Mr. J. F, Nunn, a former resident of Wilmington, now of Laurinburg, N. C., has invented and patented a process for the manufacture of pure butter from milk just taken from the cow. By it he claims that he can convert the milk into the most delicious butter, sweet and unadulterated, in five minutes, at a cost not exceeding five cents per pound. Mr. Nunn is disposing of family and county rights for its manufacture.—Sunday Morning Mail.

A few weeks since Col. Alspaugh, of Winston, proposed to endow Trinity College. Mr. J. S. Carr, of Durham, heartily seconded the proposition, and agrees to be one of twenty who will give $5,000 each for the purpose of raising $100,000 endowment fund for Trinity. Are there not nineteen other Methodists in North Carolina who will give $5,000 each?—Durham Plant.

TUTT'S PILLS
TORPID BOWELS, DISORDERED LIVER, and MALARIA.

From these sources arise three-fourths of the diseases of the human race. These symptoms indicate their existence: Loss of Appetite, Bowels costive, Sick Headache, fullness after eating, aversion to exertion of body or mind, Eructation of food, Irritability of temper, Low spirits, A feeling of having neglected some duty, Dizziness, Fluttering at the Heart, Dots before the eyes, highly colored Urine, CONSTIPATION, and demand the use of a remedy that acts directly on the Liver. As a Liver medicine TUTT'S PILLS have no equal. Their action on the Kidneys and Skin is also prompt; removing all impurities through these three "scavengers of the system," producing appetite, sound digestion, regular stools, a clear skin and a vigorous body. TUTT'S PILLS cause no nausea or griping nor interfere with daily work and are a perfect

From Dan'l Wertman's Sketches of "Men and things in North Carolina"—Fifty years ago.

THE BIG MUSTER

The annual general muster in the different counties of western North Carolina was the biggest thing in the counties. I have seen larger crowds of people together on such occasions than I ever saw on any other occasion. Every body was there that had shoes to wear; gentlemen, ladies, girls and boys, old and young, big and little, and every one.

It was a regular field day for the young folks to do their courting. They would dress in their best clothes and put the best foot foremost on that day. They started from home with the wildest expectations of having every wish and desire fulfilled and obtained. The success of each depended in equal manner upon the shrewd manœuvering of each for himself or herself.

A great feature on such occasions was the old German ladies with their wagon loads of ginger cakes, blackberry and apple wines, all of their own making. Speaking of ginger cakes, they could make the sweetest most delicious and best that I ever saw. A cake and glass of apple wine of their make was just good enough to make a young girl bite her lucious lip or a boy strike his daddy. I have never seen a ginger cake worthy of the name south of the Savannah river.

It was the custom for the young men to invite a lady or ladies to a cake wagon and treat her or them to cake and wine. Whether they thought that the nearest way to a lady's affections was down her throat, I am not prepared to say, but will say this; That any thing apart from that strange power that thrills the heart to wildest rapture, those cakes and wines might have that effect. This kind of attention on the part of the gentlemen was highly appreciated by the ladies, because it meant something—a token of high regard, a straw, a feather fluttering in the breeze, and a premonitory symptom of love; and it was the few big drops of rain preceding the hard shower. The mind of both sexes is full of speculation, trembling between hope and fear, and each for him or herself claiming the benefit of the reasonable doubt.

I had a little friend, William Turner, about my own age—twelve years old. He was the son of a near neighbor of my father, and the best boy I ever knew. I was on a visit to him once, and while there five or six young ladies called to see his mother. One of them, Rachel Briggs, caught the little lad, hugged and kissed him and called him her little sweetheart. Miss Briggs was beautiful, about nineteen years of age, and he about twelve. He fell desperately in love with Rachel Briggs. This boy was the darling of his mother. She gave him the endearing name of "crust,"—I suppose she meant pie-crust—and he loved his mother beyond expression to say how much. He was ever ready and willing to do any thing for his mamma.

