Snake Trick in a Church.

Albert Miller, a colored coachman for D. L. Pulliam, of Richmond, Va., was recently bitten in the face by a rattlesnake. Sidney Frank Nelson, a negro, gave a concert at Zion church, in Chesterfield. Miller announced that he was a snake charmer and desired permission to display his power over the reptile he had in the box, which was a dry land moccasin, three feet long. He went on the stage and handled his pet for some time. The last feat was to put the head of the snake in his mouth and bite down on its neck. The snake turned and struck its fangs in the cheek of Miller. The man whirled and cried. The snake fell to the floor about twenty feet from the body of the church. When the audience saw the reptile flying through space there was a stampede, and the colored population made for the doors and windows. The snake fell in the aisle and was killed. TUMOR EXPELLED.

Unqualified Success of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Mrs. Elizabeth Wentnock, Waterloo, Iowa, in the following letter describes her remarkable recovery from critical condition:

"Dear Mrs. Pinkham: I feel it a duty I owe to myself to write you a few lines to let you know what your Vegetable Compound has done for me. I was troubled with a tumor, my sides were very large, I had a bearing-down pain, was very nervous, had no appetite, could not sleep, had no ambition to do my work, and was so weak I could not walk across the room without resting. I had tried many other medicines and doctors without any good result, and I thought I could not live. My husband brought your Compound home, and I decided to give it a fair trial. I have taken six bottles of the Compound, and the tumor has disappeared, I can sleep well, have a good appetite, do my work, and am a well woman. I owe my life to your Compound, and I shall always recommend it to my friends as the best medicine for female complaints."

"My health has been poor for three years. A change of life was working upon me. I was very much bloated and was a burden to myself. Was troubled with smothering spells, also palpitation of the heart and that bearing-down feeling, and could not be on my feet long. I was growing worse all the time, until I took your medicine.

"After taking three bottles of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Lozenges, the tumor passed from me.

"My health has been better ever since, can now walk quite a distance and am troubled no more with palpitation of the heart or bearing-down pains. I recommend your medicine to my sufferers from female troubles."

It is hardly reasonable to suppose that anyone can doubt the character of Mrs. Pinkham's testimonials, and yet she is in the face of the tremendous volume of testimony.

The Soil Over Underdrains.

Always in digging an underdrain the lowest subsoil often cold, hard and without vegetable mould, is more or less mixed with that dug near the surface, and which is usually richer. In filling the ditch this mixture continues, so that the soil that was dug from the bottom of the ditch may often be in the last spadefuls thrown in. Yet we never knew this to make any difference. Always crops of any kind show a better growth directly over the drain than they do on either side, even during the first season's growth. After a year or two the good effect of the drain extends to land on either side, as the soil freezes deeper where surplus water is removed from it, and the roots of plants can go deeper for nourishment or plant food.

The accompanying illustration shows a very handy drop door for the basement barns. It is hinged to the barn sill at the top. Another pair of hinges are fitted to the door. By turning the button "a" parallel to the boards of the door, the lower part of the door can be turned by an arm of the door, which runs over the pulley "b." If it is desirable to open all the door, turn the button "a" into the position shown in the cut. Then by pulling on the cord "b," the whole door is opened.—American Agriculturist.

The Pasturing of Meadows.

The second crop which may in most cows is certainly a gain, and few farmers can do this for the reputation of their farms, unless the meadows are seen as the same day as the pastures are used. This practice is almost universal, yet there is abundant evidence that it is wrong, for sheep should have time when the meadows need better care in order to secure the best results from the second crop than during the period after the hay is secured. Fall pasturing of meadows leaves the ground so bare that in cold climates at least, such clay soils lose to the grass roots. This is especially true with meadows only a few years old. There is a feeling on the part of many farmers that unless the second growth is removed by pasturing or mowing it will smother the grass roots, but this is hardly probable unless the growth is much heavier than is usually the case. Spring and summer pasturing of fall grass will give the necessary food for stock after the pasture has been eaten close, and the second growth in the meadows should be allowed to remain to serve the double purpose of adding to the fertility of the land and winter protection of grass roots.—Atlantic Farmer.

Keeping Hay.

Hay decreases in weight, through drying, up to the time it is fed, so that, in calculating the profits, one must consider this very carefully. The price of hay will naturally increase as the winter comes on, for will the price advance in proportion to the shrinkage? The shrinkage in hay of course depends upon the amount of moisture left in it at the time of putting it away. Hay will lose double green and weight before it is fed in a very highly cured. There is a difference of five to fifteen per cent in the weight of hay put away by some farmers. If the cow shrinks a pound extra per day after harvesting, she will pay a sum per ton for green hay as for thoroughly cured hay, be hay make good profits, but to be sure it may not prove sticky and frost-bitten. The hay will now look likely do very well and then in the mow, and overheat and sour. The result is the purchaser and consumer discover hay was poor at the beginning, and so all get hay now to be in the farmer.

