COW LOST.

MY COW is on East side of Cape Fear, somewhere opposite to Campbellton, being driven into the river by boys and can't find her way back. She is marked with crop in each ear, has a bell on, white in her face, white on back and belly, red on neck and sides. Whoever will take her up and let me know it, or bring her up home in Campbellton, will be liberally rewarded.

The said cow was bought in the upper part of Bladen county and may probably find her way back to that county.

To Cotton Planters.

I HAVE been appointed by the Secretary of the Treasury, Chief Agent for the purchase of Cotton for the Confederate Government within the State of North Carolina, and will pay for the same in 7 per cent. Bonds or Cash.

Sub-Agents visiting the different parts of the State, buying in my name, will have written certificates of appointment.

By order of the Secretary of the Treasury, all Cotton purchased by myself or my agents, on and after the 13th day of March 1863, will be paid for in 7 per cent. Bonds or Cash, and not 8 per cent. Bonds as stated in a former advertisement. Up to that time, however, the 8 per cent. bonds will be furnished as stated.

Patriotic citizens are now offered an opportunity to aid the Government by selling to it their Cotton rather than to private capitalists.

Soldiers' Claims.

AT the request and for the convenience of those interested, the undersigned has agreed to collect all the claims of deceased and discharged soldiers, and of soldiers on furlough, that may be placed in his hands.

Having had an experience of near 20 years in prosecuting claims against the United States Government, as well as against the Confederate States, he is perfectly familiar with every variety of claims, and can make an early collection as the large number now on file will admit.

A moderate fee will be charged to cover cost, postage, stationery, &c.

Apply in person or address by letter.

DEPOSITORY C. S. A.,
FAYETTEVILLE, Oct. 28, 1863.

COTTON INTEREST BONDS may be had on application at this Office. The premium fixed for these Bonds is 50 per cent.—requiring $1500 to buy a Bond of $1000. These Bonds are payable in coin at the end of 20 years, and the interest is payable yearly, 1st June, in cotton,—say 500 lbs annually. This at 18 cts. per lb. will pay 6 per cent. on the investment, and at present price of cotton, would yield over 25 per cent.

All Treasury Notes issued within the year 1863, may be funded in 6 per cent. Bonds, bearing interest from day of deposite.

Holders of Certificates, dated before 1st Sept. last, are requested to return them, with their names written on the back, and receive their bonds.

THE TORY WOMEN OF EAST TENNESSEE.

One of the Editors of the Hendersonville N. Carolina Times, who is in East Tennessee with his regiment, writes to that paper:

To give an idea of the social status of the ladies of this section, as well as the estimate they place upon the protection afforded by our troops, I will trouble the reader with an incident that occurred yesterday:

Being at leisure, Lt. Col. B., Maj. S., and I, went out chestnut hunting. After canvassing the immediate neighborhood of our camps for some time, and having become tired, we entered a grass plat near a large chestnut tree inside a field. Discovering no chestnuts on the tree, we lay down on the grass, thinking to rest a few minutes and proceed on our journey. We had not observed that we were within twenty paces of a house, within whose walls resided living people—I mean, though we had observed the house, we had not recognized the fact that it was inhabited. But we were not long in being made cognizant of that fact, for we had scarcely taken our seats than we were greeted by a sharp female voice, with the expression:

"Oh! I'll be with you, you cowardly, sneaking rebel sheep stealers."

We felt a little confused for a moment, when turning in the direction from whence the voice came we observed a huge female advancing with masculine step, and plainly indicated something of an extraordinary character, though we were unable at first to know what it was. We kept quiet, though I must confess I felt an inclination to "fall back," for I have a natural and uncontrollable horror of being in the presence of an enraged virago. But we had delayed retreating till it was too late to do so, and the lady opened on us with a vim that showed that she was not lacking in earnestness.

"What are you doing here—plundering my property, you rebel thieves?"

We were astounded and shocked at the suddenness and vehemency of the attack. But at length Maj. S. took courage to reply:

"Madam, we are not troubling anything."

"The h'll you aint!—right here in my yard, ready to steal my chickens—every thing I've got," retorted the woman.

By this time she had arrived within a threatening distance of us. I noticed that she was mad with rage, while fire seemed to flash from her eyes.

"We were only looking at that chestnut tree, to see if there were any chestnuts on it," replied the Colonel.

"And you was going to steal my chestnuts, was you?—get out o'here, or I'll thrash the yeth with your carcases!"

At this juncture I suggested that we should withdraw from the premises, but the other gentlemen thought proper to ascertain the lady's political notions before doing so.

"Oh don't be alarmed, madam, we do not mean to trouble any of your property," said the Major, good naturedly.

"Alarmed!—do you suppose I'd be alarmed at such trifling skulks as you 'uns are, you rebel chicken stealers," quickly retorted the old woman.

"Speaking of chickens—couldn't you sell us a few chickens—we will pay you any price you may name," said the Major.

"Do you suppose I'd sell a d—d rebel a chicken—I'd see you in h'll first. You've stole all my chickens."

The Major endeavored to convince the old woman that we did not steal chickens, sheep, and so on—that we meant no harm by being on her premises. But she persisted in her declaration that we were the vilest of the vile. She announced herself a zealous advocate of "Linkum," and the Union.

Her attitude being still more threatening, and manifesting a decided disposition to assume the offensive, we suddenly became impressed with the importance of retreating.

A day or two previous to the occurrence above related, I went into the country some three or four miles, to visit a sick soldier who had been left at a private house. On the way I observed a small chestnut tree, quite full of chestnuts. I concluded it would "pay" to fell it, and sent private H., who was with me, to a house that was a little distance off, to borrow an axe. He rode off, but soon returned with the statement: "The gal won't let me have it." "Well," said I, "let's both go down, and I think we can persuade her to let us have it." We soon arrived opposite the house and alighted—went to the door and knocked. We repeated it two or three times before we were heeded. At length in came a sprightly looking lass.

"What business have you got here, sir?"

I took off my hat (still standing on the steps) and bowing as politely as I could, said: "Only to borrow an axe an hour, to fell a small chestnut tree."

"Give him the axe over his head—he's a chicken stealing rebel," cried a female voice in an adjoining room.

I felt abashed, and was considering what I should say next, when H., thinking I was getting in a "close place," came to my assistance, and stepping past me into the house, remarked to the young lady:

"You're mistaken; the Dr. don't steal chick—

"Pop him over the head with the poke stick, Liz; you know that's the way Jimmie told you to treat the rebels when they come about," cried the female voice in the adjoining room. Just at this moment I observed Liz spring to the chimney-place and gather up what H. called a whopping big poker stick, and raising it in a striking position, I suddenly concluded I did not want any chestnuts, and skedaddled, double quick—jumped over the fence and into my saddle, and quickly found my spurs touching my horse's sides, while he gently bore me away from the scene of action. Just as I sprang from the door, I heard a loud report, which H. says was the result of the poker stick, hitting the shutter, when thrown by Liz. at his person!

These Lincolnite women, down on the river, are fighting stock; and I must say I would rather do without chestnuts a great while than to come in contact with one of them again.
