TAYLOR'S
CHEROKEE REMEDY
OF SWEET GUM AND MULLEIN.

The sweet gum, as gathered from a tree of the same name, growing along the small streams in the Southern States, contains a stimulating expectorant principle that loosens the phlegm producing the early morning cough, and stimulates the child to throw off the false membrane in croup and whooping-cough. When combined with the healing mucilaginous principle in the mullein plant of the old fields, presents in TAYLOR'S CHEROKEE REMEDY OF SWEET GUM AND MULLEIN the finest known remedy for Coughs, Croup, Whooping-Cough and Consumption; and so palatable, any child is pleased to take it. I STOOD WHERE THE SHADOWS WERE FALLING.

I stood where the shadows were falling,
And gazed on the cloud-bannered West,
Where the sun neath it's arches of splend r,
Trailed his beams mid their roses to rest;
And I thought as the stars came trembling,
Like floating islands of light;
Of a voice whose music breathed softly,
As the wind, thro' the flowers at night

I stood where the shadows were falling,
And that voice seemed to echo the strain,
Of songs long lost in the silence,
And my soul drank their sweetness again,
But caught in the tones of the music
Was a discord, memory gave,
For the lips have been sealed forever
And the voice is mute in the grave

I stood where the shadows were falling,
And the day died out of the sky,
And I mused upon time and its changes,
Till life seemed a stream rushing by,
Ever onward, with restless motion,
The waters dashed in their rage,
Bearing dead hopes on their bosom,
To the dim frozen shores of old age.

—C. in Winston Daily.

A Romance of the Sea.

Not long ago there came to New York one of the most extraordinary-looking vessels that has entered this port since the days when Hendrick Hudson first sailed up through the Narrows in his ship, the Half-Moon. Her name was the Tibernian, from London, and she belonged principally to Arthur, Lord Somerset, son of the Earl of Devon. When the Tibernian had hitched up to a dock in Brooklyn the sailors and stevedores from the neighboring vessels came around to look at her. One old salt looked at her lines along the water and declared that she was one of the fastest yachts ever built; another looked at her sides and stern, which presented long rows of square glass windows with white curtains on them, looking like the side of a house, and said she was a hospital ship or a floating photograph gallery; another examined her deck and saw her brass guns and other warlike implements, and swore that here at last was a regular old-fashioned pirate like the ship of Capt. Kidd, but the man who looked aloft at her half bark, half junk rig positively affirmed that she was built 200 years ago or earlier, and might be the Santa Maria of Columbus, or the Mayflower of the Pilgrim Fathers.

While her exterior reminded one of a picture in a book on the early development of naval architecture her interior presented the extraordinary contrast of a passenger steamer or yacht of the latest design. Her main cabin was elegantly fitted up with hard wood polished floor and partitions, costly cut-glass mirrors, cherry wood furniture, polished brass chronometers and compasses, swaing wine-glass holders, Turkish rugs, heavy Turkoman curtains and all the luxuries and ornaments to be found in a private drawing-room.

The 'tween decks were fitted up with a large number of staterooms, each one larger and better furnished than any to be found on the best Atlantic liner. She was of 1,000 tons burden, with a crew of twelve or fifteen men, and her captain, Jubal Kennerly, was a fierce looking Southerner, who had been a blockade runner during the war and engaged in other half-piratical enterprises. He also owned a share in the strange looking craft.

The career of the Tibernian was no less extraordinary than her appearance. Arthur, my Lord Somerset, a tall, blonde young man hardly 30 years of age, was languidly reclining in his London club one day about a year ago thinking of the ennui and dullness of life and the absence of excitement and adventure, when suddenly he conceived a brilliant idea. Remembering that he had an interest in a craft called the Tibernian, built many long years ago as a transport ship by the East India Company, he thought that if he loaded her up with wines, liquors and cigars, and gathering about him a congenial company of lively spirits he might sail out to go around the world and have a pleasant time for about a year. Straightway he consulted a friend who approved of the plan, and the future spread out before the two of them like the tail of a peacock on a June morning.

The noble lord then ordered the ship to be put in readiness, cabins built, &c., and set about getting his company together. He had a printer strike off a few notices for private circulation among his friends, in which a description of the vessel was given with her course around the world, and £140 stated as the price for the passage.—About twenty-five young bloods, who had exhausted all the enjoyments of London life and longed for something new, thought the scheme a good one and engaged passage on the Tibernian. Nearly an equal number of lively young women also engaged, and altogether the passenger list showed forty-five persons. Before the yesssel left a huge cargo of the good things of this life was put on board, some of which, it has since appeared, had not been paid for.