As near cutting crop it pays to be careful and cut when the hay is cured but even early in the fall. The farmer seldom at all no doubt in his best mow will not think of putting away more hay. He knows too well the consequences. He will see that the spontaneous is pretty well dried out of it before he stows it in the mow.

But the hay will shrink even then. There is no place in it that will come out easily. It takes months for it all to dry out. The amount of shrinkage will depend upon the condition in the way when put in the barn. A farmer formerly put away hay has the shrinkage and loss in weight will amount fully to fifteen per cent. But the average shrinkage will be about ten per cent, upon the middle of winter. After that the shrinkage is almost imperceptible.

Late cut hay will then have lost more in which to lose its weight by shrinkage, and if the grass and weather are both favorable for very late harvesting it may pay to cut the grass out of the ordinary season. This hay might be cured well and lose much more than five per cent of its weight in early winter. Just before the midsummer holidays prices for hay are generally good, and if sold then the farmer may make five per cent of the whole weight by a little strategy. In seasons when hay is scarce it does not always follow that the autumn prices are as correspondingly high as conditions should warrant. Then it pays to keep hay, even if it does shrink fifteen per cent.—A. B. Barrett, in American Cultivator.

A House For Laying Hens.

In order to make hens produce eggs when most desired, they must not only have extra care, but be provided with proper quarters. At the same time, however, it is hardly advisable for all poulterers to erect elaborate structures for this purpose, and especially when we take into consideration the desperate competition of the present day and the oftentime low prices of eggs. Accordingly, we advise the idea that ordinary persons who make a practice of keeping from fifty to one hundred fowls should indulge in a poultry house something like the one shown beneath in the illustration.

As can be seen, if situated by a bank, it affords a very suitable habitation for laying hens. Finished, in early spring and fall, when the cold days and nights retard the maturation of all hens and pullets to lay as steadily and early as they will with warm, nice quarters in which to reside, it is just the thing. Really, it is so roomy, convenient and well ventilated that fowls cannot help but do satisfactorily in it. For one hundred hens it should be not less than fifty feet long, twenty-five feet wide, twelve feet at the highest point and eight feet where the windows are shown.

The pens should be ten by eighteen or twelve feet square, with nests for layers extending the entire length of the building under its lowest part, it being here dark and obscure just the place in which to deposit eggs which, with its isolate nests, can easily be collected by the poulterer straight and not one long broken.

As to the floor of such a building, it should be raised three or four inches from the ground to shed out dampness, and dry earth and coarse sand spread over it regularly, after the all has been swept out, for this gives the hens exercise in digging for food, which is highly essential to their health. We a matter of course, should be provided to divide the pens, and in the upright part of the building should be arranged the ventilators, which at their best could not be left open during the middle of the day, when the hens are down on the floor or out of the house, and closed at night, or partially so, to keep out the cold.

Constructing the above look at plan, take course available for cooking food nearly cold water boiler, before feeding the same to the fowls in the morning, and a lot of Cockspurs the building free from dampness in this, kindly important to a large number of hens are kept. Place the stove on level in a small apartment by itself and then when you want to warm the pen of the hens open the door for the heat pass on. Thus you keep the stove heat and clean, and in the apartment no smoke proof, as it ought to be, a supply of grain and meal may be stored therein for the fowls, which economizes much in time and labor.

The windows, which in their stop for poultry should face directly to the south, afford the inmates a large amount of light and sunshine—all that are favorable—and no matter how severe the weather may be, these provided for are always comfortable and happy, compensating their owner in return with an agreeable amount of eggs. When a hard snow storm is in progress, however, it is perhaps better the windows with strips matting or the like, for then when it clears up the mats may be removed and with them all the snow, leaving the glass perfectly clean and the hens to enjoy a regular paradise.—New York Tribune.

Chicken Chatter.

Fresh air and fresh water should not be forgotten. Both are essential to the health of the fowls.

Have a dusting box for the hens to bathe in. Provide yourself with abundance of road dust while you can. It is cheap now, and in a little while you will need it.

Feed regularly. Have certain hours for feeding and don't vary them. Be punctual about your work, and the fowls will be more contented and will soon understand your systematic way of doing things.

See that your henhouses are good—no cracks in the sides and avoid damp floors. A window should be in each pen, so that the light and sunshine may make cheerful the interior. Sunshine is a good disinfector for fowls.

The scratching shed should be thoroughly cleaned and fresh material supplied. Feed all grain food in the litter, and be careful to keep the doors well covered, so that the birds will really have to work for every grain they eat. This exercise means an increase of eggs.

