THE OLD ARM CHAIR.

It stands in the corner by the hearth stone, a quaint old-fashioned arm chair. I remember it from a little child—it always stood where it does now, sacred from rude intrusion—never turned into a conceit by the noisy denizens of the nursery; never profaned by rough touch or fumble—because it was grandma's chair.

How scenes long past come back to me to-night! I remember how I sat at her feet, looking up at the dear face, scarcely a wrinkle upon it, though life's storms had not spared her.

I listened, never weary, to her stories of the old times, the time when she was young—of childhood, her maidenhood and motherhood. I heard her tell with quivering lips of the fair young mother whom I could not remember, whose grave was in the sea. "She was my first-born, my darling and my pride," she would say, "and so she was the first of all my flowers that faded—my blossoms that are scattered for o'er land and wave."

She is pictured to me there, as she bent to bless a kneeling bride, and again when in a sadder hour she kissed the cold white brow of a baby gone to sleep, a sleep that was sealed by the Death King's kiss, and I wondered that while our young heart's cured breaking to part with the house hold pet, grandma's eyes seemed beaming with a happy light, though her voice quivered as she said to the young mother "The little lamb is safe my child—with one who loves it far better than we can do."

I know now, that grandma's yearning heart was where her treasures had one after one her been laid up. She looked back over the swelling waves, that had tossed her life-bark for more than threescore years and ten, and her glance was troubled. She looked upward where shone the Star of Hope, and thought of the bride space between her trembling steps and the port where her nestlings were anchored safe—then hope and faith brightened. She had borne patiently life's weary cross—she was nearing her starry crown.

A year ago the chair was in its place and loving hands guided her tenderly thither. She smiled and spoke of the time when we used to gather about her in our childhood, and said she little thought to see so many generations coming and going in the old home.

It was a peaceful Sabbath evening—she looked out dreamily on the sunset clouds. What did she see beyond their brightness?

The old arm chair is vacant now. Painfully vacant its outstretched arms. Yet quiet the nursery, in which the shadows gather. The dear old nursery, where soft strangers' voices shall be heard, strangers' steps come and go, and home be home to us no longer.

The aged pilgrim who had journeyed for eighty-five years, sometimes in light, but oftenest in shadow, has entered her rest. Her feet shall never more be weary, her eyes shall know no weeping, her patient hands no toil. They have been laid trustingly in the hands that were pierced, and she has been tenderly guided through the dark valley, through the gates of the Beautiful City, to one of her Father's mansions where her beloved dwell.

Sacred shall be held the old arm chair which brings to mind her love and tenderness, her patient waiting, her dying blessings, and her prayers.

WHAT DOMESTIC ECONOMY MEANS.

It means the careful saving of every item of any value, no matter how small, and the putting of every item to some good use; or it means the careful husbanding of those little odds and ends that occur in every family, but which many families throw away, and the application of those little items to service in the economy of the household. It has reference to every article, of whatever kind, that passes through the hands of the family. It means that the farmer knows just how much to feed his stock, also where and how to feed it that nothing be lost. That he knows how to save feed by providing comfortable shelters for his stock; or how to save his buildings by keeping them in good repairs. And that he knows how to save money by turning everything around him that has any of the elements of plant food into manures.

It means that the housewife knows just how many dips to make in the meal tub, or how many slices to cut from the ham, to make them hold out the longest time. That she knows just how to cut the family clothing so as to have the little pieces come in for me. And it means that she knows what kinds of food, and in what quantities, go the farthest in producing physical health and strength.

Domestic economy means that all old iron, old tin-ware, nails, shoes, worn-out tools, bits of wire, broken glass, empty bottles and vials, cast off garments, bits of cloth, and thread, scrap paper, etc., are put away in appropriate places, each by itself, for any service that occasion may require. It means that ashes, sweepings of the yard, old mortar, pounded brickbats, bones, hair, feathers, urine from the chamber, the accumulation of privies, weeds, soap suds, even the washings of the hands and face, dead animals, old salt, and everything of like character are composted under shelter to be applied to future crops.

It means that the excrements of every animal upon the farm are protected under cover until wanted for use in the fields; that carts and wagons are frequently oiled; that farm tools are painted annually, and kept under cover when not in use. It means that insectivorous birds are encouraged upon the premises; but that dogs and cats are rigidly banished. It means that the best breeds of stock, and the best implements of husbandry are used. It means that the health of the family, and of the stock, are looked after by providing plenty of good water, and a free circulation of pure air in the dwellings of both man and beast. It means that tobacco and ardent spirits are rigidly prohibited; and that no coppers or dimes are wasted for candies, fosdicks, or gew-gaws.

It means that every article of food and raiment, tools and fixtures, that can be made at home are made there. It means that nothing is sold off the farm that can be made into manure through the living laboratory of animals. It means all these things, and much more besides; and is constantly reminding us that "Wilful waste makes woeful want." And that "Every edge should cut that can cut, and those that can't cut, hence."

Domestic economy is a science—the science of saving. It is comprehended in our brief sentence, uttered by the wisest Being that ever walked on earth: "Gather up the fragments that remain, that nothing be lost."

GRAND LODGE OF N. C.
OFFICE OF GRAND SECRETARY,
RALEIGH, Dec. 20th, 1870.

To the Masonic Fraternity in North Carolina:

THE Grand Lodge of Masons of North Carolina having determined to celebrate the centennial anniversary of the date of its Charter, on the 14th day of January next, all Master Masons in regular standing are fraternally invited to take part in the ceremonies on that occasion.

Masons at a distance who may visit this city with the view of participating in those ceremonies can travel over the several Railroads in the State for one fare, by procuring return tickets.

The following resolution was adopted at the late Annual Communication of the Grand Lodge:

RESOLVED, "That all the Subordinate Lodges in the State be requested to celebrate the one hundredth anniversary of this Grand Lodge on the 14th day of January next."

Notwithstanding the action of the Grand Lodge as set forth in the foregoing resolution, it is desired that the Lodges generally throughout the jurisdiction be represented in this city on the day designated, in order to secure a demonstration creditable to the Grand Lodge and commensurate with the occasion.

The programme will be published in due time by the committee of arrangements.

WE see a great deal in the papers about the coming exhibition of Col. Simon Hayes' New Circus, &c. When it does come, it will no doubt be a grand affair, for the Colonel is some in his role and says, and does a great many funny things. Besides all this the Colonel is the best looking man in town, which is accountable for from the fact that he is a patron of

Now let me say a word or two about my own exhibition. I have on exhibition the finest stock of Cigars in the State, and at the lowest prices.

I have on exhibition the largest and best assorted stock of Smoking Tobacco in the State.

I have on exhibition the finest stock of Chewing Tobacco in the City.

Also, Pipes of all kinds. I am daily expecting the celebrated Sally Mitchell and Burnet Pipes. Everybody know these goods, therefore, it is needless for me to puff them here.