His father gave him a beautiful bay colt about two years old. He liked to be bitted, and better still to have a saddle put on his back and girted round him. He would look around, throw up and toss his head about, and paw the ground as if well pleased, and when my little friend mounted into the saddle the colt seemed to be proud. He walked grandly, trotted loftily, and loped magnificently. He was an interesting colt.

As before stated, my little friend had fallen desperately in love with Rachel Briggs; her image was photographed upon his heart. The general muster was coming on where he would be certain to see the object of his first love.

His good mother had woven upon her hand-loom a nice piece of steel-mixed cloth, from which enough was taken to make him a coat and pants. She wove upon the same woof cloth enough for several vests, that was striped with indigo blue and turkey red. It was real nice. She got a good tailor to cut and make his pants coat and vest. The striped vest was cut bias; his coat fit him nicely. His mother had made him some nice shirts with collars attached, and bought him two nice little cravats. He also had a nice new hat and new shoes, and when he had all these nice clothes on he looked like a little man, and was as proud if not prouder than his bay colt.

He had prepared him a programme to be strictly adhered to as to how he should meet his lady-love at the big muster. First, he was to present her with a large red apple to talk to her some, then politely invite her to take some ginger cake and apple wine, and talk with her while they were eating the cake and wine. He was a nice little gentleman.

The day arrived for the general muster. He and I were to go together. His mother dressed him up in his best clothes, tied his cravant on, chucked him under the chin and kissed him. He was particularly proud of his vest, striped with indigo blue and turkey red, cut bias. I had on good clothes myself.

He had not told his mother of his love for Rachel Briggs, nor what his programme was.

He went to the apple orchard and got the largest apple I ever saw; it was of solid red color, and it must have weighed a pound or more; put it in his coat pocket. It was so heavy that it sagged his coat to one side. He mounted his bay colt, and I my father's flea-bitten gray, and we trotted off to the big muster; got there and hitched our horses to swinging limbs of a wide spreading oak tree, and we walked up to the large crowd and looked about for a moment, and then walked around to where a great many ladies were standing and peeped about for Rachel Briggs, but did not see her. My friend's big apple had drawn his coat all to one side. I suggested to him that he take the apple from his pocket, throw his handkerchief over it, and hold it in his hand. He did so, and I straightened up his coat for him. We walked round about among the ladies and gentlemen, but could not find Rachel Briggs. The crowd was so large that it was a difficult matter to find any particular person. We kept going around, but finally took a stand and looked around, and not more than ten feet from us there stood Rachel Briggs engaged in animated conversation with one of the town "fellers." She wore a blue and red changeable colored silk dress. It looked red for a while, then blue, and then red again. It was bewildering. White bonnet with artificial flowers stuck upon it, and some ribbons fluttering in the wind; had a fan and a parasol. She was beautiful and charming; a bright bird from a sunny clime, with beautiful plumage, rare and not often seen, that flits before one for a moment, then dissappears and leaves the beholder in wonderment. That "town feller" wore store clothes—blue broadcloth coat, with velvet collar and burnished buttons, drab pants and a swan's down vest. He looked like a jay bird.

My young friend kept his eyes on Rachel, and in a few moments she saw him and gracefully nodded to him. He tipped his new hat to her, walked up and presented the big red apple to her. She received it with many thanks and bestowed upon him her blandest smile. He said nothing but walked away—got off a short distance and took a good look at that town feller, and particularly at his swan's down vest, and then looked at his own blue and red striped vest, cut bias, and did not think nor feel that he was at any disadvantage in comparison with the town feller. He waited a long time for the town feller to leave, but he wouldn't leave. Finally my little friend got impatient, and he and I walked away.

His love for Rachel Briggs had rectified and purified his heart; it had eliminated from his very soul all grossness, unholy desires or evil thoughts. His feelings were as fine as split silk. His heart was as pure as the snowflakes that so lightly fall on Chimbarazo's tallest peak.