A good poultry house for laying hens is green cut bone. It is relished by the fowls, and supplies the animal food they are so much in need of during cold weather. Green cut bones should be fed two or three times a week from October until May. It should always be fed plain; that is, without mixing it in the ration.

ANDERSON AT ANDOVER.

An Able Attempt at Alliteration Anyhow.

Augustus Anderson's Aunt Abbie anxiously awaited Augustus's arrival at Andover. Aunt Abbie annually asked Augustus, and Augustus always accepted, and autumn after autumn arrived at Andover, as arranged. Augustus arrived and anxiously asked Aunt Abbie about apples. Aunt Abbie answered, "Aye, Augustus, apples are abundant." Augustus ate an apple, and Aunt Abbie asked Augustus' assistance about arranging asters. Augustus assisted Aunt Abbie about anything asked, and Aunt Abbie always appreciated Augustus' amiable acts. Aunt Abbie's asters artistically arranged, Augustus asked Aunt Abbie about afternoon amusements. Aunt Abbie allowed Augustus any agreeable amusements appropriate and attainable. Augustus ardently admired Andrew Arnold, architect, and also Andrew's adjacent antiquated abode. Augustus' absorbed attention amused Andrew. Augustus accompanied Andrew around Andover, asking about architecture, and Andrew accommodatingly answered all Augustus asked. As afternoon advanced, Augustus again arrived at Aunt Abbie's abode, and Andrew's and Augustus' appearance allayed Aunt Abbie's anxiety about Augustus' absence. Augustus abstracted air attracted Aunt Abbie's attention, and Aunt Abbie asked about Augustus' afternoon amusement. Augustus' animated account amused Aunt Abbie, also Augustus' anxiously asking about accompanying Andrew Arnold around Andover another afternoon. Aunt Abbie amiably assented. Aunt Abbie's assistant, Ann, arranged an appetizing array. Augustus' appetite appeased, Aunt Abbie arranged Augustus attic apartment, and Augustus quietly ascended. Aunt Abbie and Ann awoke, and Augustus, already awake and attired, appeared. After Aunt Abbie, Augustus and Ann ate. Augustus accompanied Aunt Abbie around, admiring all Aunt Abbie's arrangements, assisting Aunt Abbie and Ann, and anxiously awaiting afternoon, Andrew Arnold, and additional adventures at Andover.

A Gombstone Problem.

A man who went away from home some time ago to attend a convention of church people was struck with the beauty of the little town in which the gathering was held. He had plenty of time, and while wandering about walked into the village cemetery. It was a beautiful place, and the delegate walked around among the graves. He saw a monument, one of the largest in the cemetery, and read with surprise the inscription on it: "A Lawyer and an Honest Man." The delegate scratched his head and looked at the monument again. He read the inscription over and over. Then he walked all around the monument and examined the grave closely. Another man in the cemetery approached and asked him: "Have you found the grave of an old friend?" "No," said the delegate, "but I was wondering how they came to bury those two fellows in one grave."—Tit-Bits.

A Father's Story.

From the Evening Crescent, Appleton, Wis.

A remarkable cure from a disease which has generally wrecked the lives of children and left them in a condition worse than death, it would be preferred, has attracted a great amount of attention among the residents of the neighborhood of Appleton.

The story that of little Willard Crouch, son of Hilard D. Crouch, a well known and prominent citizen of the large paper mills in the Fox River Valley. The lad was attacked by a disease and his parents had given up all hope of his ever being well again when, as by a miracle, he was healed and is now as happy as any of his mates.

Mr. Crouch, the father of the boy, who resides at 1002 Second Street, Appleton, Wisconsin, told the following story:

He Grows in School.

"Our boy was absolutely helpless. His lower limbs were paralyzed, and when we used the tricycle he could not feel it below his knees. Finally we let the doctor go as he did not seem to help our son, and we tried everything. Finally my mother was visiting in Canada, where a friend of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People and I thought some.

"Our boy was now our boy had been on the sick bed for an entire year and helpless for nine months. In six weeks after taking the pills we noticed signs of vitality in his legs, and in four months he was able to go to school.

"It is two years since he took the first of the pills and he is at school now just as happy and well as any of the other children. It was nothing else in the world that saved our boy than Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People."

The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages, and that is Catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure now known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. INCREASE IN EXPORTS.

While the Imports for the Fiscal Year Showed Marked Decrease.

