Wood's Therapeutics And Pharmacology.

A Treatise on Therapeutics and Pharmacology, or Medical Medicine. By George B. Wood, M. D., professor of the theory and practice of medicine in the University of Pennsylvania, President of the College of Physicians, Philadelphia, author of Wood's and Bache's Dispensatory, &c.

The value of this treatise may be inferred from the high reputation which the author has acquired by his previous works. The publishers, therefore, confidently trust that it will at once attain a position equally elevated among the standard works on medicine.

The work is in two large octavo volumes, and in substantial sheep binding.

NOTICE!

To my Friends and Customers.

I HAVE just returned from the North, and I am now receiving my Fall and Winter Goods, and can assure I can please all who favor me with a call, both in quality and price. I have a fine assortment of Cloths, Cassimeres and Vestings, to be made to order, and to all I can sell at wholesale. Also a good stock of Ready Made Clothing and Furnishing Goods of the very latest styles. Hats, Caps, &c., in fact any thing wanted by gentlemen, can be found at the middle-district, corner Hotel and Store.

Those who attend trading the State Fair, and members of the Legislature, and every body else, are respectfully invited to call and examine my stock before purchasing elsewhere, as I think I can do as well, if not a little better than any body else, as my terms are entirely cash. My motto—small profits and quick sales. Don't forget to call at the same old stand, formerly occupied by J. J. Biggs & Co.

NOTICE!

U. S. LAND AND PENSION AGENCY.

TO all those for whom I have collected Land Warrants, less than 160 acres, I have the number and particulars of said warrant, and, by calling on or writing to me I can get each one an increase of pay; and to all the Soldiers who rendered 14 days' service in any of the wars since 1790 they, or their widows, or minor child or children, are entitled to land. They will do well to call at this Agency. I have the rolls for the State of North Carolina.

Also, all Widows of the Revolutionary War are entitled to land. Wagon Masters and Teamsters are embraced among the numerous Laws; and all those who think they have a claim are respectfully invited to call and have their claims investigated.

My terms are no charge, unless I succeed.—After 15 years' experience, I flatter myself that I understand my business, and all the numerous laws in such cases. Give me a call, and have your claims investigated before it will be forever too late.

Enlisted Soldiers, having located lands in Illinois and Missouri, I will pay the highest cash prices for them. I have the number, Townships and locations of several hundred in whose name they appear of record.

The highest cash prices paid for land warrants.

Singer's Sewing Machines.

THESE celebrated machines are in practical and profitable use in all parts of the civilized world. In all the various trades, and in sewing every sort of fabric either of cloth or leather, they have been fully tried and approved.—Sewing machines of other manufacturers often fail to work, but being strong, durable, and complete in construction and workmanship. A perfect sewing machine kept employed affords a clear profit of $1,000 a year, but no imperfect one is a source of constant vexation and loss. The entire reliability of our machines is one great reason for their unparalleled popularity.

SINGER'S MACHINES ALWAYS OPERATE PERFECTLY,

MACHINES FOR FAMILY SEWING,

of a dull and defective construction, are recommended by other manufacturers. Such machines are made to catch the eye, not to perform substantial work. The truth is, family sewing machines ought to be stronger than others, because they go into less skillful hands than those sold to manufacturers, and are used for a greater variety of work. The machines which have proved best for all other purposes must be best for family use, and they are Singer's. The speed of our machines has lately been doubled. No other can compare with them in quantity of work.

New machines of the latest improved style will be exchanged on liberal terms for old sewing machines of our own make, or for operative machines of other manufacturers. Local agents wanted to sell our machines.

N. B.—All persons desiring full information about sewing machines, can obtain it by applying for a copy of I. M. Singer & Co's. Gazette, a paper devoted entirely to the subject. It will be sent gratis. I. M. SINGER & CO.

IMPORTANT TO FARMERS AND MILL OWNERS.

THIS Machine received the first premium at the North Carolina State Fair, and warmly commended to the public as the best now in use in the State. Seven Hundred of them are now running in North Carolina, all of which are now in operation and have given the most entire satisfaction, in regard both to performance and durability, some having run six years, and perform as well now as they did at first, and have not been out of order one day. We have thrown out a different smut Machine to make room for this. They are warranted for five years, and delivered at the Mill any where in the state. Manufactured and sold by

SANFORD BABCOCK, DENTIST.

Office over D. C. Murray's Store,

OPPOSITE THE POST-OFFICE,

OF all the causes which gradually reduce the human system to the final termination of life, none are more generally or more constant and effective than those in the Teeth.

The Dental nerves are so connected with other important nerves to which have an intimate relation to all parts of the human system, that its various organs often suffer severely from nervous affection in all the teeth. The misuse of Dental Purgatives affords the most certain means of relief, and when judiciously applied, teeth may be preserved for life. S. Babcock will perform all operations pertaining to Dentistry, with the greatest care and in a scientific manner.