He and I wandered about over an hour—took some cake and wine together, and looked about and saw Rachel and the town feller about one hundred and fifty yards from where we had left them walking and talking; they went to one of the cake wagons, ate cake and wine and talked. They didn't see us but we watched them. After a while Rachel took the big apple and cut it in two halves and gave the town feller one half and kept the other herself. There they stood, eating that apple and smacking their lips over it. Then it was that my little friend appeared to be the picture of despair. He looked at them a little while, and then said, "Come, let us go." We walked out of the crowd and some distance away to where a log was lying; we sat down on it, and my little friend burst out and cried like a child. After shedding copious showers of tears, he took his handkerchief and wiped his weeping eyes.

He was two young to know that true love never did run smooth.

About three months after the big muster, Rachel Briggs and that town feller were married. That marriage, together with large draughts of catnip tea, cured my young friend of his first love.

After he and I grew up to be men, we had a talk about his early love. I asked him how he felt after his big cry. His reply was funny. He said, "I felt like a rural rooster with his comb cut off and his tail pulled out."

Another City Proposes to step into the Cotton Manufacturing Line.

TRENTON, TENN., Feb. 19th, '82.

From the Baltimore Manufacturers' Record.

Steps are being taken in our city looking to the erection of a cotton factory, to spin cotton and weave it into plain and striped cloths. We want information as to the cost of a factory completete, running 30 or 40 looms, and the proper number of spindles to supply them. Our city is on the Mobile & Ohio Railroad, in the midst of a good cotton producing country; water and fuel abundant. I do not mean to say we have water for power. Coal can be had here reasonably cheap, or wood would cost us about $2 per cord. We would buy cotton in the seed and gin it, and use directly from the gin. The seed we would sell to the oil mill located here.

The products of the mill can be shipped on reasonable rates to any part of the country. For example, the Trenton Cotton Seed Oil Mill can ship to Nassau, N. H., at 45 cts. per 100 lbs.; to New Orleans at 20 cts.

Trenton has now in successful operation one cotton seed oil mill, two steam flouring mills, one chair factory, one broom factory, one plow manufactory and foundry, one steam cotton gin, and will erect another this summer. Also proposes to have a spoke and hub factory and a $50,000 cotton factory. Gibson county, of which our city is the county seat, produces cotton, corn, wheat and tobacc abundantly. Many thousand dollars' worth of small fruits are shipped from different points in the county annually. Cattle raising is coming to the front around Trenton. Sales have been made here by farmers at 5 cts. gross. Trenton hopes to get a railroad this year.

SIMMONS LIVER REGULATOR

For Dyspepsia, Costiveness, Sick Headache, Chronic Diarrhœa, Jaundice, Impurity of the Blood, Fever and Ague, Malaria, and all Diseases caused by Derangement of Liver, Bowels and Kidneys.

SYMPTOMS OF A DISEASED LIVER.

Bad Breath; Pain in the Side, sometimes the pain is felt under the Shoulder-blade, mistaken for Rheumatism; general loss of appetite; Bowels generally costive, sometimes alternating with lax; the head is troubled with pain, is dull and heavy, with considerable loss of memory, accompanied with a painful sensation of leaving undone something which ought to have been done; a slight, dry cough and flushed face is sometimes an attendant, often mistaken for consumption; the patient complains of weariness and debility; nervous, easily startled; feet cold or burning, sometimes a prickly sensation of the skin exists; spirits are low and despondent, and, although satisfied that exercise would be beneficial, yet one can hardly summon up fortitude to try it—in fact, distrusts every remedy. Several of the above symptoms attend the disease, but cases have occurred when but few of them existed, yet examination after death has shown the Liver to have been extensively deranged.

It should be used by all persons, old and young, whenever any of the above symptoms appear.

Persons Traveling or Living in Unhealthy Localities, by taking a dose occasionally to keep the Liver in healthy action, will avoid all Malaria, Bilious attacks, Dizziness, Nausea, Drowsiness, Depression of Spirits, etc. It will invigorate like a glass of wine, but is no intoxicating beverage.

