratic State Executive Committee was held in Raleigh, last Thursday night, in Commons Hall, preceeded by a conference with the Committee of representative Democrats from all sections of the State.

These are times when the people need to be taken into full confidence and to be told all the facts without any varnishing. If the people can get the facts, disconnected with fiction, before them, we will have no forebodings about the result. Therefore, we intend to lay before our readers as fully and clearly as possible all that transpired in the conference and committee meetings.

Chairman Ed. Chambers Smith called the conference to order and stated that the call was made for the purpose of getting together representative Democrats from all portions of the State to discuss the grave political crisis that confronts the Democratic party of North Carolina and to devise ways and means to bring about harmony in the ranks. He then called to the Chair Senator King, of Guilford.

The conference represented all shades of opinion in the Democratic party, with a preponderance of Alliancemen. A full, free and unrestricted expression of opinion from all quarters was invited and obtained. Men of every opinion spoke plainly without reservation. There was no mincing of words and yet the spirit of toleration, the determination to give and take, so governed the assembly that there was no friction and the statement of the Raleigh papers that "harmony prevailed" was strictly true.

It was a meeting of sober, serious, earnest men deeply impressed with the weight of a stern responsibility that was upon them and recognizing the fact that their action might mean much for good or for evil to the State.

The men who have earned the respect, esteem and confidence of the Democracy, both in and out of the Alliance, were invited to give in their experience and to tell how they regarded the situation all over the State and in the different sections of the State. Jarvis, Congressman Grady, Congressman Alexander, Thorne, Kitchin, Skinner, Means, McDowell, C. B. Watson, Robbins, Coke, Reddingfield, Webster and such men spoke at length and earnestly and made a deep impression upon the conference and upon each other.

We would not essay to report the individual speeches or the substance of them, but shall only attempt to furnish our readers with the general purport and result harvested from them.

Both sides, Alliancemen and non-Alliancemen, learned things they did not know before, learned to know each other better, and were drawn closer together in sympathy and in the brotherhood of Democracy. As brother Democrats, assembled in the house of their fathers, they talked plainly and unaffectedly to each other but with the mutual affection and forbearance that brothers should observe under the paternal roof-tree. In that sense the meeting was a "love feast."

Gov. Jarvis struck the key-note. It was "harmony." He drew a line in the Democratic party, and for the sake of illustration, put on one side of the Alliance Democrats and on the other the non-Alliance Democrats. He would not compare them in numbers, but it would be safe to say that either side was helpless for political usefulness without the assistance of the other. Both stand upon a platform that carried the party to glorious and sweeping victory in 1890. That was a platform of compromise. Get together. Compromise your differences. Be moderate. Be tolerant. Get together you must, or all is lost. Mutual forbearance, mutual concession, compromise, is all that can get you together. There you stand, still together; you are not divided yet. Beware. United you stand—divided you fall. And whither do you fall? Into the clutches of that party whose principles are at war with all the principles of Democracy and with all the fundamental principles of the Alliance.

In this strain spoke the wise old statesman and his words produced a profound impression.

Major Robbins, from the West, also made a talk that sunk down deep in the minds of his hearers. He adverted to intemperate expressions on both sides and contended that two wrongs do not make a right. He called to the attention of the Eastern Alliancemen, whose party fealty is not tampered with by speakers, that in the West lecturers openly denounce the Democratic party as equally guilty with the Republican party for the evils that Democrats and Alliancemen are fighting against and with great eloquence he summed up the glorious record of the Democratic party, in State and Nation, as a great reform party, defending it against the aspersions of its enemies.

Beddingfield, Grady, Alexander, and a half dozen other prominent Alliancemen spoke and it would have done good the ears of any Democrat to have heard them. They recognized the gravity of the situation and added strength to their brother Democrats by declaring that come what may they are Democrats, that they will fight a third party to the death and that they will stand for compromise and for harmony in the Democratic party. (We were gratified to learn in this meeting and on our Raleigh trip that the Democracy of such men as John C. Scarborough, E. C. Beddingfield and thousands of other influential Alliancemen all over the Central and Eastern part of the State is of a stamp that is not to be discounted. They will not stand by the party and they will not stand by and see non-Alliancemen treated with intolerance or dictated to without taking a hand.)