Treatment of Children's Teeth in different Diseases, operations for diseased Gums, Cleans and Plumes of the mouth. Artificial Teeth inserted from one to a full set, on Gold, Silver or Platina plates with or without gums.

The greatest care will be taken to render the expressive and peculiar natural harmony of the Teeth. Many persons fail in giving the natural character to the patient, in substituting the artificial Teeth, instead of harmonizing with the laws of nature, exhibit an unmeaning grimness, expression frequently resembling the character of some other person than that for whom they were intended. I'D FIND ME A GRAVE.

BY LIEUT. THOS. WILSON, U. S. A.

I'll make me a home, says the sailor lad,
In the ship, as she rides the wave,
I'll laugh when the ocean's raving mad,
I'll smile when the tempests rave.
Let the winds rave on, let the black skies frown,
For what care I now it be?
When the vessel's a wreck, I'll go down, down,
down,
And find me a grave in the sea.

I'll make me a home, says the soldier brave,
Amid battle and gory fight;
When the eagles in triumph above me wave,
I will shout with mad delight.
I could die so well on the battle-field,
My shroud of the star flag's fold;
On the spot where the trumpets of victory peal'd,
I'd find me a grave with the bold.

I wish not a home mid the battle's tide,
Nor life on the briny sea,
But I'd settle me down at my own fireside,
With her who is all to me.
I wish not a death in the battle's strife,
Nor a tomb in the ocean foam;
But I'd find when my heart beats its last in life
A grave near my fireside home.

MY STEED.

BY BY TERWIS

My steed, my steed, my gallant steed
He proudly steps as light as free
As swift as eagle's flight his speed
When lightly bounding over the lea.
With arching neck and flowing mane
His hoofs scarce touch the grassy plain

My noble steed—how bright his eye!
How startling in his thrilling neigh!
His head he turns to the sky,
And like a deer he springs away
And when his rider's near he hears
He paws the feathery darts his ears

My prancing steed, my prancing steed
How gallantly he bears me on!
Bounding each fence that skirts the mead
Not flagging till the goal is won
Over hedge and bank we gaily spring,
Lightly as bird upon the wing

And when our horse appears in sight,
His eager steps I scarce restrain—
He bounds along with pure delight
Tossing abroad his flowing mane
With lightning eye and thrilling neigh
Like a wild deer he darts away

And now, he pauses at the door,
Well pleased to be at home again—
His eye seems brighter than before,
And like a statute stands he there—
His proud neck drooped—his mettle spent—
And long mane flowing over his head

RARE GEORGETTE.—We lately stated that a gentleman who died in Buckingham county, Virginia, a few months ago, devised his entire property after his death that she destroyed his will, and devised his property equally between a brother, sister and herself. This rare and noble exhibition of the unselfishness of a sister's love is not unique. We know of one lovely parallel, and the New York Mirror says a similar case occurred a short time since in New Haven. A gentleman died there, leaving his estate, amounting to several hundred thousand dollars, to a married daughter, and cutting off his sons with a trifling sum. The daughter, with the full concurrence of her husband, destroyed her father's will, as in the above case, and devised her inheritance with her brothers, reserving to herself only one equal share. Legally, the property was hers, but not so morally; she could keep it only by wronging her brothers. Such instances of rapid triumphing over selfishness are indeed rare, and therefore the more deserving of praise. Public approbation, and the approbation of one's own conscience, cannot fail to attend conduct so magnanimous.

CARLYLE ON SLAVERY.—Mr. Carlyle is one of the few prominent English writers who believe a just and sensible view of African slavery. Even the ancient slavery of Britain is regarded by Carlyle as a thing not so excessively horrible and distressing. "Gurth," says Mr. Carlyle, "born thrall of Cedric, the Saxon, has been greatly pitied by Dryasdust and others. Gurth with a brass collar round his neck, tending Cedric's pigs, in the grades of the wood, is not what I call an example of human felicity; but Gurth, mark the sky above him, with the free air and limited finance and musings around him, and in him the certainty of lodging and supper when he came home—Gurth to me seems happy in comparison to many a New York and New England man of these days, not born thrall of any body. Gurth's brass collar did not gall him—Cedric deserved to be his master. The pigs were Cedric's, not Gurth's; he would get his pottage of them. Gurth had the incomparable satisfaction of feeling himself related indubitably, though in a rude brass collar way, to his fellow mortals on this earth.—He had superiors, inferiors, equals. Gurth is now 'emancipated' long since; has what we call 'liberty.'—Liberty, I am told, is a divine thing. Liberty, when it becomes the liberty to die by starvation, is not so divine."

