MORNING STAR.

Friday, September 3, 1869.

The STAR is delivered to Subscribers in all parts of the City at FIFTEEN CENTS per week. Payable only to Mr. JAS. H. FOYLES, or orders may be left either with him or at this Office.

Correspondents must not write on both sides of their paper.

We cannot undertake to return rejected communications.

Persons leaving the city during the Summer can have the STAR mailed regularly to their address by leaving orders at this office. Price, 75 cents for one month, or $2.00 for three months.

Obituary notices, tributes of respect, &c., are charged half advertising rates when paid for in advance of publication. In all other cases full advertising rates will be charged.

THE CIRCULATION OF THE MORNING STAR IS LARGER THAN THAT OF ANY OTHER DAILY NEWSPAPER PUBLISHED IN NORTH CAROLINA.

CITY CHARTER.

We hear there are to be some amendments to our city charter offered at the next meeting of the Legislature. We hope some member will move to abolish the gigantic swindle known as the "general ticket system" which destroys the time-honored right of the voters of each Ward to elect their own Aldermen. Every citizen of Wilmington knows that the general ticket abomination was conceived under the "cock-loft" system of Radical rule which has so long prevailed in this city; and that it was brought forth and tenderly nursed by those who were fearful that the iniquities of the present city government might result in an effort that would elect better men from at least two of the four wards of the city.

A similar object, no doubt, caused the change of Wards, it being the intention to add a portion of the overwhelming Radical majority of the First Ward to the more uncertain majority of the Third Ward.

There are, perhaps, other amendments that may be suggested before the assembling of the Legislature—amendments not designed to aid any political party, but to do justice to all.

MORE WAR.

Yesterday we published interesting war news from Scranton, in the peaceful and "truly loyal" State of Pennsylvania. Fifteen hundred coal miners on the one side, and eleven hundred special police and citizen volunteers on the other. "Coal mines heavily guarded;" and "much excitement."

This is another evidence that all the lawlessness is confined to the Southern States; that none but the "truly loyal" of the North are capable of self-government.

We have a suggestion to make to our brethren of New York and Pennsylvania. If they wish to suppress disorder, let them secure the services of a regiment or two of our "loyal militia," and if they don't quell every disturbance why, they'll exterminate the stock of pigs and poultry and make the Dutch farmers of the Cumberland valley swear to hold themselves personally responsible for any "civil commotion" that may hereafter occur.

Rather than have a second visit from our loyal militia the people of New York and Pennsylvania would organize their States into one "Grand Army of the Republic," and stand ready to demolish every body of rioters or other disturbers of the peace that had the temerity to stir up strife.

AN INVITATION TO OXFORD.

Benjamin Brown, a graduate of Harvard College, Mass., offers to give $5,000 towards defraying the expenses of the graduates of Oxford, England, if they will consent to row the Harvards in American waters, either on the Hudson or Charles river, during the present autumn.

SCARCITY OF SEAMEN.

For some reason or other the Navy Department finds considerable difficulty at present in procuring seamen for the government vessels. Some endeavor to account for the fact by stating that there is a general impression among seamen that a great deal of cruelty which never comes to light in the newspapers is practiced on our vessels on distant cruises and stations. The recent complaints of the sailors of the Pawnee and of the Nipsic, some of whom have brought suits in court against the commanders, it is represented give some countenance to this belief, and it is said to be the determination of the Secretary of the Navy, to institute rigid investigations into the subject, and to adopt such measures as will in future prevent the recurrences of this character, if they ever did occur.

PERSONALS.

For the gratification of public curiosity we append a few "Personals" from a recent issue of the New York Herald:

Black hat, with white feather; collar unpinned; Monday evening. Personal—Gentleman bowed after leaving the car. I beg you to address W. S., post-office, No. 2.

Very suggestive. But here is one that beats it "all hollow":

William street, Tuesday.—Will the owner of those beautiful dark eyes permit Nat Wilne C. to see them once more? H. J. H., Brooklyn post-office.

Now we'll see what Mr. Hendricson wants:

South Ferry Stave, 16½ Saturday forenoon.—Will lady wearing purple gaiters, who got on near Eighth street and off at Astor House, give her address to dark complexioned gentleman who sat on her left, naming peculiar emblem worn on neck ribbon?

