Spoopendyke as a Sportsman.

"Say, my dear," said Mr. Spoopendyke, as he drew a gun from his case and held it critically, "I want you to wake me up early in the morning. I'm going shooting."

"Don't that too sweet!" exclaimed Mrs. Spoopendyke, as she admired her new dress and hat. "Where do we go?"

"I'm going down to the marsh, and you'll probably be able to hear from me."

"Why, what do you want to do that for?" inquired the wife.

"Why, that is a question I don't like to answer, but I suppose I must. I want to get a duck or a turkey or a rabbit or a fish or lobster, and I'm going to do it just as quietly as I can."

"Why, you can stick a house, or a cornfield, or a dog-gasted female idiot in there, too, if you want to!" snorted Mr. Spoopendyke. "Who said anything about a partridge? It's a cartridge that goes in there!"

"Oh!" ejaculated Mrs. Spoopendyke, rather crestfallen. "I see now. Where does the bird go?"

"He goes to night school, if he hasn't any more sense than you have," snorted Mr. Spoopendyke. "Look here, now, and I'll show you how it works," and Spoopendyke, whose ideas of a gun were about as vague as those of his wife, inserted the cartridge half way in the muzzle end, and cautiously cocked the weapon.

"And when the bird sees that he comes and pecks at it! Isn't that the funniest!" and Mrs. Spoopendyke clasped her hands in the enjoyment of her discovery. "Then you put out your hand and catch him!"

"You've struck it!" howled Mr. Spoopendyke, who had the hammer on half-cock, and was vainly pulling on the trigger to get it down. "That's the idea! All you need is four feathers and a gas bill to be a nightingale! With your notions, you only want a new stock and a steam trip hammer to be a needle gun! Don't you know that dod-blasted thing has to go off before you get a bird. You shoot the birds, you don't wait for 'em to shoot you!"

"At home we used to always chop their heads off with an axe," faltered Mrs. Spoopendyke.

"So would I, if I was going after measely old hens," retorted Mr. Spoopendyke, who managed to uncock the contrivance, but when I go for yellow birds and sparrows, I go like a sportsman. While I'm waiting for a bird," continued Mr. Spoopendyke, adjusting the cartridge at the breech, "I put the load in here for safety. And when I see a flock I aim and fire!"

Bang! went the gun, knocking the tall feathers out of an eight-day clock and plowing a foot furrow in the wall, perforating the closet door and culminating in Mr. Spoopendyke's plug hat.

"Goodness gracious!" squeaked Mrs. Spoopendyke, "Oh, my!"

Mr. Spoopendyke gathered himself up and contemplated the damage.

"Why couldn't ye keep still" he shrieked. "What'd ye want to disturb my aim for and make me let it off? Think I can hold back a charge of powder and a pound of shot while a measly woman is searching it through a gun barrel!"

"If that had been a bird, how nicely you would have shot it!" Suggested Mrs. Spoopendyke, smoothly. "If you should ever aim at a bird you'd catch him sure!"

"Oh! you know what I could do with your information about gunnery, you only need a wad in your mouth and a kick like a mule to be a mountain howitzer! If I had your intelligence on sporting subjects, I'd hire out for a shot tower. Don't you've spoiled the dog gasted gun!" And Mr. Spoopendyke, anxious for some excuse to take it back to his friend Spocklewottle, who loaned it to him, held it out and eyed his wife sternly. "You've ruined that gun," he continued, solemnly. "It won't ever go off again."

"Never mind dear," consoled Mrs. Spoopendyke. "It's been off enough and I'd just as lief have some clams as birds. You go to bed and we'll try and do without my birds."

"It won't go off again," repeated Mr. Spoopendyke, as he clambed into his couch.

"That is a ruined gun," and he turned his face to the wall.

Mrs. Spoopendyke slowly disrobed, having first turned a stream of water into the gun from the faucet, and betook her to rest. "It may go off again," she thought, "but it is does the neighbors will think the water main has burst," with which reflection she blew out the gas and Mr. Spoopendyke, who turned over like an earthquake and wanted to know if she thought she had done enough mischief without hammering him like a dod-gasted blacksmith!"

Demands of the Times.

We all ourselves a free people—We boast of our free ballot, Magna Charta and the like. But when monopolies of railroads, banks and such institutions sit at some organic centre and dictate monstrous tariff on all exports and imports, and when the administration is changed every four years and feels by past custom bound to make the most of opportunity; it could be but little if any worse to have a permanent head—or king, who sometimes probably would get rich enough and relax, and then take some pride in having a model government. But if the citizens of America now take any pride in electing the head of our government, either in State or Nation, there are but few who can discover the same fact.

Now we do not favor the idea hinted at, but is there no man now out of men, good enough, wise enough, and powerful enough, with sufficient patriotism to "tarse" these bands asunder?

Is it nothing that eighteen millions of people calling themselves free should be taxed at the discretion of a few capitalists, and they not in our section? Where is the point from which action must arise? Shall we look from the standpoint of railroad kings—already rich—consider and act favorably to their interest against ourselves, than their millions may multiply as we make them.

Or from the position of the people whose heads have been bowed already for twenty years? We cannot travel at reasonable rates. This is a drawback to business. All manner of freights pay exhorbitant rates. The money goes to build up distant oppressors. Doubtless legislation and the press generally will throw their influence against any system so tyrannous, since both are professedly for the enlightenment elevation and good of the people.

There is somewhere among our millions of Southern men, some one who could free us. If our politicians who can plan a campaign years ahead, were interested in getting up justice alleviating our sorrows through oppression, they would have a better text and not resort to mean whisky to buy votes. Our township, county and State conventions should exercise more courage and not be "bull dozed" into nominating contrary to their judgment.

Nominate men who cannot be bought or sold and many things will be remedied, but a pretention as guardianship, protection and investigation just for campaign effect, brings no relief. No true man would call the whole country together to witness a slight of hand performance. Let our patriots everywhere expose deceit and demand true men for office. And when we have a true man now doing his duty stick to him. Encourage him. Hold up his hands.

A Touching Incident.

Cincinnati Saturday Night.

One of the most touching things we have read in a long time is that story of a robber and a poor lone woman near Franklin Indiana.

The robber came to her house at night and demanded her money or her life. She hadn't much money or life either but she preferred giving up the former rather than the latter so she brought her store and placed it in his hand. He looked it over carefully to see that she did not palm off any twenty-cent pieces for quarters and facetiously told her that he would credit her with only 24 cents on the trade dollar chiding her for taking them for their face value. 'Haven't you anything else of value?' inquired the bold bad burglar, looking about the scantily furnished apartment, 'a child's bracelet, ring, anything will be thankfully received.' She had nothing more she replied with a sigh. A thought struck him. 'Your husband was a soldier, was he not?' She acknowledged that he was and killed in the war. 'Then he must have had a revolver,' he continued searching her countenance. 'Ah, you grow confused, you stammer, your manner betrays you. Get that revolver at once and give it to me.' In vain the woman implored him to spare that harmless tr
