Effects of Blockade.

Blockade and blind tiger whiskey have caused much trouble many [illegible] things in this part of the country. The Wilkesboro Chronicle [illegible] most remarkable and serious [illegible] yet heard. Some time ago a local man while under the influence of too much blockade climbed the tower at Overlook one night insisting that he was an airship, and only the restraint of his friends kept him from attempting to outfly Curtiss, Lethaby and all the rest of them. Another to stop a train sat down on the track in the darkness, but was pulled out of harm's way. Still another went home and had the hardhead to start an argument with his mother-in-law. But The Chronicle says:

"Jim Anderson, known as 'Tub Jim,' tanked up with new brand of blockade moonshine last Sunday, went across Mr. Grant Hendren's pasture and got into a tussel with a bull and was gored almost to death. Reports Monday say that he is in a serious condition and is not expected to live."

Are Still Marrying.

Commenting on The New York World's statement that marriages are becoming more frequent, The News and Observer says:

"We are not yet too rich to marry, and loving couples still have the old idea that a woman is a "help meet" instead of what a modern man called her, a "help-me-eat." A correspondent of The World quotes Schopenhauer who thus defined it, "Marriage, a trap set for man by nature." He also gives this poem:

You must know, my dear boy,
That the dearly prized kiss
Which you snatch from the lips
Of a half-willing miss
Is sweeter by far
Than the legalized kisses
You give the same girl
When you've made her a—Miss.

He added, "finally change our national policy and confine protection and not free trade to the divorce courts."

Literary Gem.

The following excerpts taken from the report of a reception published in The Morganton News-Herald are so rich in their descriptions, so vivid in their portrayal of a festive scene, so, in short, after the manner of society editors that they are worth reproducing. The new school of journalism that is about to be started at one of the state universities should preserve them as a model for instruction of women who aspire to be society editors. After the preliminary details of the reception, the reporter says:

"Within the parlor those receiving were Mrs. Castix, handsome of person and of rare charm of manner; Mrs. Lavinia Sheetz, Miss Matilda Erwin, Mrs. Robt. Anderson and Mrs. P. T. Hague, the loveliest jewels in the casket of our esteem and love; Mrs. James R. Anderson and Mrs. Ed. Alexander, two of our deservedly popular and attractive younger women, and Mrs. Hollingsworth, whose versatility of gifts and graces endeared her at once the pride and joy of every refined and cultured circle.

"Such a grouping of spring, summer and winter, the morning, noon and evening of life, and a charm, a grace and dignity to the scene that made it memorable. A [illegible]

The Right Sort of Bait.

A Methodist Bishop was recently at dinner at the home of a friend who had [illegible] chemical delicacies. One morning the fishing accompanied by two young ladies, went out on the lake of catching some trout. An old fisherman, out for the same purpose, wishing to keep a friendly, called out

"Kerchunk' men, paid."

The bishop drawing himself to his full height, replied, "Hi there! I am a fisher of men."

"Yours got the right kind of bait, all right," was the fisherman's rejoinder.

Knew What He Wanted.

A Charlotte man, who happens to be an alderman with it received a letter from a typewriter concern the other day which contained the following query only: "Can't we send you that typewriter?" The alderman's fancy must have been lightly turning to thoughts more romantic than machines, for he answered very promptly: "If the typewriter referred to is a 'she' send her along, otherwise not." In a day or two he received the following reply: "The typewriter referred to in our former letter is 'it' and not 'she', and accordingly we are afraid to let it go forward. In other words we offer you a writing machine and not a talking machine.—Charlotte Observer.

Continue to Kiss in Texas.

With the doctors crying out in chorus, that is the crusty old doctors, that kissing is a dangerous thing, the very germ factory of disease, here comes along a Texas teacher with a kissing feature in her school. It's in the spelling class and if a girl misses a word the boy who spells it gets permission to kiss her, the results announced being that the girls are becoming poor spellers and the boys are improving rapidly, it being a case of 'I love my spelling book, but oh, you kisses.'—Raleigh News and Observer.

"A Leetle Too Far."