THE MARRIAGE RELATION.—The great secret is to learn to bear with each other's failings—not to be blind to them that is either an impossibility or a folly—we must see and feel them; if we do neither, they are not evils to us, and there is obviously no need of forbearance; but to plunge the mantle of affection around them, concealing them from each other's eyes; to determine not to let them chill the affections; to resolve to cultivate good tempered forbearance—because it is the only way of indulging the present evil, always with a view to ultimate amendment. Surely it is not the perfection, but the imperfection of human character that makes the strongest claim to love. All the world mind approves, even envyings joined admire, the good and the estimable in human nature. If husband and wife estimate only that in each which all must be constrained to value, what do they more than others? It is infinitely of character, imperfection of nature, that call for the pitying sympathy, the tender compassion that makes each the comforter, the mender of the other. Forbearance helps to attain command over themselves. Few are the creatures so utterly evil as to abuse a generous confidence, a calm forbearance. Married persons should be preeminently friends, and fidelity is the given pledge of friendship. The forbearance here mentioned is, not a weak and wicked indulgence of each other's faults, but such a calm, tender observance of them as excludes all harshness and anger, and takes the best and gentlest methods of pointing them out in the full confidence of affection.

'A wag of a Kentucky, in a country court asked why is Judge —— like necessity?

The members of the bar quickly answered, 'Because he knows no law.'

A correspondent OF MISS TAPSCOTT.

After giving an account of the Christening Express affair, Members of the Commercial Establishments of the Savannah, closes the letter with the following interesting account of a visit to the Virginia Delegation:

"Andrew Hunter, Esq., of Jefferson county, stated that on leaving Richmond he made a proposition in the Virginia delegation, which he felt assured would be cordially and unanimously agreed to by every true son of the Old Dominion. He went on to say, that in the year 1852 a young lady from Virginia, born of highly worthy and respectable parentage, but who was an orphan in the truest sense of the term, having lost both father and mother, was secured by the most alluring fascinations, that the disease which has swept off so many of our race women, as Consumption, had fastened upon her fair and delicate frame. She was young, handsome, highly intelligent—indeed possessed every accomplishment which could render her an ornament to her sex, and the object of admiration with all who were thrown in her company. She repaired to the genial and balmy atmosphere of this city, and here in the hospitable roof of one of the most eminent citizens of Savannah, she found a home, and met with every attention and kindness that [illegible] severer from parents. [illegible] advice was followed, and she was temporarily placed in an open carriage and driven along a beautiful road, that gently winds [illegible] the banks of the river. But alas! [illegible] the bloom of her loveliness, [illegible] the lapse of her approaching [illegible] that the beautiful exclamation of the North wind seem to be [illegible] her eyes, and that the gentle and balmy breezes which are so peculiar to this climate, would soon cause to fan her cheeks, she ordered the carriage to be stopped on one occasion, and pointed out a spot near the banks of the river beneath a large grove of trees, where she desired her remains to be buried. In a short time after her spirit winged its way to realms above, and in accordance with her request her mortal remains were placed in the repose of the very spot designated by her in life. Her name was Sue Clary. Taylor. Her son that will be lightning be remembered by most in the Virginia delegation of the Express attending to these memories—see who was being put out of interest in life. There is no shade of any description to mark the spot, or tell the passer by who repose under the shade of that beautiful little grove, where her lovely form lies. Mr. Hunter, the speaker, stated there was now a large fund of Virginians, present in Savannah, that would cost again be collected on Christmas eve, which he predicted would contribute something to the expense of erecting a suitable monument to her memory. [illegible] The epitaph, which is simply the memory of a tribute to the virtues and amiable qualities of the deceased, was truly patriotic and affecting. It was literally responded to, and over $200 will be the purchase. The funds will be placed in the hands of Mr. Clement Evans, at whose residence Miss Tapscott died, and that gentleman will superintend the erection of the monument.

From the Boston Post, A Western Editor's Prayer.

[illegible] day.

[illegible] trouble. A painful destruction [illegible] consumed. The love of my [illegible] was rooted up in half an hour. At the next half month, [illegible] short dollar, and at the same time a one of the breakfast gave way, and down came Sally's hair like a flood in a mill dam broke away, carrying away half a dozen combs. One plunge of Sally's elbow, and my blooming beauty rolled within to the consistency and form of an after dinner napkin. But she had no time to boast. Now her cork-tackling began to slide over, partial at the throat, and away went a string of white beads, whizzing and rattling round every way you could think, about the floor. She fought fair, however, I must admit, and when she could fight no longer, for want of breath, she yielded handsomely, and her arms fell down by her side—those long, white, tiny arms—her hair hung back over the chair,
