

CAJE

By Lenora Stein

What's the difference between a CAJE and a CAJE? Strange and redundant question, you might say, unless you are "with-it" when it comes to acronyms. CAJE, nationally, refers to the Coalition for Alternatives in Jewish Education, an organization founded over a decade ago which brings together the best and the brightest of Jewish educational endeavors through teachers, educators, publications, materials, conferences, outreach and networking. The Coalition's national conferences are highly regarded and attract those involved in Jewish education from every corner of the country. This year's conference will be held at West Georgia College in Carrollton, Georgia. We are fortunate to have such a prestigious meeting of Jewish educators in our geographic region.

So, what about CAJE? Locally, CAJE is the Carolina Agency For Jewish Education, a Jewish educational resource center located in Charlotte and founded in 1983. The CAJE Resource Center is one of a growing network of teachers' resource centers in large and small communities all over the U.S.

Why do CAJE and CAJE deserve mention together? National CAJE publishes a Jewish Teacher Center newsletter entitled "Networking". The most recent issue featured our local CAJE.

CAJE has the exclusive U.S. distribution rights for some exciting Jewish educational computer software designed by Kirschen, the Israeli political cartoonist of The Jerusalem Post. Contact CJE, 1727 Providence Road, Charlotte, N.C. 28207, (704) 366-1948 for details.

CAJE materials continue to circulate throughout the Carolinas and new items are being added.

The Carolina Agency for Jewish Education is a project of the NC Association of Jewish Men, funded through a Blumenthal Foundation grant.

If you move to Australia you cannot get The Charlotte Jewish News. But if you move locally or any place within the U.S., you may still have it sent to you if you let us know your new address before you move.

It costs us money every time a paper is not deliverable.