If You have eaten anything hard of digestion, or feel heavy after meals, or sleepless at night, take a dose and you will be relieved.

Time and Doctors' Bills will be saved by always keeping the Regulator in the House!

For, whatever the ailment may be, a thoroughly safe purgative, alterative and tonic can never be out of place. The remedy is harmless and does not interfere with business or pleasure.

IT IS PURELY VEGETABLE,
And has all the power and efficacy of Calomel or Quinine, without any of the injurious after effects.

A Governor's Testimony.
Simmons Liver Regulator has been in use in my family for some time, and I am satisfied it is a valuable addition to the medical science.
J. GILL SHORTER, Governor of Ala.

Hon. Alexander H. Stephens, of Ga., says: Have derived some benefit from the use of Simmons Liver Regulator, and wish to give it a further trial.

"The only Thing that never fails to Relieve."—I have used many remedies for Dyspepsia, Liver Affection and Debility, but never have found anything to benefit me to the extent Simmons Liver Regulator has. I sent from Minnesota to Georgia for it, and would send further for such a medicine, and would advise all who are similarly affected to give it a trial as it seems the only thing that never fails to relieve.
P. M. JANNEY, Minneapolis, Minn.

Dr. T. W. Mason says: From actual experience in the use of Simmons Liver Regulator in my practice I have been and am satisfied to use and prescribe it as a purgative medicine.

Nomination Withdrawn---Wheeler's Chances.

Special to the Observer.

WASHINGTON, March 7.—The contest over the Marshalship in the Western District of North Carolina has taken a new phase, the name of Thos. B. Keogh, which has so long been hung up on the committee having been withdrawn by the President. It is thought that this is a compromise step to let matters simmer down, and prevent an unpleasant struggle in the Republican party in North Carolina. It thought here that Col. Oliver H. Dockery, defeated candidete for Congressman at large, will be nominated in place of Keogh. Wheeler's case, whose confirmation as collector of the 5th district also hangs fire, has been recommitted, and his friends say they now feel confident he will go through.

Separate bills will be introduced in the House at an early day for the abolition of the tax on brandy and tobacco, and to modify the system of internal revenue as to the mode of collecting the tax.

HOSTETTER'S
CELEBRATED

BITTERS

The Want of a Reliable Diuretic,
Which, while acting as a stimulant of the kidneys, neither excites nor irritates them, was long since supplied by Hostetter's Stomach Bitters. This fire medicine exerts the requisite degree of stimulation upon these organs, without producing irritation, and is, therefore, far better adapted for the purpose than unmedicated excitants often resorted to. Dyspepsia, fever and ague, and kindred diseases, are all cured by it.

The Old Mullein Plant.

While nature has been sparing in giving us an abundance of her valuable minerals, she has by an All-wise provision been generous in the prolific distribution of such vegetation she has given for medicine, and science in its eager search for the rare ones, has overlooked this fact. How many of us seeing the common Mullein plant in the old fields and waste places; the beautiful Sweet Gum tree bordering our swamps, have thought that in each there was a principle of the very highest medicinal virtue. It is true that the Cherokee Indians knew of this years ago, but not until recently has it begun to attract the attention of the Medical world, and now the long forsaken Mullein plant ranks among the first, and all the medical journals are heralding its grand effects.

In TAYLOR'S CHEROKEE REMEDY OF SWEET GUM AND MULLEIN, the mullein tea is combined with the Sweet Gum, and by its use Consumptives are relieved and mothers made happy in curing their little ones of Croup and Whooping-Cough, and all suffering from Lung and Bronchial Diseases are troubled no more.

For sale by all Druggists. Price 25 cts., and $1.00 per Bottle. Manufactured by WALTER A. TAYLOR, Atlanta, Ga., Proprietor Taylor's Premium Cologne.
