TRIMMING FOR POLITY.

Suffolk Herald.

The votes of the Democrats in Congress for the "Dependent Pension bill," was nothing more than trimming for the soldiers' votes, resorting to the unwise policy of using the public funds as bait to catch votes at the next national election. They could not believe that any public necessity or private claim, binding upon the government, demanded that they should have made that reckless appropriation—they could not find in it a principle whose maintenance was essential to the public welfare—hence no demand of duty could be assigned as a plausable reason for their action. It was simply in the interests of claim agents and to promote selfish considerations, by helping themselves to higher political positions. Such legislation lowers the tone and dignity of the legislative branch of the government—impairs the moral sentiment of our politics and engenders a spirit of truckling to popular prejudices and individual influence—as unmanly as it is derelict to the demands of duty. Public men, and those discharging trusts of not so high sounding pretensions, will find, in the round of life, that the right is the best policy. That will give the satisfaction of duty well performed, which is far more valuable than the thrift which "may follow fawning" in the trial of a career of trimming and bidding for popular favor. Those before the public should speak their sentiments clearly and boldly, and, when called to vote, do so, not to make by it, but to do as they think best for all concerned. If all would do so, soon a healthier moral tone would dignify our politics, and usher in a brighter era for our country. Thanks to the good sense, the bold and manly independence, and Roman virtue of our President, this trimming and truckling scheme for the soldiers' vote has been consigned to the refuge where all schemes of claim agents and demagogues should go.

The Northern bound freight train which passed Asheville Friday was composed of about 48 empty box cars, being taken back to the E. T., V., & G., Road to which they belonged, for the purpose of being reloaded with bacon, meal and flour for this market. "That's the way the money goes."