They spoke with extreme frankness and candor. Some of them announced that we might make up our minds to see a third party in North Carolina, for it would come. It would be started, they said, by "sore-head" Democrats and assistant Republicans and the policy of the Democracy was to act with such wisdom as to give them no excuse for organizing, and to enable the conservative, loyal Democrats in the Alliance to squeeze the third party down to the smallest possible notch. Let not the Executive Committee flaunt any red flags in the faces of the disaffected; let it lay down no ultimate; let it counsel moderation, toleration, conservatism, concession, compromise. Let no man have the excuse of saying he was driven into a third party by the intolerant action of the Executive Committee.

After the conference adjourned and the visiting Democrats retired, the Executive Committee met with Chairman Smith in the chair. The Executive Committee was composed largely of Alliancemen. Mr. Beddingfield was a member by proxy. A set of resolutions was offered re-affirming the allegiance of the party to the platform of 1890 and condemning all measures of paternalism and centralization. But they were voted down by a large majority. This writer, who approves of the resolutions as a platform of principles to which he individually subscribes and upon which he is unalterably fixed in his determination to stand, voted against them for two reasons:

1. He was not fully convinced of the committee's authority to issue such an address, and

2. If he had been, he was willing to defer to the judgment of honest, conscientious Democrats who felt that it was not politic to issue it at this time. What we want is to harmonize all honest men willing to meet on a compromise platform, to allay bitterness and to clear out no paths for anybody to trip over to the third party.

And, at the same time, it is our duty as Democrats to hold high aloft the banner of Democracy, proclaiming her principles and defending her creed against dangerous heresies and harmful innovations. That is our duty as individual Democrats, although it may not be the duty of the Executive Committee in its official capacity to go out of its way to get somebody to step on its coat-tail.

Upon motion a committee of ten, composed of five Alliancemen, and five non-Alliancemen, was appointed to issue an address to the Democrats of the State along the line of Governor Jarvis's speech. The committee, which was appointed by another committee of five raised for the purpose, is composed of the following gentlemen:

E. C. Smith, T. J. Jarvis, S. B. Alexander, Elias Carr, C. B. Watson, E. A. Moye, A. Leazer, W. M. Robbins, J. S. Bell, and H. A. Gudger.—Lenoir Topic.

Col. Andrews Honored.

President Palmer, of the national commission, has just appointed the most important of the World's Fair committees, that of premiums and awards. The committee is John Boyd Thatcher, of New York; B. B. Smalley, Vermont; William F. King, Iowa; Gen. Britton, Washington, D. C.; Martt McDonald, Colorado; W. J. Sewell, New Jersey; Thomas L. Lowndes, Maryland; Col. A. B. Andrews, North Carolina; W. F. Cochran, Texas; O. R. Hundley, Alabama; and Charles B. Hopkins, Washington.

Messrs. Thatcher and Sewell, with Thomas B. Bryan, to represent Chicago, will leave early in November on a ten week's tour through Spain, Italy, and the Danubian and North African States, to promote the Exposition enterests.

Granada Flooded.

MADRID, Oct. 22.—News comes from Granada of most disastrous floods in that province. Many houses have been wrecked, and a great number of cattle lost. Railway travel in the province is at a stand still.

A Young Giant.