S. J. HENDRICSON,
Union Square P. O.

And here is a brother who has loved Y-sely if not well:

X.—I have important news for you, and wish I could see you. Never waver or doubt my love. I live in hope, and love you dearly; am true, and we will be happy. Let me hear from you.

New York is evidently a gay place.

Palmetto Leaves.

A white lady was severely beaten in Charleston a few nights ago by a colored servant simply for giving an order which she did not like.

A number of hands have been discharged from the S. C. Railroad shops in order to reduce the force.

According to a census just taken of Charleston, it has been ascertained that the population of the city is 44,958.

The Marion Crescent says: During the last few weeks the cotton in this section has been badly injured by rust. We never saw it so extensive and destructive as now.

The number of bales of cotton shipped from Columbia over the South Carolina Railroad, from September 1, 1868, to September 1, 1869, amounted to 62,528.

From the 25th of August, 1868 to the 25th of November 1869, 317 persons were committed to the Charleston jail of whom about three-fourths were colored.

Gen. E. P. Alexander has resigned the chair of Mathematics and Engineering in the University.

A meeting is to be held at Camden, on the 6th of September, to mature plans by which the construction of a Railroad to Lancaster, to connect with the South Carolina Railroad at Camden, shall be secured.

IMPORTANT DISCOVERY.

A New Method of Preserving the Human Body—A Rival of Prof. Gamgee.

A correspondent of the London Athenæum, writing from Naples gives some information respecting the means employed by Prof. Abbate of that city for preserving the Human body. He says:

"Some secret known to Dr. Abbate's has existed for a long time, as all travellers who have visited Florence probably well know. In the Cabinet of Physiological Anatomy in Santa Maria Novella, there are preparation of portions of the human body by Dr. Segato. The Grand Government refused to purchase the secret, which died with Segato. His preparations, I repeat, were only portions of the body, whereas that which is now being exhibited in Naples, in the ex-convent of Santa Maria della Nuova, is the entire body of a youth of seventeen years of age, who died of phthisis about the end of last January. For five months, therefore, it has resisted the action of a very variable atmosphere. The features, the integrity of the form, are perfectly preserved as they were at the moment of death. The nails have a roseate hue; there is no odor of any kind; and the flesh has the hardness almost of marble. To this add, that the hair adheres so tenaciously to the head that it is impossible to remove it, of course without violence. The operation of embalming or petrifying is effected in a few hours, without the necessity of removing the dress; indeed, another body was petrified, according to the same system, without taking off dress, and even preserving the gloves on. 'We know,' says a medical gentleman, not an Italian to whom I am indebted for these details, 'that some gentlemen in Naples, after having proved what we have stated, have made an alteration in their wills, imposing it as an obligation on their heirs that they shall supply the system of Abbate to their bodies, in the event of their dying before the professor.'

This discovery has, however, a more practical and more important phase—that is, in preserving meat fresh. Abbate asserts he has succeeded in so doing. There are difficulties in this special application of it which would not present themselves in the petrification of human bodies, such as the danger of introducing substances injurious to health, or affecting the taste, the appearance or the nutritious qualities of the meat. All these difficulties Abbate declares he has overcome; and it is a known fact that a first-rate house in Italy, whose commercial relations with the Americans are considerable, has already made offers to Abbate on the subject. Should it be proved by experience to be true that the wholesome food of man—which is now thrown away in vast districts as utterly unavailable, or is only melted down for the sake of the fat—can be shipped in perfect condition and exported to Europe fresh and good, an inestimable boon will have been conferred on humanity. This our Professor asserts he can do; and as he already has done so with such a system during the strictly examination of all sensitive man. During his life Abbate has no intention of making known the secret of his discovery, but he is prepared to visit any part of the world which he may be requested to visit, and show the results of his invention.

CRIME.

Murder of a Countess—Terrible Crime in a Railway Carriage.

