[This matter must not be reprinted without special permission.]

The American Swineherd is authority for the statement that hogs are much subject to constipation, a condition that is a prolific cause of the diseases from which they suffer.

It isn't a bad sign at all that retailers report a considerable increase in the sale of horse blankets during the past year or two. There is no gain along any line in allowing high priced horses to shiver in zero winds without covering of any kind.

Owing to the drought of the past months and the light fall of snow it will be well to keep an eye on the strawberry bed to see that the mulch has not blown off, for it is the thawing and freezing of the late winter that play hob with the strawberry bed.

When holding corn for a higher price it is well to keep the fact in mind that it loses one-tenth of its weight in the first eight or ten months after picking. Besides this, account must be taken of spoiling, if it was not dry when cribbed, and possible damage by rats and mice.

There is no profit in paying long prices for either pure bred live stock or poultry if they are to receive indifferent, scrub care after they have been brought to the place. Scrubs have become inured to this kind of treatment and will do better under it than pure breds.

Chickens are subject to tuberculosis, and bacteriological examination shows that from 10 to 28 per cent of the flocks in different countries are affected with the disease. These facts should cause the owners of flocks to be suspicious when fowls get into an unthrifty condition.