Alleghany can boast of perhaps one of the largest boys of his age to be found in the State, says the Baltimore Sun. His name is William W. Whittig, and he resides with his parents in Frostburg. Throughout the country he is looked on as a giant. He was born in Baltimore, Md., at the corner of Broadway and Chase streets, December 27th, 1874; there he is a little over sixteen years and eight months old. With his parents he moved to Frostburg in March, 1876. For the past two years he has been growing at the rate of one-half an inch per month. His height is 6 feet 4½ inches and he weighs 185 pounds. He wears a No. 7¼ hat and No. 11 shoe. His hand measures 13½ inches around the knucks when closed. His chest measures 44, and his waist 41 inches. He has always enjoyed excellent health and possesses an appetite which would alarm most people. It calls for about what would satisfy three ordinary laboring men at each meal. He lifts 350 pounds with ease, is of a happy disposition and a great favorite with the boys of the town. When angered he is a terror. He is the son of ex-Mayor Whittig, a leading citizen, and Elizabeth Whittig, both of whom are large persons. The father is six feet three inches in height and weighs 200 pounds; the mother is of medium height and weighs 220 pounds. The family is well-to-do and highly respected. Mr. Whittig, with the assistance of his sons, carries on a bakery and confectionery establishment. The young giant is still growing.

And She Traveled on a Pass.

While some of the North Carolina papers are discussing Col. Polk's traveling on a pass, the Kansas papers are telling the following on his able and accomplished coleague, Mrs. Mary Lease:

"A tall, angular looking woman walked up to Conductor Joe Collins, of the Southern Kansas yard, at the Union depot yesterday and attempted to board the train.

"Let me see your ticket, ma'm," said the conductor, in his characteristically polite manner.

"I won't do it; I know where I am going," replied the woman, rather tartly.

"O, but you must. You cannot get on this train unless you do; it's the rule," said Collins. "You must let me see your ticket."

"I don't travel on a ticket. I have a pass," exclaimed she doftily, and again she attempted to pass.

"I must see your pass then."

"Well you havn't sense enough to tell whether it's a pass or a ticket, I guess."

But she showed him the pass. It was all right—an annual pass. It was issued to Mrs. Mary Lease, denouncer of monopolists, female orator, the oracle of the Farmers' Alliance.—Winston Sentinel.

A Good Example for Other Girls.

That's the way to win better place, girls. A Norfolk letter says. Listen. The best class of factory girls in the Union are those that belong to the Norfolk mill. The black sheep has yet to be found, and the smallest scandal is unwritten about these blithesome and beautiful Southern girls. Most of them are Virginians by birth, proud as their ancestors every were, and hopeful of winning a better place in the industrial world than they now dignify. No foreman or superintendent would dare address one of the haughty maidens by her first name. When enrolled on the books she refuses to give her Christian name. "What name?" was asked a new comer in the woolen mill, recently opened. "Miss Clayton." "And your Christian name?" "That is an impertinent inquiry. I wish to be known in the mill as Miss Clayton." And so she is. So are all these industrious, unobtrusive young women.

Methodist Statistics.

Some statistics read at the Ecumenical Conference, at Washington, shows the strength of the Methodist church to be as follows:

Eastern section of Europe—ministers, 4,481; members, 915,284; adherents, 4,209,601.

Asia—ministers, 533; members, 34,334; adherents, 114,968.

Africa—ministers, 294; members, 71,147; adherents, 283,776.

Australia and Polynesia—ministers, 786; members 63,189. Another section—ministers, 2,094; members, 1,113,905; adherents, 488,183. Western section—ministers, 36,601; members, 4,688,494; adherents, 20,281,976.

Grand totals—ministers, 45,695; members, 6,494,299; adherents, 25,378,104.

Who Wrote the Bible.

Quite a ludicrous scene occurred in Salisbury. Three good old farmers from the back country, well loaded with happy juice, were overheard in a heated dispute over some point in the Bible. The discussion continued until one propounded the following question: "Well, who do you suppose written the Bible?" Receiving no reply, he answered himself by saying: "It was wrote by expired man a long time ago."—Salisbury Herald.

Postmaster General Wanamaker officially collected $5,730,000 more in the twelve months ended July 1 last than he spent.

A CONDEMNED MAN'S REQUEST.

He Asks Gov. Francis to Let Him be Hanged in Public.