The Tibernian sailed forth on the briny deep, and after recovering from a short spell of seasickness the passengers had a hilarious and lively time of it and enjoyed themselves mightily. Portuguese ports were visited and additional supplies of eatables and drinkables taken on, and then the Tibernian crossed the Atlantic. She went to Demarara and other ports in South America, cruised leisurely among the West Indies, and wherever the ship went her passengers painted the town red. She went to New Orleans in time for the Exposition and remained there many weeks while the Englishmen and their friends enjoyed themselves on shore.

A mutiny then broke out among the female passengers, who began quarrelling among themselves, and many of them, with some of the men, were left on land, while the vessel sailed for New York. Before coming she took on a cargo to help pay expenses, which was discharged at Brooklyn, and the young men, getting tired of their fun, resolved to give up the rest of the trip. This decision was hastened by the arrival of a deputy sheriff and the seizure of the vessel for debt and the arrest of the noble Lord at the head of the expedition. He was quickly released, however, and immediately brought suit against a Brooklyn paper that said his cruise was gotten up for immoral purposes. The captain went to London, and nearly all the claims against the ship were settled.—The Tibernian then came to Pier 14, East River. Her cabins were taken out and a general cargo put in for Australia, whither she sailed a few days ago. The noble Lord disembarked and started West to test the shooting in the Yellowstone Valley, where, perhaps, he still remains. While here 790 boxes of unconsumed wines and 70 casks of liquor, worth altogether $5,000 or $6,000 were taken out and sent back to London.—N. Y. Graphic.

AN OPEN FRANK LETTER.—it is by no means strange that Dr. David Kennedy should have received the following letter. By reading it you will see in one minute why its writer could recommend it.—(ED.) Mr. J. W. Horner, Traveling Agent for Ambach, Burgander & Co., Baltimore Md., says: "His head felt bad, and he was suffering from indigestion. A trial of 'Favorite Remedy' made me feel like a new man. I cheerfully recommend it to all needing a medicine of the kind."

Little girl at breakfast table, "Mamma, this is very old butter; I have found a gray hair in it."

An Undoubted Blessing.

About thirty years ago a prominent physician by the name of Dr. William Hall discovered, or produced after long experimental research, a remedy for diseases of the throat, chest and lungs, which was of such wonderful efficacy that it soon gained a wide reputation in this country. The name of the medicine is DR. WM. HALL'S BALSAM FOR THE LUNGS, and may be safely relied on as a speedy and positive cure for coughs, colds, sore throat, etc.

MRS. WINSLOW'S SOOTHING SYRUP should always be used when children are cutting teeth. It relieves the little sufferer at once; it produces natural, quiet sleep by relieving the child from pain, and the little cherub awakes as "bright as a button." It is very pleasant to taste. It soothes the child, softens the gums, allays all pain, relieves wind, regulates the bowels, and is the best known remedy for diarrhœa, whether arising from teething or other causes. Twenty-five cents a bottle.

Harper's Young People.
AN ILLUSTRATED WEEKLY.

The serial and short stories in Harper's Young People have all the dramatic interest that juvenile fiction can possess, while they are wholly free from what is pernicious or vulgarly sensational. The humorous stories and pictures are full of innocent fun, and the papers on natural history and science, travel, and the facts of life, are by writers whose names give the best assurance of accuracy and value. Illustrated papers on athletic sports, games, and pastimes give full information on these subjects. There is nothing cheap about it but its price.

An epitome of everything that is attractive and desirable in juvenile literature.—Boston Courier.
A weekly feast of good things to the boys and girls in every family which it visits—Brooklyn Union.
It is wonderful in its wealth of picture information, and interest.—Christian Advocate, N. Y.

BRADSTREET'S
A WEEKLY JOURNAL OF TRADE, FINANCE AND PUBLIC ECONOMY.
Sixteen Pages every Saturday. Oftentime Twenty Pages. Sometimes Twenty-four Pages.
FIVE DOLLARS A YEAR.
The foremost purpose of BRADSTREET is to be of practical service to business men. Its special trade and industrial reports; its weekly epitome of bankruptcies throughout the United States and Canada, and the summaries of assets and liabilities, are alone worth the subscription price; its synopses of recent legal decisions are exceedingly valuable. As commercial transactions, in the wider sense, are coming to be more and more conducted on a statistical basis, the information contained in BRADSTREET'S is of the first importance both to producers and middlemen.
The Trade and Agricultural Situation throughout the United States and Canada is reported by Telegraph to BRADSTREET'S up to the hour of publication