Every one seems to be horrified by the details of a murder which was committed last Thursday night in a first-class carriage of the night train from Rome to Florence. The victim was the Countess Anna Maria Hromada Cattaneo, a Novara family of long name, but you must take it as it is. Separated from her husband, to which it is necessary to allude, she came from Voghera in the north of Italy, to Naples about a fortnight since, and took lodgings in San Paolo, a street near the Chiaia. The habit of receiving every evening several officers of a cavalry regiment, among whom was a Lieutenant Negri. One evening last week the cries of the Countess, in a half-suffocated tone, were heard beseeching for help, on which the landlord and his servants went out of the house, and met Negri running down. He then went to the Countess, who confessed that she had come to San Paolo in order to see Negri, who had some letters or papers of hers which he refused to give up; that after leaving the house she had followed him, and he had then attempted to murder her. The landlord and his servants under some excuse, and closed the doors, when he endeavored to force her to write a letter to her friend stating she had committed suicide. What could have been the motive for this can only be imagined. On her hesitating to do this he snatched a dagger from her hand, which she carried for self-defence, and was in the act of striking her, when she fled to another room, followed by her maddened lover. The dagger was again uplifted, when the pistol-shot fired by the landlord seemed to paralyze him, and he made his escape. In Cantieri's apartment she remained all the night, and Negri returned to ask her pardon, insisting also on remaining in another room. On the next day (Wednesday) several of the officers of the regiment, hearing of the affair, came to the house to protect the Countess, who determined to return to Voghera the next day—Thursday last. Two officers and the landlord (Cantieri) accompanied her as far as Caserta, where they left her, the Countess refusing their society any further, adding that she no longer had any fear. On the train arriving at Isoletta the station on the Roman frontier, the body of the unfortunate woman was found extended on the floor of the carriage, a revolver at her feet, a pistol-shot in her head, and her hands covered with blood, and cut as if by glass. More than this is not known at present. Some assert they saw Negri get into a third-class carriage, dressed as a civilian, in the same train by which the Countess left, and that his cap was found near her. If so, he is suspected of having walked along the footboard to her carriage, and of having shot her through the window. Of him nothing has yet been heard. This horrible tragedy, which I report almost in the same words that it is described in all the journals of Naples, has created here an immense sensation; in all its details it is most revolting, and might furnish another Mrs. Radcliffe with material for a sensational romance. A highly-respectable journal, in defending Negri against the imputation of theft, also says there can be no ground for the suspicion in the simple fact of his having loved a woman so desperately as to murder her. "He was not a mauvais sujet. He was well-born, rich, honest, and only vain." In another passage he is described as "unfortunate." Thus it is that crime is condoned, and that a sympathy with it generates that prevalent sentimental feeling against capital punishment. Wonderful to relate, however, Neapolitan juries have within the last two months brought in verdicts in three cases without "attenuanti circstanze." Justice still hesitates; there are the Court of Appeal and the royal mercy to be invoked. The probabilities are that the sentences of three heinous murderers will be commuted.

ANOTHER ACCOUNT.

The Italian journals state that the lady who was lately found murdered in a carriage on one of the Neapolitan railways was the Countess Cattaneo, and that the perpetrator of the crime was Lieutenant Negri, of the Victor Emmanuel Lancers. Intimate relations had formerly existed between them, but had been broken off on account of the officer's jealousy and violence. The lady was returning to her friends, and Negri seems to have watched her departure and taken a seat in the same train, and, during the journey, to have made his way by holding by the carriages outside to the compartment in which the Countess was seated alone and far from all assistance. He smashed the glass window with the butt end of a pistol, and, opening the door, fired two shots at her, killing his victim instantaneously—one bullet traversing the chest, and the other penetrating the head through the eye. He then either jumped or fell from the carriage; but nothing is known of his movements until the next evening, when he appeared at a hotel of Marra Capua Vetere. About midnight, after writing some letters, he committed suicide by throwing himself from his chamber window into the street. He had given a false name, but several officers of the regiment have since recognized the corpse as that of their comrade.

WASHINGTON.

Special Dispatch to the Baltimore Sun.

Judge Dent and the Mississippi Nomination—Tennessee Politics—The Fifteenth Amendment—Extra Session of the Tennessee Legislature—The Burlingame Treaties—Coal Contract, &c.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 31.

Judge Dent leaves this city to-morrow for Mississippi for the purpose of consulting with his friends in that State before the nominating convention is held. He still feels confident that he will receive the conservative nomination for Governor, but it is known here that some of his former supporters seriously entertain the idea of abandoning the conservative scheme and nominating an out-and-out democratic ticket.

