ONLY MEN AND MONKEYS

Draft Animals Over Some Obstacle in Swimming.

Man is almost the only animal that has to cross difficult obstacles of all kinds in order to reach his food. Some animals, considering their great power of time throughout which they have to make a living, have to cross difficult obstacles in order to reach their food. There is every [illegible] that the ancestors of the Arabian camel, which now [illegible] the sandy deserts of Arabia, in order to reach the oases, had to cross the Red sea. And the ancestors of the camel, of course, had to swim in order to reach the food on the other side. The Rhinoceros rhinoceros, which lives in Africa, is known to swim, as well as the hippopotamus, which lives in the water. Many animals, in order to reach their food, have to swim across streams, rivers, lakes, etc. The ancestors of the cattle, sheep, goats, etc., had to swim