Isn't it time to call a halt? We recently noted that a New York doctor had induced hundreds to abandon all underwear as a means to health. Now comes Dr. Kellogg, of Battle Creek, Mich., and advises a return to fig leaves clothes. That is going "a leetle too far" unless a paradise can be supplied for all the Adams and Eves.—News and Observer.

Scouts Musings.

"The governor of North Carolina said to the governor of South Carolina, 'Nothing doing.'"

"Once in a while a man is too proud to beg and too honest to steal—then the only alternative he has is to go to work.

"People who get mad about what the paper prints about them ought to think of the things the paper knows about them and don't print and be thankful."—Cherokee Scout.

Weekly Nature Faker.

Our townsman, Mr. T. H. Peeram, furnishes the facts for a new chapter to the volume of snake stories. The other day there was picked up in an apple on his premises, in which there was a small round hole as if made by a worm. Upon cutting the apple there was a green snake about 8 inches long, coilly coiled within the apple. The snake is of an exceedingly poisonous variety and the fact that the apple is seeking a home in the apple makes it necessary that care be exercised in handling apples.—Mooresville Enterprise.

The following clipping from a Raleigh paper adds one more law to the code and its adoption is on the authority of a great moral leader. The clipping says:

"In appealing for some money living on the part of the man people Rev. Collin Hughes, archdeacon of the diocese of South Carolina, Sunday morning at Christ Episcopal church, elapsed automobiling, with "drinking, card playing, dancing and other alleged sinful frivolities." He had scarcely more than declared against the evil of rolling away one's time in an automobile than there was the familiar shout of times, innocently defiant "honk, honk!" as some auto driver gave the signal required by law in turning the Wilmington and Edenton street corner where the stately old church stands. It required heroic effort even on the part of the most dignified churchmen to repress a titter that would have appeared unseemly in spite of the great provocation."

LABOR DAY WILL BE GRIM JOKE THERE

States Steel corporation has a mill at Vandergrift but the workmen in the past have always repaired to a camp several miles outside of town where they celebrate the day. They have arranged to follow the same procedure this year.

BETTER IN NEW YORK.

NEW YORK, Sept. 5.—With no strike of consequence except that of the hatters in progress in Greater New York the Labor Day parade tomorrow will find more marchers in line and more of them with jobs than last year.

Approximately 45,000 workers with forty bands, representing fifty trade unions of the Central Federated Union, will parade from Central Park down Fifth avenue to Washington Square.

In the afternoon will be games, athletic events and speeches all over the city.

John Mitchell, second vice president of the American Federation of Labor today contrasted present conditions with those of a year ago.

"From personal observation and general information" he said, "it is evident to me that more men are employed today and that more are being employed than at any time during the last twenty-two months.

"Last December the estimate made by the American Federation of the number of organized workmen of the United States at that time put the figure at one million, or about thirty-two percent of the whole."

ACTORS ON STRIKE.

CHICAGO, Sept. 5.—Labor Day in Chicago brings one unsettled strike in the building industry, uncertainty in the street car situation and a strike on the part of the vaudeville actors employed in the five and ten cent theaters. Twenty could houses which have refused to sign the scale of the new actors union will be affected. The [illegible] scheduled for tomorrow will neither be [illegible] in those houses in any [illegible] that it is expected that about [illegible] men will march.

THREE ARE DROWNED FROM LAUNCH IN COLLISION

Two Others Narrowly Escaped After Being Carried Under Scow.

NEW YORK, Sept. 5.—Two young women and a man were drowned in the North river today when the gasoline launch Olga, hugging close to the sheltering Jersey shore to escape a stiff northwest wind, was struck amidships by a freight carfloat bound out into the river from a [illegible] slip. Six other passengers were rescued.

The dead are: Catherine Moore, twenty-five years old; Anna [illegible] nineteen; Stephens, Weehawken.

None of the three lost was [illegible] heard from after the launch struck.

Nellie Higgins and Frank Mangiere had a hard fight for their lives. Neither could swim and both were carried under the float by the tide.