SEDALIA, Mo., Oct. 20.—Thomas A. Williamson, the Salvation Army murderer of the Moores, father and son, who is to be hanged on Oct. 31, has written the following note to Gov. Francis:

"DEAR GOVERNOR:—I want to ask you for a favor. Will you let me hang in public? Your friend,
THOMAS A. WILLIAMSON."

"People have expressed the fear that I will break down," said the condemned man. "To such I will say that life has no charms for me, and I will accept such as fate has ordained like a man who is ready and willing to die. I have spent the greater part of my life behind iron bars and stone walls, and it would only be a very short time that I have on this earth confined in the prison, so I prefer hanging. If allowed the privilege on the gallows, I will tell the people of the treatment I received at the hands of one whose duty it was to stay by me to the last."

GOV. CAMPBELL'S CHALLENGE.

Willing to Meet Maj. McKinley in Joint Debate on Any Subject.

CLEVELAND, Ohio, Oct. 21.—Gov. Campbell addressed an audience of 6,000 people in Music Hall to-night. His two hours' speech was devoted almost entirely to a discussion of the tariff question, with incidental allusions to State issues. Hon. Virgil P. Kline, one of his rivals for the gubernatorial nomination, was president of the evening.

Gov. Campbell entered a challenge to any Republican to find a single wage-worker in America whose wages had been increased by the McKinley law. He repeated his challenge to Maj. McKinley to cancel all dates and engage in a series of joint debates on any issue the major or his committee might select. He then attacked Postmaster General Wanamaker, whom he charged with getting his commodities manufactured in England by cheap labor, and then entering suit against the United States Government for a collection of the duties which he paid upon the importation of products thus manufactured. Gov. Campbell was followed by Hon. Benton McMillin, of Tennessee, candidate for Speaker of the House, in a forcible argument for tariff reform, and by a few words from Congressman Tom L. Johnson, of the city.

OIL PAYING $24,000 PER DAY.

McDonald Doubles Her Population With Wild Speculators.

MCDONALD, Pa., Oct. 20.—What gold was to the California pioneers, oil is to the host of crazed speculators who have come to make their fortunes at a single bound. With an output the minimum of which is estimated at 40,000 barrels ($24,000) per day, and whose maxium reaches up to a guess that it may be 100,000 barrels, everybody is going wild on oil.

The population of McDonald, which was 3500 four months ago, is now 5,000, with twenty-four trains per day each way between here and and Pittsburg. Town lots have risen from $150 each to as high as $500.

The eight wells on the 50-acre Miller Farm are yielding 14,400 barrels ($8,784) per day. Hayes & Garland, the lessees, get it all. If this field shall keep up its present output for a year it will amount to 14,000,000 barrels $7,000,000, even at such a reduced price as 50 cts.

MAUD S. DETHRONED.

The Trotting Record Lowered by the California Mare Sunol.

STOCKTON, Cal., Oct. 20.—Sunol beat the world's record on the Stockston track to-day, making a mile in 2:08¼, beating Maud S.'s time half a second. It was the fast mile from the start and the mare finished strong. After warming her up in three miles jogging and rubbing down, Marvin came out at 5 o'clock this afternoon to go against the record.

At the first attempt he nodded for the word and she ran away alone. The runner was waiting at the half for her. She went the first quarter in 0:31¼, half in 1:04 flat; three-quarters in 1:37, and came home strong and scored in 2:08¼. There were six timers and every watch was the same. The crowd went wild when the time was made known.

NEW YORK'S NEXT GOVERNOR.

Bets Made That It Will Not Be Either Fassett or Flower.

NEW YORK, Oct. 20.—Bets are being made here that neither Fassett nor Flower will be the next Governor of New York. They base their calculations upon the contingency that Governor Hill will resign when he goes to Washington as a United States Senator in December. Were he to do this Lieutenant Governor Jones would become Governor for a month. The general opinion, however, is that Governor Hill will serve but his term.

Growing in Wealth and Virtue.