The Hon. Wm. B. Stokes, of Tennessee, had an interview with President Grant to-day, during which he explained to the latter many details of the late campaign in that State which resulted in the defeat for Governor, and took occasion to deny the statement that he intends to call the Legislature together for the purpose of assuming control of the State government. He also denied the statement that he intends to bring the subject of the election before Congress, and declared that as his State is fully reconstructed Congress has no more cognizance of its affairs than it has over the affairs of Wisconsin or Massachusetts. He further explained that the object of his visit here is to obtain a proper reward for the exertions of his friends in behalf of the republican cause by securing for them appointment to offices now held by Senter men. It has transpired that President Grant, carrying out the endorsement of the fifteenth amendment made in his inaugural, and demanding of the Senter men in Tennessee a fulfillment of their promise to ratify it was among the first things in an extra session of the old Legislature of that State for that purpose. Private advices from Nashville have been received here remarking on this subject, which contain the information that the new Constitution virtually destroys the power of the old Legislature to act in the premises, by a proviso which entitles the Legislature elect to assume the duties of office immediately after election. The result of a proclamation issued by Governor Senter, under the constitution, be the assembling of the new Legislature and the rejection of the amendment. The State may therefore be counted as against it.

The government has received a telegram from the Hon. Anson Burlingame, expressing the opinion that the Chinese mission, what was very well known to Mr. Seward, that the Chinese government did not expect to ratify or finally act upon any of the treaties negotiated by him and his conferers until his return from his great diplomatic tour. During his sojourn in the United States he made arrangements with prominent American inventors and railroad men to visit China on the occasion of his return, and explained to them that until the treaties are ratified it will be useless for them to attempt to commence business operations there.

The contract for coal for the House of Representatives was awarded to Andrew Sterling, of Philadelphia, to-day, at the rate of $7 88 per ton for 360 tons.

Negro Lynched in Tennessee.

Passengers who arrived on the train of the Nashville and Northwestern Railroad yesterday, inform us that on Tuesday evening last a negro boy was seen suspending from a tree on a line of the railroad near Dresden, Tennessee. Under the place where he was hanging sat his mother weeping. Attached to the pantaloons of the swinging boy was a card, on which was written in a legible hand words cautioning the passer by from cutting him down, and intimating in strong terms that the man who interferes will suffer the same fate. Our informants state that it was understood in the neighborhood that the victim had committed rape on the daughter of a widow lady living near that place, and that he was hanged for this crime. As to the time of the hanging, and the parties engaged in it, nobody in that neighborhood seemed to know anything about it.—Nashville Union Aug. 26.

HAIR RESTORATIVE!

PHILADELPHIA, October 15, 1868.

MESSRS. WM. F. BARTLETT, Jun & CO.:—The "Hair Restorative" which you call public attention, has all the virtues you claim for it. Last year the top of my head became quite bald, and by using your Restorative, for about two months, I GROWN of my hair was restored. To promote the effect of the Restorative, it will be well to shave in some cases, you cannot brush the head too much, or the hair too little.

SCHOOL FOR YOUNG LADIES.

Misses KENNEDY & HAR
PRINCIPALS,
Assisted by Able and Experienced Teachers.

THE NEXT SESSION WILL COMMENCE on Wednesday, October 6th.

The design of this Institution is to afford the highest advantages for the instruction of young ladies. The course of study is full and systematic, embracing everything necessary for a thorough and elegant education.

The BELLES LETTRES class for the study of Classical Literature will be under the supervision of Col. WM. MUMFORD. The study of CHEMISTRY will be rendered effective, as well as interesting, by the acquisition of a well-selected apparatus.

The MODERN LANGUAGES will be thoroughly taught. Special attention will be paid to FRENCH, and every facility afforded for acquiring a practical knowledge of that language.

LATIN will be taught without extra charge.

In the MUSICAL DEPARTMENT, the Principals have secured the services of Prof. W. F. GRABAN, whose long ance s in his profession has won for him an enviable reputation.

DRAWING will be taught by a competent Professor.

Pupils not desiring to pursue the full course May take up any special branch at reasonable rates.

A limited number of young ladies will be received as Boarders by making early application.