The bureau of statistics in its latest summary of finance and commerce, presents details of the imports and exports in the fiscal year ending June 30, 1898. It shows that the exports to all parts of the world increased both in manufactures and products of agriculture, and that while there was a great falling off in imports, the reduction was almost exclusively in manufactured articles and food products. Manufactured articles ready for consumption fell from $134,375,136 in 1897 and $145,274,039 in 1896 to $82,570,687 in 1898; articles of food and live animals fell from $245,166,197 in 1897 and $257,025,645 in 1896 to $151,480,011 in 1898, while articles of voluntary use, luxury, etc., fell from $83,098,976 in 1897 and $97,322,154 in 1896 to $77,452,561 in 1898. On the other hand, articles required by the manufacturers and classified as "articles in a crude condition for use in manufacturing," of which the 1897 imports were $214,916,625 and those of 1896, $209,368,717, amounting in 1898 to $264,543,819, forming in 1898 over 23 per cent of the total importations, while in 1897 they were but 28 per cent, and in 1896, 27 per cent of the total imports, showing a large relative increase in the proportion which these articles used in the domestic industries bore to the total importations. Manufactured articles for use in the mechanic arts formed in 1898 about the same percentage of the imports that they did in 1896 and 1897. The exportations of manufactures, which amounted to $288,871,449 in 1898, exceeded those of 1897 by $1[illegible], and those of 1896 by $80,309,271, while the products of agriculture exported amounted to $654,627,929 in 1898, against $583,471,131 in 1897 and $[illegible] 879,297 in 1896, the chief increase in agricultural exportations being in breadstuffs. The exportations of for year increased $180,356,694, and the importations of the year decreased $118,725,253, the comparison being made in each case with the preceding fiscal year, 1897. The following table shows the total exports and imports by the grand divisions in the fiscal year, 1898, compared with the preceding year:

COMFORTING WORDS TO WOMEN.

The Surgical Chair and its Tortures May be Avoided by Women Who Heed Mrs. Pinkham's Advice.

Woman's modesty is natural; it is charming.

To many women a full statement of their troubles to a male physician is almost impossible. The whole truth may be told to Mrs. Pinkham because she is a woman, and her advice is freely offered to all women sufferers.

Mrs. O. E. Layon, of 19th and N Sts., Galveston, Texas, whose letter is printed below, was completely discouraged when she first wrote to Mrs. Pinkham. Here is what she says:

"Dear Mrs. Pinkham:—I wrote to you some time ago, telling you of my ills, but now I write to thank you for the good your remedies have done me. I have used two bottles of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, three packages of Sanative Wash, and one box of Liver Pills, and to-day I call myself a well woman. I suffered with backache, constant headache, whites, sick stomach, no appetite, could not sleep, and was very nervous. At time of menstruation was in terrible pain. Your medicine is worth its weight in gold. I never can say enough in praise of it. I have recommended it to many friends. If only all suffering women would try it, there would be more happy homes and healthy women. I thank you for the change your medicine has made in me."

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and Mrs. Pinkham's advice, have saved thousands of women from hospital operations.

The lives of women are hard; whether at home with a ceaseless round of domestic duties or working at some regular employment, their daily tasks make constant war on health. If all women understood themselves fully and knew how exactly and soothingly Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound acts on the female organs, there would be less suffering.

Its End Hastened.

A colleague of mine tells me a story of a Scotch newspaper with which he was connected. A local celebrity was dying by inches. His biography was written, and in the early hours of the morning a printer's devil used to be sent across to ask for the dying man, so that the obituary might be thoroughly up to date. Morning after morning the boy asked the landlady the same question, till he got angry at having to make the fruitless journey. At last one morning he got despatches. "Is that man nearly dead?" he asked. "The poorer's aisin to press and we canna' wait only longer."—London Sketch.

GOLD BONDS

Payable semi-annually at the Globe Trust Co., Chicago, Ill.

These bonds are a first mortgage upon the entire plant, including buildings, land and other property of an Industrial Company located close to Chicago.

The Company has been established for many years, is well-known and doing a large and increasing business.

The officers of the Company are men of high reputation, esteemed for their honesty and business ability. They have made so great a success of this business that the bonds of this Company are rarely ever offered for sale.

A few of these bonds came in to our hands during the hard times from parties who had purchased them several years ago. We offer them in issues of $100.00 each for $80.00 and accrued interest.

For security and a large interest rate these Industrial Bonds are recommended as being among the best.

First-class bonds and securities of all kinds bought and sold.

Chickens Earn Money.

If you only raise enough to eat, you must know something about them, or more than most people know, or else you are a very exceptional poultry raiser for profit. Poultry Culture is a monthly journal for those who put a little money, and time, and energy in making a success of it as a pastime, but as a business. It usually profits by its twenty-five cents many times over, and many times many dollars for you. The publication is so plain and practical that it is easy to be able to detect trouble in the poultry yard as soon as it appears, and know how to cure it. Business will follow you.

It teaches how to detect and cure disease, how to feed for eggs, how to fatten, which fowls to save for breeding purposes, and everything, indeed, you need to know in order to make it profitable. Just purchase for instance the twenty-five cents in stamps.