An Increase of $70,000,000 in Texas assessable values this year shows that the Texans are getting along pretty comfortably in the matter of worldly wealth. Still better, the richer Texas becomes the bigger the Democratic majority grows. At this rate, by the time Texas is as rich as New York there will be about two Democrats to each head of population and Republicanism will be decidedly a minus quality there.—St. Louis Republic.

GENERAL NEWS.

A rainmaking company, with a capital of $100,000, has been organized at Goodland, Kan., for the purpose of producing artificial rain, paying Melbourne 10 cents an acre for the showers.

A woman, Miss Mary Snow, is now Superintendent of Schools in Bangor, and it is generally admitted that she is more competent to fill the post than any man who ever held it.

The United States steamer Alliance reports to the Navy Department that it rescued eight starving Chinamen, part of a ship-wrecked crew, who were drifting on a raft in the Yellow Sea.

The Chinese are very particular about lucky and unlucky colors. A printer used green paper for the Chinese calendar, and his trade stopped almost immediately. He finally discovered that green was an unlucky color.

A letter received by an Augusta (Me.) publisher a few days ago from Salem, Ohio, was mutilated in a remarkable manner. The Ohio Postmaster had inclosed the letter in an official envelope, along with a note explaining that the mail carrier who collected it had been shot by a highwayman, the charge passing through his pouch and its contents and taking effect in his leg.

The monument to Henry W. Grady was unveiled in Atlanta yesterday at 1:30 o'clock. The streets of Atlanta were thronged with visitors from every State in the South, and when the tveil fell from the bronze statue, thirty thouand people joined in the cheers as the familiar figure of the beloved Georgian stood in bold relief above the great sea of human faces. The monument was unveiled by Miss Gussie Grady. Never in the history of the city has a more imposing procession passed through its streets than the parade that passed from the Capital to the monument. Every civic and military organization in the city and many organizations from surrounding cities participated in the procession which was not less than a mile and a half long. Confederate veterans and members of the Grand Army of the Republic marched together and were greeted with applause all along the line. Gov. David B. Hill, of New York, the orator of the day, rode on the first carriage drawn by four white horses. By his side was Gov. Northen, of Georgia. When everything was in readiness at the monument the band struck up "Dixie" and the great throng went wild with enthusiasm. Col. Chas. S. Northen, President of the Grady Monument Association, presided.

DESTITUTION IN MEXICO.

A Rich Man Shot to Death for Charging $4 a Bushel for Corn.

SAN ANTONIO, Tex., Oct. 22.—W. T. Robertson, the contractor for the construction of the Durango extension of the Mexican International Railroad arrived her yesterday. The destitution among the people of that section of Mexico, he says, is even worse than reported, the drought not having yet been broken. The government has removed temporarily the duty on corn on account of the famine and large quantities are being purchased from the United States. The famished people, however, receive but little benefit in prices, as the corn falls into the hands of speculators, who put the price up. A few days ago a wealthy land owner, living near the Orreon, received a big consignment of corn, the price of which he placed at $4 per bushel. When the poor, starving cattle herders in the vicinity learned of his action, a mob of them got together, and, proceeding to his home, took him out and shot him to death.

AN OHIO MAN'S

Second Wife Attends the Funeral of His First Wife.

An Ohio man recently took his second wife to the first wife's funeral, and here is how it came about. Wife No. 1 died of a contagious disease which necessitated an immediate burial. The widower found himself with a large family of children on his hands, and in looking about found a widow in the same fix. A consultation followed, and the next day the couple repaired to a distant village where the squire tied the knot. Meanwhile the funeral sermon of wife No. 1 had not been preached, as her favorite was not in the neighborhood, so the eventful day was delayed until two weeks after the second marriage. At that time the services were held and the bride and groom were attentive listeners.

Neighbor, see you not the signal

Heed you not that constant hacking,
While the form grows weak?
O, delay not, or this dear one

You can save her by the use of Pierce's G. M. D.
